Making people happy through her work

Local artist not afraid to change things up

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset artist Tina Watson, who displays and sells her work at Hingham's Artisans in the Square co-op, has been interested in art since she was a child.

"When I was 10, my babysitter introduced me to art. She took me out painting and to some of her art classes," Watson recalls. "She was my mentor."

In later years, Duxbury painter Jane Flavell Collins, who is a courtroom, landscape, and still-life artist, assumed that role naturally, an outcome of the two women's growing friendship.

Watson's primary interest wasn't always fine art, though.

After graduating from the Endicott College art program, Watson took classes at Massachusetts College of Art and Design and at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, with a focus on pottery.

When Watson owned Cohasset Hardware, which was in her family for years, there was a pottery shop upstairs,

Local students learn and give back

By Erin Dale

Local art students have the opportunity to train with a master artiste — and at the same time give back to their community.

Artist Shelli Jones Manuel, a painter, author and musician who runs the Harps, Tea and Me gallery in Cohasset, is providing internships to young artists, teaching them college-level skills and helping them find ways to contribute to society as a whole.

Using the same curriculum she taught as the Master Artist at Large at Oklahoma's Oral Roberts University, Manuel is helping to equip students with skills they will use in art school and beyond.

This year, Manuel's interns – three seniors from

When Legos meet robots

Team enters state competition

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

If anyone should ever doubt that Cohasset students are a bright and creative bunch, they need to see what these kids can do with robots.

This month, the Cohasset Middle-High School robotics team finished their first-ever First Lego League (LLL) Robotics competition at Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

Cohasset's team, which was divided into two groups of 20 students, started training for their robot "mission" in October. Each group first competed in a regional qualifier on Dec 1, 2012.

According to CHS AP statistics teacher Laura Humphrey, who coached the robo-teams, the kids had to make three presentations at the competition: "an innovative solution to a problem faced by senior citizens, a spot test of their teamwork and core values as well as a technical presentation describing their robot design, programming, strategy and learning process."

The robots also competed against the clock and went head-to-head seven times throughout the day. One of the school's teams, Cohbots and Applesauce, earned the right to go all the way to the state championships by placing in the top 10 of their regional competition.

"The team of 10 students was again challenged to pit their design and programming abilities against the other regional winners," Humprey explained in an email. "Each robot had to be built from scratch and have it attempt to complete multiple challenges. Each challenge was valued at a various amount of points

Cohasset officers graduate from the police academy

The MBTA Transit Police Academy serves as one of the regional training grounds for police officers from the South Shore and Metro Boston area.

A group of Cohasset Police Officers attended the graduation of Police Officer Christopher Dias and Police Officer Anthony Truglia on December 18th at Great Hall located in Faneuil Hall/Quincy Market.

The graduation was the culmination of 26 weeks of police training at the MBTA Transit Police Academy campus located in Quincy. The MBTA Transit Police Academy serves as one of the regional training grounds for police officers from the South Shore and Metro Boston area. The academy staff is comprised of not only transit police officers but police chiefs, police supervisors, and police officers from surrounding communities.

The new officers' training included advanced first aid, CPR, firearms, patrol procedures, active shooter, emergency driving, domestic violence, courtroom testimony, crime scene, traffic enforcement, criminal law, criminal procedure, and many other areas. Additionally, the officers underwent physical training everyday, which included aerobics, running, weight training, and swimming.

Both officers have already started to work the street and are assigned to field training officers. Depending on the new officers level of experience, field training can last up to eight weeks. Deputy Police Chief William Quigley said "It's always exciting when we get new officers."

Two-vehicle accident by Gulf Station on 3A

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police responded to a two-vehicle accident by Leo's Gulf Station at 12:53 p.m. on Thursday (Dec. 20). Police said a 1999 GMC Sierra pickup truck, operated by a 56-year-old Scituate man, exited the gas station onto Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) to head south, when the operator of the vehicle in the northbound, right lane signaled for him to enter. But when the pickup attempted to cross over the inside lane, it was struck on the side by a northbound 2005 Ford Taurus, operated by a 32-year-old Scituate woman.

Both vehicles were towed and both drivers were transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. The Scituate man operating the pickup was cited for failure to yield, police said.

Protective custody

Police received three 9-1-1 calls on Saturday (Dec. 23) in the afternoon about a highly intoxicated woman who was going into various stores, stumbling around. Police caught up with the 47-year-old Brighton woman, who also has a Scituate address, on South Main Street in the village and took her into protective custody. She was held at the station for about 12 hours until she sobered up, police said.

Larceny

A 32-year-old Beechwood Street woman called police at around 6p.m. on Friday (Dec. 21) when she realized the necklace she had seen that morning in the upstairs bathroom before leaving for work was missing.

The woman told police that she suspects either her daughter's nanny or workers from a maid service may have taken the necklace. Police said detectives are following up and conducting interviews.

Man with shovel

Police responded to a call from Joy Place last week (Monday, Dec. 17) about a black pickup in the neighborhood with a man who exited the truck and headed toward the cemetery carrying a shovel. The caller described him as wearing camouflage pants, black sweatshirt and black hat. The caller provided a license plate that came back to a pickup truck in Abington that was a different color. It does not appear that was the same truck, police said.

Teen dispute

Shaw's notified police last week (Monday, Dec. 17) after two teens approached a teenage worker and made veiled threats at the store. All the subjects were from Scituate. The manager asked a police officer to stand by when the teen finished work to leave for the day. There have been no further incidents, police said.

Intervention

Police went to the home where a 9-1-1 call had been abandoned at around 10:11 p.m. on Monday (Dec. 17). Police said a member of the family had called 9-1-1 after an intervention was tried on a family member who then took off. The Cohasset K-9 was unavailable so Scituate was called and located the individual who is now seeking treatment for addiction, police said.

Wrecker called

Police called for a tow truck at around 3:14 p.m. on Wednesday (Dec. 19) for a 2005 GMC Yukon that was disabled in the roadway near Cohasset Plaza. The operator was from Duxbury, police said.

Kate Stringer, 17, a senior at Hingham High School, shows off her artwork during her internship at the Harps, Tea & Me Gallery in Cohasset.

ART WITH HEART

Hingham High School – assisted her with the type of local artwork she usually does, taking photographs and turning them into stunning, lifelike portraits. The girls attended local horse shows and took photos of the equestrians with their horses, then turned the photos into works of art; they did the same thing at Cohasset's Holiday Stroll earlier this month, taking photos of children with Santa Claus.

One of the students, Maddy Valero, said that her internship has been an invaluable experience.

"I feel that it has thoroughly prepared me for art school and that I now have a strong foundation to build up from," said Valero. "I have learned many valuable skills, from drawing to how small businesses are ran."

The Mariner caught up with intern Kate Stringer, 17, in Manuel's art studio (located in Cohasset's James Brook Crossing center) one afternoon after school while she was working on some sketches. Stringer, who has been working on art at the studio since August, said that Valero is the one who told her about the internship.

"She recommended it," said Stringer, who has been working on both horse and Santa portraits.

Stringer will complete her internship in May, just in time for graduation. She plans on applying to several art colleges, including the Rhode Island School of Design (RISD) and Mass. College of Art.

"It's been really great," Stringer said of her time working with Manuel. "She taught me a lot of tutorial classes, how she goes through the process of putting the photographs together. It's been a good experience learning to draw people and animate."

Stringer said she and the interns also take some of the photos that are later turned into portraits. So far, the students have tackled portrait projects from several local events, including the Marshfield Fair, Briggs horse show in Hanover, Cohasset's Holiday Stroll, even pictures of kids riding carousel horses in Hull.

Manuel explained that what she teaches her students goes beyond the basics of drawing lines and grids; she said that at the high school level, most artists only learn how to draw grid work, "but that's only surface rendering." With Manuel, students learn how to realistically render the muscles under the face and the complexity of the eye.

"We do a lot of work on the anatomy of the face," the teacher explained.

Manuel called Stringer a talented, hard-worker with a great career ahead of her. She enjoys helping students like Stringer prepare for art school and, eventually, a career in the arts.

"I encourage people to be good in both academics and arts," Manuel said. "My heart was grieved when I met some young students in the Midwest who had no art training... so I decided to start an internship."

Another thing Manuel's students learn — how to be art entrepreneurs, creating and selling realistic, commercial artwork.

On the local level, Manuel's interns will soon create a mural at the Pizza Box in Hull.

The art teacher shows her student how to sketch a lifelike image working off of a digital composite photograph.

Shelli Jones Manuel instructs art intern Kate Stringer on how to best capture the image on the computer screen in sketch form. PHOTOS/ERIN DALE

The mural will be a composite piece featuring individual cubes that each will tell the story of a South Shore town. Each 24 by 24 inch square will be available for purchase, or someone can purchase the piece as a whole, said Manuel.

Manuel said that this exercise will prep her students for a career in mural painting: "They can make a lot of money."

In addition to cultivating entrepreneurial skills, students are also becoming young humanitarians. Manuel plans to take her interns on a mission trip to Peru to paint a government hospital wall. In the past, she has taken students to Jamaica, where they created a mural inside an orphanage that children reportedly fought over sleeping next to. Manuel said the local papers called it "The Wall of Hope."

The art teacher said that while she has "no idea" what she and her students will paint in Peruo, it will probably be "something colorful."

Another project Manuel is getting ready to unveil is a composite drawing featuring her fellow business owners in James Brook Crossing, including the owners of the Windsor Tea Shop, Platinum Spike Toy Store, and Cohasset Candy.

While she has only worked with Hingham students so far, Manuel hopes to open the internship up to students from other area schools, including Hull and Cohasset. She said that she recently met with Cohasset Middle-High School principal Carolyn Connolly, who was enthusiastic about the idea.

To learn more about Harps, Tea & Me, visit the gallery in James Brook Crossing (1 Pleasant Street, Suite 7, Cohasset) or call 508-364-6797. Portraits are available for purchase; call for an appointment or email Shelli Jones Manuel at shellijm@aol.com to inquire.

Local artist Shelli Jones Manuel and her art intern, Kate Stringer, put the finishing touches on a sketch they've been working on together.

which when added up at the end of two and a half minutes helped them attain their score."

At the state finals, Humphrey said that the team beat its previous high score by over 90 points and the placed 31st overall, out of over 400 teams participating in the competition this year. They were also the competition's number-one scoring rookie team.

Most of the team attended last week's School Committee to show off their cool project; it's safe to say the school board members and crowd were sufficiently "wowed" by the presentation.

Throughout the demonstration, during which the robots the kids built moved all over a game board, Humphrey constantly referred to each kid as a "smart boy" or "smart girl." It was easy to see why.

The kids learned and executed programming skills, design, problem solving and, of course, team work.

Both Cohasset teams "built all the pieces, did all the programming, and built the robot themselves," said Humphrey. They also "came up with strategies to attack the board to get the most points possible" in the robot game.

The kids told proud parents and school board members during last week's presentation that they learned a lot throughout this process.

Thomas Guinee said he learned "what a group is," which he said is "respecting others, and never saying that they did bad."

Bryan Thomas, the team's "primary programmer," said he enjoyed having "a lot of freedom" with the robot building and design.

Nathan Arnold described some problems the kids learned to solve. "The old robot wasn't consistent; there were always human and mechanical errors." While the first robot helped the team earn over 200 points, Arnold explained, "It was more luck than skill."

Hailey Bestick said that her favorite part of the experience was getting to build with Legos, while David Hillman added, "I liked how it combined robotics and Legos."

Nathan said that, all in all, "I liked how everybody got along perfectly well and put their minds together and got it done."

Humphrey also had a favorite part of the competition: "I liked getting to know middle schoolers I didn't know at all. To watch them was absolutely astounding; I had so much fun."

School committee member Helene Lieb said that this is what it's all about, "taking knowledge and applying it." She added that she was happy to see both boys and girls learning about robotics.

The team would also like to acknowledge their mentors Jack Thomae and Jack Stanganelli who have tirelessly supported and encouraged them all season long.

Congratulations on a great a season and a huge thank you goes out to the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) for making this season a reality. We look forward to 2013 to see what the kids can accomplish.

ARTIST

and her for-sale paintings were displayed in the store window. (The store closed a few years ago.) "I built a big gas kiln in my backyard, and my mother was concerned that I would burn down the whole town, so I got out of that and started pursuing other avenues of interest," Watson recalled with a smile.

She wove baskets and crafted stained glass, and then about 20 years ago started painting. That has been her focus ever since.

More recently, she has been exploring encaustic painting, an old art form using heated beeswax to which colored pigments have been added. This liquid/paste is then applied to a prepared wood surface, canvas, or other material. "It's an interesting medium," Watson said. "It's a big job, but worth it."

Watson enjoys painting in her Cohasset studio on South Main Street and also at Artisans at 63 South St. in downtown Hingham when it's her turn to mind the shop.

Making felted scarves during colder weather is another passion.

She learned to craft the vibrantly colorful scarves from felt and yarn in a class she took in the South End.

Watson also does much work on commission. "I love plein air [outdoor] painting," she said. Her favorite scenes to paint in oils and acrylics are landscapes and seascapes. Her latest painting is of World's End. She started painting in watercolor and then branched out.

"I love seeing one of my paintings displayed in someone's home as part of their life," Watson said. "It's such a one on-one experience."

Good feeling

Occasionally a customer will come into Artisans, catch sight of Watson, and exclaim, 'I have a couple of your paintings and I love them!' There's nothing to compare with the good feeling such remarks evoke. I like to think that my paintings have brought a little happiness to their lives," she said.

Watson readily admits to getting bored with routine. "I like to change things up a bit!" she said. "I'm a 'color' person, and I like to try new things."

She is pleased to be part of the Artisans group, first becoming acquainted with Sandi Smith, another co-op member, at one of the Hingham Second Parish Church annual art shows.

Smith organizes the event every year. "Sandi asked me if I thought downtown Hingham would be a good location for the co-op, and I said, yes and that I would like to join!" Watson appreciates the camaraderie the artisans share as well as the warm, inviting atmosphere. "All the other artists are so nice, and I love the monthly First Friday events [featuring a particular artist]," she said. "Hingham Square is a very busy place!" Nothing pleases her more than selling a piece of her own artwork than selling another co-op members' piece. "I'm thrilled for them when that happens," she said.

Watson spends part of every day painting. "I'm possessed!" she quipped. "When I do a good painting, I'm on Cloud Nine!" The Co-op's supportive environment reminds Watson of the women's art group she started 10 years ago at South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

The group, dubbed "The Tuesday Painters," painted together every Tuesday night. This provided an opportunity to not only offer but to also receive helpful feedback on their work and to bounce ideas off of each other.

"Painting can be isolating, so doing it with a group of friends is inspirational," she said.

Watson also displays her artwork all over her own house. "I'll work on one of them, study it a bit, and then perhaps realize that I need to make some changes."

Watson gets her ideas from a variety of sources — occasionally from a photograph of a place where she was able to remain only long enough to begin the work onsite due to time constraints or weather conditions.

Humorous anecdote

She shared a humorous anecdote about a friend who had commissioned Watson to paint a large triptych — a series of three paintings intended to be displayed together — for one of her clients. "I shipped it to her house out-of-state.

Later it was featured in an interior design magazine, and I remember thinking, 'This is all wrong, the worst composition I've ever done,' Watson said. "And then I realized it had been hung wrong."

She called her friend the next day to tell her the piece hadn't been hung right and she was told that her client didn't know the difference and liked it the way it was. These are the kinds of stories that make her life even more interesting.

Another time, a set director for "Surrogates" saw her painting of a koi fish in the hardware store window and asked to borrow it as part of one of the movie sets. "As it turns out, they needed to keep re-shooting the scene, and this required me to keep shipping the painting back to Hollywood.

It would have been less expensive for them to buy the painting upfront!" Watson quipped. "So you never know what's going to happen next."

At least one thing is certain, though. "I've found that once I start painting, I can't stop," she said.

As if her career as an artist doesn't keep her busy enough, Watson is also an avid gardener who helps run the Cohasset Farmers Market.

EAGLE SCOUT PROJECT

Raising awareness about Strait's Pond

Derek Benson, a Cohasset Boy Scout with Troop # 28, has eagerly been working on his Eagle Scout Project to build two kiosks along the banks of Straits Pond, which borders Hull and Cohasset. With this project, he hopes to raise awareness of the Straits Pond environment and history.

Derek built and installed the kiosks with the assistance of his fellow Scouts and Eagle advisor, Dick Avery. The Straits Pond Watershed Association sponsored Derek's project and gave their initial approval of his written plan. To complete the project, Derek prepared a budget that would cover building materials and legal newspaper notices that announce meetings with the Conservation Committees of Hull and Cohasset.

He needed to raise close to $700, so Derek wrote a letter to the Community Garden Club of Cohasset about his project idea. Because Derek's project dealt with environmental concerns and the health of Straits Pond, the club voted to donate funds they have raised from the recycling of ink cartridges at the Cohasset Transfer Station.

For decades, the 94-acre salt pond was plagued with midges and algae plumes that made it uninhabitable for wildlife and negatively affected the neighborhoods around the pond.

Finally, in 2010, the decaying tidal gates, culvert, and bridge at Four Corners, where Hull, Cohasset and Hingham share borders, were restored and an environmentally sound area was successfully created. Derek's kiosks will add a learning environment for visitors who come to Straits Pond to enjoy the hiking, fishing, kayaking, and bird watching that are all a part of this now healthy habitat.

Derek hopes to have the Eagle Board of Review process completed in January. The board will examine his badges, his community service, and finally this Eagle Service project. Final approval will be his last step to becoming an Eagle Scout.

GIMME SHELTER

Teddy needs a special family

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Some people make resolutions for the New Year. Others make a commitment. Well, Teddy is one special little guy who needs a home with a loving owner or family who can make a special commitment to him.

Teddy came to us a frightened and timid little boy. It has been a period of give and take, earning trust, and being very patient with this cute kitten. He craves love and affection, but needs time and the love and understanding of a special person to bond with so that he can finally live a happy and contented life.

Play with Teddy and he is right there ready to pounce on a wand toy, chase a ping-pong ball, or a laser light. This play and exercise is a great way to become his trusted partner and it is like team building with him.

Being young, Teddy is willing to interact with other cats, but in the shelter, his roommates are older and not terribly interested in becoming his best buddy. In a family, he would probably do well with older children who could take time to develop one to one trust and love with him and be the buddy he needs. Giving him time to adapt and know he is loved and safe will be the start of a fabulous life for Teddy.

When he is lounging on the cat tree, Teddy loves petting and chin and neck rubs. This is when he shows just how much love he has to give. Purring begins and he gets comfy and stretches out and rolls over for more. This is the beginning of his comfort zone as you get to know him.

While he isn't a lap cat at this point, and only wants short periods of being held, it is endearing to see Teddy learning and realizing just how wonderful his life can be. A loving home is essential though.

This handsome little tiger and white mix kitty is 6 months old, short haired, and will be medium sized when he is full-grown. On is right cheek, Teddy has the cutest little brown freckle that you can't miss, and when he is watching you it is a curious, expectant stare.

On is right cheek, Teddy has the cutest little brown freckle that you can't miss, and when he is watching you it is a curious, expectant stare.

Being shy, Teddy will need time to warm up to you, but he is such a fun little guy and with someone who is willing to provide a peaceful and loving environment where he can get close and build a forever relationship, he will have the best chance thrive. His new year, and many more to come, would be just perfect. If you have time and lots of love and patience, someone very special is waiting for you!

This past weekend brought some of the most generous and caring donators and supporters to our door during Saturday's Open Hours. For some it is an annual tradition, and the mountain of supplies, food, bedding and toys for our cats and kittens was bountiful. These caring people choose to buy "presents" for our feline residents rather than each other or themselves. It is such a heartwarming expression of caring and concern for the kittens and cats in our care. We can't thank you enough and are thrilled by your spirit of giving.

Every cat and kitten's life is made better.

The bottle and can bins have been full as well, and contained some added gifts and surprises this week as well! Our appreciation goes out to all of you for taking the time to think of us and come by with your donations.

To all of those people who have received our newsletter and sent in donations, many thanks and please know that we are forever grateful for your generous support.

A very Happy New Year to all of our dedicated volunteers and to our family of adopters and foster parents who continue to give of your time and effort in the care of our shelter animals. May 2013 be a wonderful year for all!

Paula J. Fatersik is a board member and volunteer at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Ready...Set...PLAY!

SU D'AMBROSIO

Now that Christmas is over I am going to miss watching my favorite holiday movies with my family. Not only does the movie put us all in the holiday spirit, it puts us all in the same space and provides some quality "together" time. My kids and I have our favorite quotes and scenes memorized. My all-time favorite scene is from the move Santa Clause 2: The Mrs. Clause. It is the scene at the faculty holiday party where all of the teachers are miserable and clearly attending because they "have to" until Scott Calvin (played by Tim Allen) uses his magic to provide Secret Santa gifts for everyone. These are not the typical office party gifts of candy, wine or Christmas kitsch, but toys from everyone's childhood. The party immediately comes to life as the toys remind faculty members of their youth, and they can't wait to open them up and start to play. This is a big hit, everyone is laughing and enjoying themselves and the party is saved!

Su D'Ambrosio is director of programs and curriculum for South Shore Conservatory.

Every Christmas I make sure that there are at least one or two games we'll all enjoy under the tree, so that we can continue spending time together in a fun way. With so much of our lives busy running to this lesson and this meeting, it's wonderful to have a little unstructured time to hang out and just play for pure holiday enjoyment. I look forward to playing with my kids and even with grown-up family members and friends. I am convinced that the adults have more fun with their kids' toys than they do!

Besides bringing families together, toys and games give us a framework for play. While kids use their great imaginations to make play out of anything (pot lids make great cymbals), or even nothing (look at my pretend dinosaur), we adults need a little help. Toys become props for our imagination, and games, with their rules and structure, appeal to our competitive nature. Even electronic toys can be interactive and involve the youngest and oldest members of the family in a virtual sporting event, creative arts activity or mind challenge. The true magic of the holidays happens in the days that follow, as we use our new gifts to play and connect with each other. If we are lucky, we can keep it going throughout the year with regular family game nights or by making sure you always bring a game or two to family gatherings.

My colleague Elaine and I always keep a game of Bananagrams handy for when we need a little relief from the stress of demands and deadlines. In addition to being a fun diversion, we find that taking a few minutes to stop everything and play a game can actually make our time afterward more productive. It's like a coffee break for our minds! We have also encouraged others at SSC to join us and, when they do, the reaction is always the same. It is always a good use of time to have fun and connect with each other. We at South Shore Conservatory hope you will be able to enjoy this magical time with your families and friends and make time for play, and we wish you all the best in the 2013!

Su D'Ambrosio is director of programs and curriculum for South Shore Conservatory. She lives in Plymouth with her two daughters, Maria and Rosa, and dog Bernie whose favorite game is Fetch, Chase and Tug of War!

OUR VIEW

Celebrate, but be safe

This Monday, Dec. 31, is New Year's Eve, a time to celebrate the year gone by and the year to come.

And those celebrations often involve alcohol, and with that the potential for driving home after having had too much to drink. It's obviously illegal, but it's also dangerous and unnecessary.

According to 2010 statistics cited by the Centers and Disease Control and Prevention at cdc.gov, 10,228 people died in alcohol-impaired driving crashes, accounting for 31 percent of all traffic-related deaths in the United States.

And the problem isn't limited to adults over the legal drinking age of 21; according to a Liberty Mutual insurance survey of almost 2,300 high school juniors and senior cited on the USA Today website (content.usatoday.com) at the end of 2011, one out of 10 teenage drivers admit to having driven drunk on New Year's Eve, making it the worst holiday night for drinking and driving, ahead of July 4.

The story also states that the survey found 94 percent of teen drivers would stop driving under the influence of alcohol or marijuana if asked by a passenger and 87 percent of teen passengers would ask one of their peers to stop driving after drinking. That's good, but no passenger should be put in a position of having to ask — teen or adult.

It has always been wrong, and dangerous, to drive drunk. There have always been warnings, but to use the founding of MADD in 1980 is a jumping-off point, there is even less excuse for anyone approximately age 40 or under to drive drunk, since the whole of their driving experience has carried with it the constant message not to drink and drive.

What makes drunk driving so needless — and sad if someone does end up dying or injured from it — is that there are ways to avoid it (some of these are based on tips from State Farm's learningcenter.statefarm.com website):

- Don't drink at all. That's the easiest one. No sober person has ever driven drunk.
- Pick a designated driver. That's also a pretty easy one, as long as the driver sticks with it. Also, if you pick a designated driver, buy sodas for him or her. (Hingham establishments provide free soft drinks for designated drivers through the Hingham Police Department Designated Driver Program).
- Take someone's keys if they've been drinking. Maybe they'll get mad, but better mad for a while than in jail or dead.
- Call a cab or some other way to get home if no one's in any condition to drive.
- Provide alternate drinks and plenty of food if you're throwing a party, and keep an eye on your guests. Look out for them, including calling a ride for them if they can't do it themselves.

No one knows what 2013 has in store, but let's make sure everyone's around for it. Don't drink and drive.

Happy New Year.

SCHOOL NOTICE

Coordinated Program Review coming

Barbara Cataldo, Superintendent of the Cohasset Public Schools was informed by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education of an upcoming Coordinated Program Review that will be taking place this school year. As part of this Coordinated Program Review, Department staff will visit the district during the week of Jan. 22-25. Such visits are routinely conducted by the Department to satisfy federal and state requirements for the periodic review of specific education programs and services in schools throughout the Commonwealth. The Department is reviewing several programs during a single visit in order to use Department and school staff's time most efficiently and to encourage strong connections among the programs.

The Department's Coordinated Program Review will address the following programs: Special Education and English Language Education. After reviewing school district procedures for these programs, a Department team will make its onsite visit, during which it will review individual student records, interview administrators, teachers and paraprofessional staff, survey parents and observe instructional spaces. After the onsite visit it will prepare a report for the superintendent and school committee, with detailed findings for each program.

Using a scale of ratings ranging from "Commendable" to "Not Implemented," the report will rate the implementation of each requirement reviewed by the Department. Where requirements are found not implemented or only partially implemented, the district must propose to the Department corrective action to bring those areas into compliance with statutes and regulations. Districts and schools are encouraged to incorporate the corrective action into their district and school improvement plans and professional development plan. The school district will be provided with technical assistance from the Department in developing a corrective action plan. Both the Department's report and the corrective action plan are public information and will be available to the public upon request.

Any member of the public may request to be interviewed by telephone by a member of the Department's visiting team. Those wishing to be interviewed should call the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111 no later than Jan. 4 to leave their name and phone number, or they may call the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education at (781) 338- 3733. A member of the visiting team will contact each person desiring an interview within two weeks after the completion of the onsite visit. If an individual is not comfortable communicating in English or requires some other accommodation, the Department will make arrangements to communicate appropriately with the individual.

NATURE (HUMAN AND OTHERWISE)

Wheelwright Park in Cohasset is the gateway to a set of interconnected open space areas. PHOTO/KEZIA BACON

Cohasset's Wheelwright Park

The South Shore is home to many places such as these. Some small, some large – all offer a worthwhile diversion.

KEZIA BACON

Consider your routines. On the roads you travel with some regularity, are there places you've always intended to stop, but never have? Do you pass signs for parks and conservation lands, little dirt parking areas that give no indication as to what might be down the paths leading away from them? The South Shore is home to many places such as these. Some small, some large – all offer a worthwhile diversion.

Years ago I had a part-time job in Cohasset Village. If I happened to be heading north after work, I almost always left town via Main Street, where I would pass, but never stop at, Wheelwright Park. The large wooden sign over the entrance indicated that the site had some significance, but somehow I never got around to exploring it.

I'm making an effort lately to visit conservation areas like these – parcels I pass while riding my bike, or at night, or when I'm heading someplace else. Now I'm going back – on purpose, during the day, when I have time to see what there is to see.

Wheelwright Park in Cohasset is the gateway to a set of interconnected open space areas. The parking lot, at the end of a gravel drive, offers immediate access to the park itself, as well as the Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary. There is also a Boy Scout campground within hiking distance, a skating pond, a picnic area, and the large and diverse parcel known as the Cornelia & Richardson White Woods, which is part of Holly Hill Farm. Some of the trails, originally put in place by the WPA, date back to 1935.

Altogether the parcels comprise more than 200 acres of open space – a little bit of meadow, but mostly pine and oak woods, along with groves of holly. I visited recently with a friend and her dogs, on a sunny Sunday afternoon. Leashes are required in the parking lot, but otherwise, dogs are permitted to run free, as long as they are kept under control. Trooper and Little Foot enjoyed our visit immensely. We encountered a number of other dogs on our route, most off-leash.

First we followed the main trail, a wide cart path that winds its way to the second entrance, at Forest Avenue. Along the way were occasional giant boulders – glacial erratics – large enough to make me stop and think about how they got there. The boulders, which have been in place far longer than any manmade structure, remind me that great sheets of ice once covered the land. It was the receding of these glaciers that carved our present landscape – the hills and valleys, the riverbeds and ponds. The glaciers also dropped the occasional boulder . . . thus in Wheelwright and its environs you'll find such behemoths as Big Tippling Rock, Little Tippling Rock, Split Rock, and the Devil's Chair.

The cart path traverses hilly terrain – not too steep, but enough to get one's heart pumping. There are also assorted, narrower trails that lead off in either direction. After following the main trail all the way to Forest Avenue, we backtracked to the signs that marked the entrance to White Woods. I wished we'd brought a map – there were so many options! Instead we followed our instincts and enjoyed several additional, well-marked trails, some that traversed small streams.

Like most nature parcels, Wheelwright Park is open from dawn to dusk, yearround. There is no charge for admission. Look for the entrance off North Main Street in Cohasset. Dogs and horses are welcome.

STM: Woes over warrant

MARTHA GJESTEBY

It was not the responsibility of a secretary or a citizen to make sure there were no errors after town counsel's report.

The items of article six were missing from the warrant. Town counsel had sent a complete legal warrant to the town manger. It was not the responsibility of a secretary or a citizen to make sure there were no errors after town counsel's report.

The town manager is solely responsible for a correct warrant. He was on vacation three weeks before the town meeting, which I learned of by an email.

As to the rest of the warrant per se I argued at an earlier meeting that it should be in October or November. The Mariner reported the same. Also seven days after the vote on the date, we should have opened the warrant for citizens' petitions. The Board of Selectmen and Acting Town Manager were remiss on this.

The warrant wasn't signed by the Board of Selectmen early enough for the printing I guess and if we had not signed it at all for the printing, Town Meeting would have been null and void and thus illegal. The town manager should have been on top of this.

In summary, any problems occurring with the warrant are the responsibility of the town manager alone.

We had a wonderful town meeting (Dec. 10).. Whomever you were supporting, on either side, it was a great debate all evening.

There was a decisive vote against the town manager act change. In a 4-1 vote, I being against, the Board of Selectmen should now take action on a RFP for a town manager.

Acting Town manager is just that and the present one is not qualified. The previous three town managers left for various reasons. The boards they served did not discuss goals enough except out of contract. A public discussion on immediate employment always sets the right tone for a new town manager. The public is aware that a team effort for good town government has started. All our board has to be involved not a shadow government.

As to the governance committee, they will propose additions or subtractions for the actual town manager act in the spring. We have to wait for their studied results.

Tort reform and the seventh amendment

SEAN AHERNE

There are a lot of misconceptions about tort cases. Medical malpractice and product liability are two of the main stereotypical "frivolous lawsuits" that ignited the movement for tort reform.

Most people know that the first amendment guarantees freedom of speech and the right to free press, the second amendment grants the right to bear arms, and following the recent Lincoln movie we are reminded that the thirteenth amendment grants all men equality before the law. However, the seventh amendment is often overlooked. The seventh amendment guarantees citizens the right to a jury of your peers in cases with monetary damages of $20 or more. This amendment is perhaps the most important legal protections Americans are granted under law. This right is central to the idea of American government.

Beginning with Ronald Reagan in the early 1980s, tort reform has been a major issue on the American political landscape. Tort reform restricts citizens' access to the courts in cases dealing with tort. Tort cases are civil court cases that deal with a harm that has been done to the plaintiff. In the 1990s, the U.S. House of Representatives and U.S. Senate passed a bill to reform tort law. At the time, then Democratic President Bill Clinton vetoed the bill. After the bill was vetoed, advocates for tort reform pursued the issue on the state level. This issue became a cornerstone of George W. Bush's run for governor of Texas in the 1990s. Bush successfully passed tort reform in Texas. Once in the Whitehouse, Bush made tort reform a major issue mentioning his desire for legislation in his State of the Union addresses in 2002, 2005, and 2006.

There are a lot of misconceptions about tort cases. Medical malpractice and product liability are two of the main stereotypical "frivolous lawsuits" that ignited the movement for tort reform. Plaintiffs won just 36.7 percent of medical malpractice cases and 33.5 percent of product liability cases. Keep in mind that these are only the cases that trial lawyers were willing to take to trial. Tort cases are not the certain win falls the American media makes them out to be. For those who believe that "frivolous cases" are on the rise it is important to note that between 1985 and 2003 the number of tort trials terminated in U.S. district courts declined by 79 percent according to the Bureau of Judicial Statistics.

From the 1890s through the 1960s, major progress was made in the protection of workers and individual private citizens. Workers compensation, the Environmental Protection Agency, product regulations, Food and Drug Administration, and Occupational Safety and Health Administration have impacted the lives of every American. The way that many of these agencies were created was through tort cases. Today, mission statements of these agencies are frequently upheld through tort cases. The modern life style with well made products, edible food, and safe drinking water owes a great deal to tort cases. In a country where the Supreme Court has ruled that corporations, through the Citizens United decision, can contribute uncapped amounts of money to the political system, the judicial system gives the average American a fighting chance.

FOR THE RECORD

Far from peace on Earth this year

Peace on Earth probably doesn't seem possible to those in the community, and it's not very likely for the rest of us, either, as we struggle to come to grips with such a senseless tragedy.

GREGORY MATHIS

Peace on Earth.

You've seen that phrase on a lot of "holiday" cards this Christmas season and will likely hear it repeated on any beauty pageants airing on television if you subscribe to those stereotypes.

It's a nice saying and a noble sentiment, but doesn't it feel like we're so far from achieving it?

And that was before the events of Dec. 14 took place in Newtown, Conn.

Peace on Earth probably doesn't seem possible to those in the community, and it's not very likely for the rest of us, either, as we struggle to come to grips with such a senseless tragedy.

We've covered our share of tragedy, although it's safe to say nothing of this magnitude. Not when you're talking about the precious lives of 20 young children being taken so violently.

But tragedy isn't always measured in degrees. A tragedy just needs to affect one person or one family for it to be a tragedy.

Despite the popular notion that all reporters and editors are cold-blooded news hounds with no conscience, I can tell you that having to cover these tragedies has a deep impact on anyone who has to make a phone call to a family member or go to the scene of a horrific accident or crime scene.

We've had several in-house seminars with reporters and editors on covering tragedy over the years, although there's no Golden Rule for handling these types of stories. Each one is unique and offers its own set of circumstances and challenges. One thing is for certain, it is never easy no matter if it's your first story like this or your 100th.

But it is our job, just as it is for the daily newspapers and other major media outlets.

And if we've done our job throughout the years and have truly established deep roots in the community, our coverage will be comprehensive, sensitive and healing.

The Newtown Bee finds itself in the center of a national media storm we know all too well.

The newspaper's office is located about a mile-and-a-quarter from Sandy Hook Elementary School. A report on the Poynter Institute's website describing how the Bee was covering the school shooting tells of the associate editor hearing the call come over the police scanner. A volunteer firefighter, the editor fled from her desk and was one of the first to arrive at the scene. Conflicted, the editor snapped a photo from her car that ended up on the front page of The New York Times and was picked up by many other daily newspapers.

There will be a time though, when The New York Times, Associated Press and all the TV network news folks leave Newtown to chase the next big story. But the Bee will still be a mile-and-a-quarter from Sandy Hook Elementary and editors and reporters will still drive by it every day and continue to interact with members of the staff, students, families and community members long after the "story" gets bumped off the front page of the national papers.

There may not be peace on Earth this holiday season, but may those who senselessly died in Newtown, Conn., rest in peace and may those in the community find some peace.

BOYS HOCKEY

Icemen edged by Rockland

Cohasset rally falls just short

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset Skippers boys hockey team came up short on Wednesday night when they dropped an important league game to Rockland 4-3.

"Rockland is always a tough team to play," said Skippers' coach Bob Walsh. "They were in the D3 South finals last year, so there was no doubt we'd have our work cut out for us."

The Rockland Bulldogs scored three goals in the first period and it took a tough between period speech for coach Walsh to get his players back on track.

"We, (the whole team), completely lost focus in the first period. It started from the moment the boys left the locker room to get on the ice," Coach Walsh said. "Coach Johnson and I were standing on the bench commenting that they weren't ready to play as we watched them warming up. It's horrible when you see that happening... it's like watching a train wreck in slow motion and Mike Flaherty, (Rockland's coach), is too good a coach to not take advantage of that when it happens."

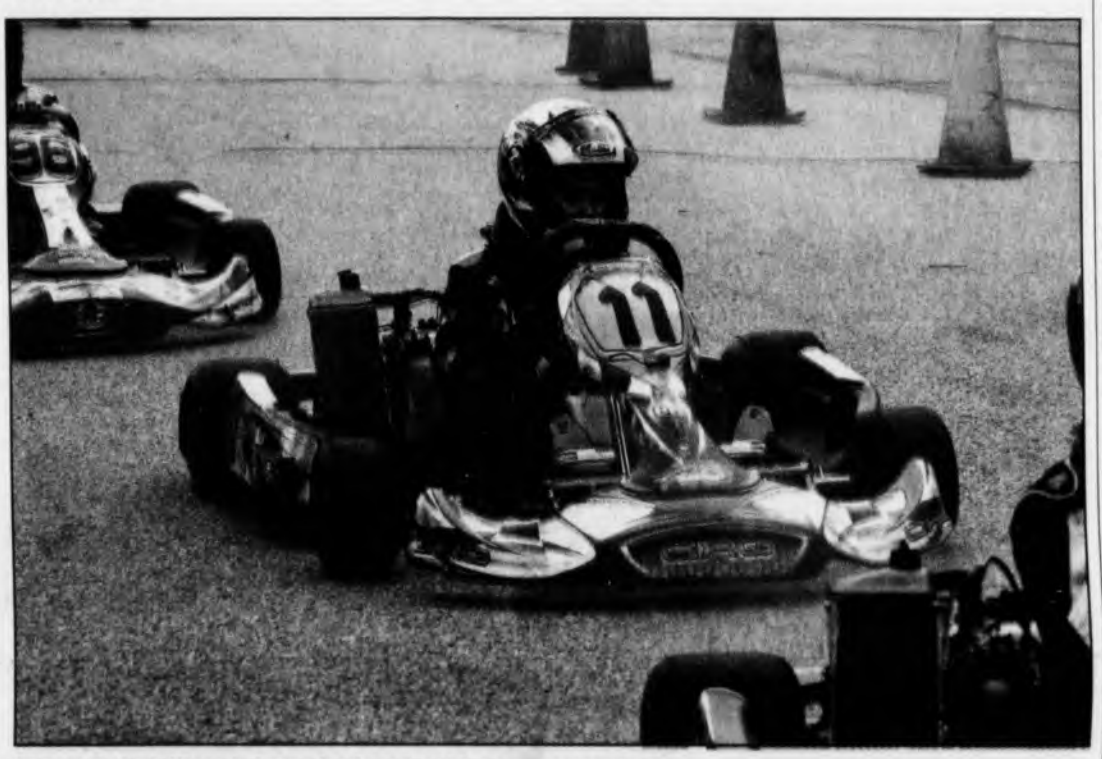
At the start of the second period, the intensity of the Skippers picked up, attacking Rockland goalie Trevor Trudeau with a barrage of quality shots and opportunities when at 5:20 of the period junior assistant captain Terence Doonan posted the first goal for the Skippers assisted by junior captain Chris Lund and sophomore Adam Benson.

A little more than one minute later on the very next shift, sophomore Jeff Powers scored assisted by sophomore Mike Lund and the Skippers were back in the game.

"These were the type of goals we talked about during the break, dirty, nasty, ugly goals. The type of gritty goals that Cohasset was never known for in the past," Walsh remarked.

At the 10:50 mark of the period, freshman defenseman Matt Legge scored his second career varsity goal and tied the game up assisted by Jeff Powers.

"With four minutes left in the period the Skippers were playing hockey like we practiced," responded the coach. "This was the way we're supposed to be playing hockey. This team has a lot of talent and it drives me crazy like fingernails on a chalkboard when I see what I saw in the first period.



"For the last several years, all of our games with Rockland have come down to the end. It's usually a tie game until one team makes a mistake and the other takes advantage of it."

The third period started with Cohasset on a power play.

"Unfortunately, the third period looked like neither team wanted to win the hockey game," remarked the coach. "We lost the intensity we

KART RACING

Kierce shines again

Local driver battles in F1 series

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset youngster Chris Kierce has been building a nice resume as a driver on the local F1 Kart circuit.

He started indoor at F1 Boston, and has since expanded to the outdoor arena.

There was some travel involved, but most of his exploits were at the F1 Outdoor in East Bridgewater.

After several years driving indoor at F1 Braintree, the 13-year-old, with dad, Paul, bought his own F1 race kart and just finished up driving in the spring/summer Junior Rotax series, a competitive series of practices and races similar to a NASCAR circuit season when it comes to standings and number of races for ages 12-15 racers in cars that can hit 70 miles per hour.

In the series, Kierce finished second in the standings out of 28 drivers who notched points, and had it not been for a mishap in the final two races, looked to wrap it up.

"It was a great year for Chris," Paul said. "His season reminded me of (NASCAR driver) Jimmie Johnson and how he had it locked up."

Johnson crashed in the second-to-last race of the year and had to retire in the last one due to mechanical trouble, leaving him third overall.

Kierce had a similar experience.

"Chris was three points ahead going into the last two races," Paul said. "Then he was hit head-on."

Chris explained.

"Toward the end I was getting close to one of the other drivers," he said. "He was in first, I was in first. Going into the pre-final race I was in first. I went to pass a kid, got around him and he bumped me. I was faced sideways and there was nowhere else for the kid to go."

Chris took the hit and had to be towed off the track; then the fun started.

"It was disappointing," he said. "I had to be towed off the track. I didn't know if I could get back on the track. The staff got me back on the track in an hour. The chassis was still bent. It was hard to steer. I came in again and they tried to bend the chassis."

When he was able to get back on the track he came from the back of the pack to second place, which gave him enough points to finish second

The four semifinal games in the South Coastal Hockey League all came down to the very end.

Harry Mathews of Duxbury scored at the 3:47 mark in overtime as the Classics Division defending champion Red Wings pulled out a 2-1 win over the Black Hawks to return to the finals, where they will face the Bruins.

John Guilderson scored for the Red Wings in the second period after Tony Rota had given the Black Hawks the lead with a goal in the first period.

Peter Fallon of Hanover scored two goals, and John Zimmer of Marshfield assisted on both of them in the Bruins 2-1 win over the top-seeded Maple Leafs. Scituate's Phil Spence and Mike Martin also had assists for the Bruins.

Dave Salvaggio scored the goal assisted by Marty DeCourcey of Rockland and Marshfield's Mike Maher for the Leafs.

The top-seeded Stingers in the Legends Division needed to go to a shoot out to win their game by a 2-1 score over the Sharks. Paul Smyth scored the deciding goal in the shoot out that the Stingers won by a 2-1 margin.

Pembroke's Scott Kelly scored in regulation for the Stingers, and Tim Cruz of Marshfield scored for the Sharks.

The only game that was decided by more than a one-goal difference was won by

COLLEGE BASEBALL IN PLYMOUTH

Hello, Pilgrims

NECBL will field a baseball team in Plymouth in 2013

By David Wolcott
dwolcott@wickedlocal.com

"America's Game played in America's Hometown. What could be better than that?"
NECBL President John DeRosa

PLYMOUTH – It's not the River Eels, but high-level baseball is coming to the town of Plymouth, after all.

The town recently reached an agreement with the New England Collegiate Baseball League for the brand new Plymouth Pilgrims to start play in the summer of 2013 on the lighted Babe Ruth baseball diamond at Forges Field.

"America's Game played in America's Hometown. What could be better than that?," NECBL President John DeRosa said Friday morning. "We are very excited at this opportunity to bring some of the top college baseball players in the country to the town of Plymouth. I think this is going to be a wonderful fit for the community as well as the league."

More information on the Pilgrims will be announced when League Commissioner Sean McGrath and NECBL owner David Dittman will be the guest speakers Jan. 11 at the Plymouth Area Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting. DeRosa said he expected to have information about the management team for the Pilgrims as well as possible player acquisitions at that time.

The wooden bat baseball league expects to play a minimum of 30 home games between June 1 and Aug. 10. The Pilgrims will open an office at 134 Court St. in Plymouth.

The addition of Plymouth, as well as new squads in Saratoga Spring, N.Y., and a yet-to-be announced team in Rhode Island, makes the NECBL a 13-team league. The NECBL has teams in all six states of the region as well as in New York. The closest rivals to Plymouth geographically are the New Bedford Bay Sox and the Newport Gulls.

Plymouth Selectman John Mahoney said the agreement is for one year with an option for another year after that as the town works with the league to find a permanent home for the franchise.

showed in the second period and Rockland came out flat as well. It was almost reminiscent of the Patriots game last week when they came back from a huge deficit only to lose it in the end.

"For about 9 and a half minutes it was the equivalent of watching the ice turn cold,"

It appeared that Bulldogs first liner, Andy Reardon woke up first and beat freshman goaltender Liam McHugh to put Rockland on top for good.

Cohasset is now 2-2 overall with a league record of 1-1.

"Our schedule this year is the toughest it's been in the six seasons I've been here at Cohasset. We wanted this schedule and Rockland was a huge contender last year and could very well be again this year," said Coach Walsh. "I push these guys hard in practice because they need to be pushed. I told them, at the start of tryouts that they're going to practice harder than some teams play because that's what this schedule calls for. These are the games we have to find a way to win. We have to show up for 3 periods of hockey. The second we lose our focus or discipline, bad things happen."

overall in the 144-race series that ran over 12 weeks of the summer.

During the series, he had 11 top-5 finishes, a third-place, five second-place finishes and two firsts.

The staff was from CRG America, the company that built the kart.

"He needed about 50 more yards," Paul said. "It was amazing watching him go from last place to second. When he was hit, it was in qualifying. He had to start in last because he didn't finish. Four guys rebuilt the car in an hour. The rear axle had to be replaced. The front end was out. The frame was twisted. He did four or five laps and still couldn't turn. He came back in and they said the frame was twisted. We had five guys standing on it and one twisting it with a crowbar. Watching him come back was incredible, picking off one guy and another and another. It was a good way to end the season."

During the year, Chris and Paul took a road trip to New Hampshire and raced at a kart track there.

Cohasset's Chris Kierce's F1 Kart was damaged during qualifying race on the final day of racing at F1 Outdoor in East Bridgewater. The kart was repaired in time for Kierce to come back and finish second in the series.

"They have a track at N.H. Motor Speedway," Chris said. "It was great."

With the season over, Chris plans on taking a short break from driving and concentrate on another favorite.

"I might do the same series next year," he said. "I'm thinking about doing the New England Series. I think I want to stay outdoor. For the winter I'm just going to play basketball."

"We're going to see how this goes for a year and then step back to take another look at it," Mahoney said Thursday. "The league generally draws a good crowd to each game, and maybe we can get those people to enjoy some of things Plymouth can offer before and after the games."

In return for use of the field, the NECBL will undertake several projects around the baseball diamond. Included on the list are improvements to the dugout area, the installation of a permanent game scoreboard, and temporary bleachers at the field.

The league estimates that more than 250,000 fans attended games last season.

"There are some franchises that can draw between 1,500 and 2,000 fans per game," DeRosa said. "The teams that are the most successful are the ones where there is a lot of community involvement with the program. We've got a great partner in the town of Plymouth, and we expect that this is going to be a great relationship for everyone involved."

DeRosa said the Pilgrims will immediately become a part of the community. A relationship will be fostered with the local youth baseball leagues, and players are encouraged to stick around after the games to sign autographs and mingle with the fans.

Local host families will be needed for the players, who will come to the league from across the country for the summer.

The NECBL was founded in 1993 and recruits some of the top college players in the country to play baseball in the league. Each team plays a 42-game regular season schedule for the right to move on to the playoffs.

Stephen Strasburg, Andre Ethier and Joe Nathan are among the nearly 100 NECBL alumni who have made their major league baseball dreams come true. Eighty-five players from the league were taken in the 2012 MLB draft, including first round selections Mark Appel and Pat Light.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JAN. 7, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Shutting people out to avoid distractions, even under a deadline, can cause hurt feelings. Instead, return calls and emails, and explain why you need a zone of privacy for now.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Although your keen Bull's eyes usually can discern what's fact from what's faux, that upcoming decision will need really solid data before you can risk a commitment.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) As your confidence grows, you should be able to work toward your goals with more enthusiasm. Open your mind to suggestions. Some of them might even work for you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Reconnecting with someone from your past stirs up that old sense of adventure. But before you do anything else, be sure to get answers to those still-lingering questions.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some people might resent the way you plan to resolve a difficult situation. But your commitment to making tough but fair decisions soon wins you their respect and support.

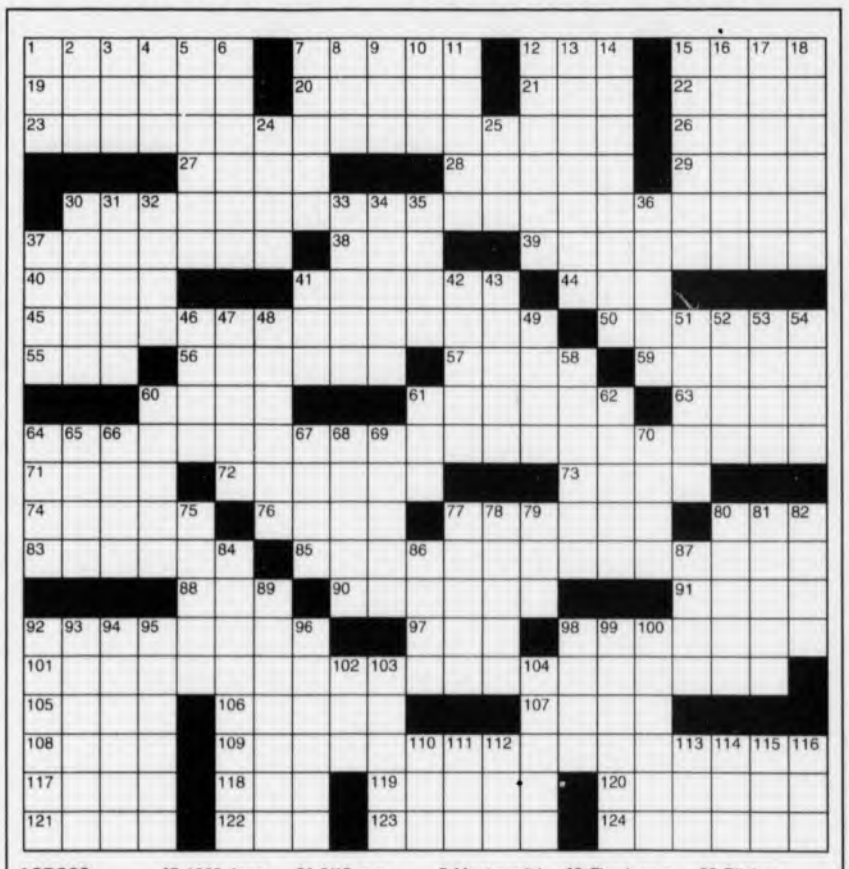
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Mixed signals could be causing that vexing workplace problem. Before you choose to leave the project, ask for a meeting so you can get things out in the open.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your good intentions could backfire if you're not careful with other people's feelings. Try using persuasion, not pressure, to get others to see your side of the situation.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your dedication to finishing the task at hand is laudable. But be careful not to overdo the midnight oil bit. Take time for relaxation with someone very special.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Although your intuition will help you make some tough choices in the first half of the month, you'll need more facts to back up your actions later on.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) All that hard work and research in the workplace finally pays off as you hoped it would. Ignore comments from jealous types who are out to get the Goat riled up.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unfair decision creates unnecessary problems. But avoid anger and move carefully as you work this out. Expect to get support from an unlikely source.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A fuzzy financial vista persists until midmonth, when things begin to clear up. You'll also gain a better perspective on how to handle those pesky personal problems.

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Tour of 'old' Town Hall

A story that will continue to make news in 2013 is the restoration of the "old" Town Hall. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski has made the restoration a priority for safety reasons.

Voters at the Dec. 10 Special Town Meeting approved spending up to $75,000 for a computer survey to study ways to renovate the historic building.

Brian Joyce, director of Project Management and Planning, recently led photographer Robin Chan on a tour of the building.

Brian Joyce shines a light on the inside of the roof from 1857 with its well built wooden trusses.

Brian Joyce checks out the renovations to the town hall to accommodate the trusses from 1857 during the expansion of the town hall in 1929.

Brian Joyce opens the door to expose the water damage that has rendered a bathroom unusable in the old town hall.

Brian Joyce looks at the windows of the town hall that are no longer aligned because of the expansion in 1929. When it was first built in 1857, the bottom windows lined up with the top windows.

Brian Joyce, director of Project Management and Planning, opens the jail cell during a tour of the original town hall, which dates back to 1857.

Brian Joyce holds exposed wires that were left when the old lines were cut when electrical work was done in the town hall.

Brian Joyce points to a disconnected flue for a furnace that is now allowing hot air from inside the building to escape the town hall. Currently, the drop ceiling is blocking the flow of air.

COHASSET: NEWSMAKERS AND SHAKERS

Who and what made the biggest waves this year?

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

For a small town, Cohasset sure has some big stories. Here is a list of just some of the year's biggest headline makers:

• Michael Milanoski

Cohasset's Acting Town Manager was appointed to his current position by the Board of Selectmen while they were determining the employment future of former Town Manager Michael Coughlin. Coughlin was ultimately let go, and Milanoski took the helm. Prior to taking on this position, Milanoski worked as an economic development consultant and was let go from his job as executive director the Attleboro Redevelopment Authority in 2009 (he won a lawsuit against the city in July 2012, seeking reinstatement and back wages). Milanoski served on two town boards last year – as the Governance Committee chair and an associate member of the Conservation Commission – but vacated those seats in March after being appointed town manager.

The acting town manager has developed a reputation for being quite the finance guy, working closely with the town's Finance Director, Mary Gallagher, to right the town's financial ship. Milanoski announced nearly $1 million in Free Cash, certified by the Dept. of Revenue this fall, but the funds were unable to be allocated at the Dec. Special Town Meeting due to a "clerical error" in the warrant.

A majority of the Board of Selectmen have been very vocal of their support of Milanoski during public meetings, and have published several press releases stating their support and their intent to keep him onboard as acting town manager for as long as possible. Milanoski is currently employed with the town through June 2013, but the selectmen are trying to find a way to extend his contract for another two years.

Town Counsel has opined that no one in the acting town manager position can become a permanent town manager, but selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that the board could seek a second opinion, or just decide for themselves whether to make Milanoski Cohasset's town manager for a long time.

Milanoski has hired several new town employees since taking the helm, including Chief Technology Officer Rob Bonnell (a position that is split with the schools); Director of Project Management and Planning Brian Joyce; Treasurer-Collector Jane Lepardo; and Board of Health Administrator Felix Zemel.

• Martha Gjesteby

At 83-years-old, Martha Gjesteby is an avid runner. The board member of the Cohasset Community Garden Club said that she runs a mile and a half every morning at 5:30. She's no stranger to running for political office, either.

Gjesteby bested former selectman Ted Carr for his seat on the May 19 Town Election. She had previously served nine years on a different board of selectmen, and has served on many other town boards, including the School Committee, Capital Budget and Planning Board.

Often the sole "nay" vote on the five-member Board of Selectmen, Gjesteby is known for speaking her mind during meetings and being a stickler for following the proper process. She has "blown the whistle" on the board on several matters, including the need for them to re-vote Milanoski's contract since it was not originally done in public session.

• Michael Coughlin

Cohasset's most recent Town Manager was fired after only six months on the job. The Board of Selectmen voted to remove him without cause in March, and appointed Milanoski to take the helm as acting town manager.

Coughlin's time as town manager was marred by conflicts between him and some town board members, most often clashing with the Water Commission. Coughlin took a team approach to running Town Hall, however, and made a point of going to battle for town employees. This landed him in hot water with the selectmen last winter when they discovered contractual changes, including raises and promotions, to around a dozen employees. Coughlin defended his actions, and addressed the selectmen's accusation that he "failed to communicate properly" with town officials, during a public hearing on his future employment.

Following his removal, Coughlin threatened and eventually followed through on filing a lawsuit against the town, naming four of the five current selectmen and Water Commission chair Peter DeCaprio in the suit. Coughlin is seeking reinstatement and is confident he will prevail in court.

• Police Chief Mark DeLuca

Cohasset's police chief was placed on paid administrative leave by Milanoski on May 25, nearly a week after the May 19 Town Election and two weeks after Annual Town Meeting (May 12). Both of those events became significant in the investigation into DeLuca, which began following a list of 11 allegations of misconduct by Cohasset's Police Union.

DeLuca stood before Town Meeting and announced that he was "dead set" against the police station going dark once the town moved its emergency dispatchers to the regional call center in Hingham, the South Shore Regional Fire Chief Robert Silvia talks with US Rep. Stephen Lynch before the Annual Town Meeting held Saturday May 12 at Cohasset High School. Following redistricting last year, Cohasset became part of the Ninth Congressional District. Previously, the town had been part of the Tenth Congressional District, whose seat was held by US Rep. William Keating. Lynch held off a challenge in the November election to win the rights to represent the newly drawn district including Cohasset.

POLICE BEAT

Disturbances lead the log this week

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

No recourse

A man, who now lives in Hull, went to the police station last week to complain that when he was evicted from his Cohasset apartment, the Sheriff's Department stored the contents, which remained unclaimed and were eventually auctioned off. Police said they do not believe the man has any recourse about getting his belongings back.

Gunshots, fireworks

Police received about six complaints on Christmas Eve, some from callers saying they could hear gunshots and others saying they could hear fireworks. Police said they could not find the source of the disturbance.

Domestics

Police responded to a couple of domestic disturbances on Christmas Day. At 12:03 a.m., a woman, 26, called saying her boyfriend was throwing things. Police said the couple was apparently having an argument over their relationship when the boyfriend threw a bottle of salad dressing at a kitchen door. The 29-year-old boyfriend left for the night; the girlfriend declined to seek an emergency restraining order.

At 12:40 a.m., police responded to another domestic incident involving a different couple. In this case the boyfriend allegedly threw his girlfriend down the stairs. The 46-year-old Cohasset man was arrested for domestic assault and battery and was held in custody over Christmas until he his arraignment on Dec. 26. The girlfriend, also 46, had bumps and bruises but was not transported to the hospital, police said.

Investigated

Police responded to a home on Beechwood Street on Wednesday (Dec. 26) after a caller reported hearing noises and thought there might be a breaking-and-entering in progress. Police said there was no evidence of a break-in or attempted break-in.

Computer issue

A concerned resident notified police last Wednesday (Dec. 26) after calling customer service at the computer manufacturer for help setting up his new computer. Police logged the complaint because the resident, who is 19, said the customer service representative asked too many personal questions including asking where he went to school. The caller was concerned that the customer service rep may have access to his computer.

Swan accident

Police received several concerned calls last Thursday afternoon (Dec. 27) over the course of about an hour about a swan on North Main Street near the ballfields. One caller was concerned a car would hit the bird and another reported the large swan was in their yard. Sadly the last caller reported the swan had flown into the power lines and had been electrocuted. Police said the swan flew into the higher power lines and then fell onto the cable and telephone wires below. The fire department responded and removed the swan from the wires. The accident knocked out power in the area. The resulting power outage caused an issue with the traffic lights at Pond Street and Route 3A (Chief Justice Cushing Highway), which had to be reset by the MassDOT. Police suspect someone in the neighborhood may have been feeding the swan and that was why the swan had been staying around.

Intoxicated

For the second time in two weeks, police responded to reports of an intoxicated woman in a store in the village. A call came in at 2:13 p.m. on Friday (Dec. 28) about a drunken woman in Tedeschi's.

This woman, who is 41 and from Leominster, Mass., was also taken into protective custody and remained at the police station for 12 hours

The week before, police received three 9-1-1 calls about an intoxicated woman from several stores. That woman is 47 and from Brighton.

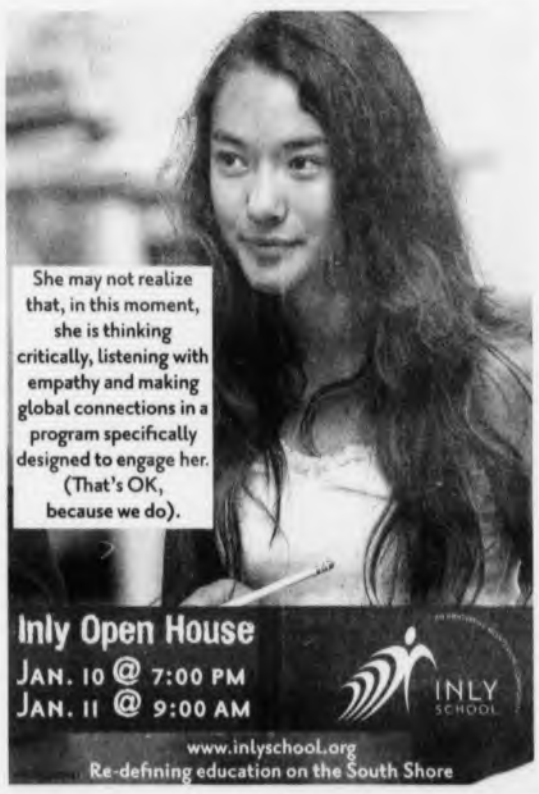
Vandalism

Police responded to the sports complex atop Crocker Lane on Friday (Dec. 28) on a report of vandalism to a 2013 Ford Explorer. The 51-year-old woman who called met police to show them that the molding or flashing around part of the windshield had been removed. Police said there were no witnesses and there were no surveillance cameras in the parking area.

Harassment

A 46-year-old woman from Cohasset is now the defendant in a criminal harassment case. Police are alleging that she has been harassing two neighbors in part because of their sexual orientation. The landlord of the apartment complex where they all live has also initiated an eviction process against the female due to her actions. All three will appear in Quincy District Court next week to give testimony before a judge.

Medication



The Cohasset K-9 unit and Hull K-9 unit were able to flush out an Aaalon man from the woods last week after his girlfriend called to report he had taken an overdose of medication. 2012 a look back

Stories that made headlines in 2012

As we look back on 2012 in Cohasset, it's time to reflect on the news stories that grabbed headlines this year.

Cohasset residents weathered winter storms, spring showers, and a Super Storm that – thankfully – caused much less outages and damage than 2011's Tropical Storm Irene.

We saw shake-ups in town government, including the removal of former Town Manager Michael Coughlin after only six months on the job, the appointment of Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, as well as the hiring of several new town employees – a new Treasurer Collector and new Board of Health Agent – and the creation of new positions of a Chief Technology Officer and Director of Project Management and Planning.

There were also several departures on both the town and school side, including the exits of former Principal Dr. Michael Gill, longtime music teacher Bryan Marks, and Technology Director Ken Cisneros, who each spent over 30 years working in the Cohasset school district (a combined total of 109 years!). Town Hall saw the exits of "Greenbush Guys" Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber and Board of Health Agent Tara Tradd, among others.

In one of the biggest news stories of the year, Police Chief Mark DeLuca was suspended with pay from May 2012 to Jan. 2013, following a list of allegations against him by the Cohasset police union; his contract will not be renewed when it expires at midnight on Jan. 24.

We heard talks of deficits, surpluses and spending freezes, and a large sum of free cash (nearly $1 million) at the end of the year that was unable to be allocated at the Dec. 10 Special Town Meeting due to an error in the warrant. We also saw Cohasset join neighboring towns, including Hingham, Hull and Norwell, in regionalizing our emergency dispatch center, and learned to deal with the possibility of a dark police station.

We've been here through it all, chronicling the major events and changes in and around town. Take a look back on 2012:

Library trustees express concern over recommendations for a fiscal year 2013 level-funded budget, saying the library's state certification could be at risk.

There's more on tap than water at Water Commission meetings as chairman Peter DeCaprio brings beer and soft drinks to share at what he described as an "informal gathering." The meeting, however, was official and was posted in accordance with the state's Open Meeting Law.

The NE Patriots head to the Super Bowl, where they lose to the NY Giants.

The School Committee presents a level-services fiscal year 2013 budget versus a level-funded one.

Plans are already afoot to plan for the sixth annual Field of Honor as residents and businesses are offered the opportunity to purchase flags for the event held over Memorial Day weekend.

Selectmen confirm the appointments of Chris Dias, Ian Hickey and Mike Lopes, the newest Cohasset police officers.

Cohasset's cable-TV studio has its first live broadcast since recent improvements were made to the system.

Avalon Bay has agreed to pay the town $17,000 that will help the conservation commission maintain the town's 15 raingardens. While Avalon will foot the bill, the maintenance of the structures will be under local control.

The Cohasset "national velvet" cupcake from Wicked Good Cupcakes is back in the news as TSA issues a statement that the cupcake was not your everyday run-of-the-mill cupcake but rather a cupcake in a jar. This apparently made all the difference in the decision to ban the cupcake form taking flight because it was too gel-like to pass security in Las Vegas.

Cohasset supports the town's new police K-9 unit holding a graduation party at Dooley's to celebrate the completion of K-9 Officer Patrick Reardon and his partner Erik's initial 16-week K-9 patrol training program.

February

Michael Coughlin, Cohasset's Town Manager of six months, comes under fire. More than 60 citizens pack the selectmen's office to hear the verdict on Coughlin, whose contract was discussed in executive session. Selectmen vote unanimously to suspend Coughlin with pay until they have a final vote in 30 days.

Genevieve Davis, a Norwell democrat, announces that she will run for the state senate seat held by Republican Bob Hedlund.

Selectmen vote to approve the Water Commission's hiring of its own legal counsel.

Commuter boat riders speak up as MBTA officials visit the Hingham Shipyard to hear concerns over proposed sharp fare hikes and service cuts to address its deficit.

The Water Commission advocates for a 20-year concession agreement over objections of TM Michael Coughlin who would like to see other options explored.

TM Coughlin, along with Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Police Chief Mark DeLuca, presents a five-point plan to tackle overtime issues in their respective departments. The chiefs say filling vacancies would lessen money spent on OT.

March

The Cohasset Housing Authority joins the Planning Board in taking a "no confidence" vote in the Board of Selectmen. The PB's vote was in reaction to the selectmen's decision to reject several employee contracts including their coordinator's contract. The HA's vote was to protest the selectmen's decision to suspend former TM Michael Coughlin.

Selectmen adopt a final resolution to remove TM Michael Coughlin without cause. Coughlin says he will file a whistle-blower lawsuit against selectmen and the water commission. He believes he was fired due to his opposition to the water departments RFP for a new water contract. Selectmen also vote to extend Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's contract to 15 months. In Feb., selectmen appointed Milanoski as ATM after Coughlin was suspended.

Veneta "Vee" Roebuck is named the Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year for her long-time service on the conservation commission and her dedication to the environment.

19 percent of Cohasset voters turn out for Super Tuesday, the presidential primary. President Barack Obama, who was unchallenged, won the democrat primary. Mitt Romney was the top vote-getter on the republican side.

The Cohasset Sailing Club decides to hold off on plans to seek community preservation funds for a new clubhouse at the annual town meeting. The sailing club returns in the fall at the special town meeting where voters approve their request.

Selectmen adopt a Code of Civility policy, an electronic communications and computer use policy and overall financial management policies on the recommendation of ATM Michael Milanoski.

Selectmen vote to designate the Governance Committee as special municipal employees, which would allow ATM Michael Milanoski to continue serving on the GC while also receiving a stipend as Acting Town Manager.

The town's health and recreation departments host the second annual Health and Recreation Fair.

Selectmen vote to enact a spending freeze after ATM; Milanoski and Finance Director Mary Gallagher report a structural deficit of more than $300,000. The freeze

The School Committee introduces newly hired Cohasset Middle High School Principal Carolyn Connolly, who officially comes on board in July.

May

The annual Town Meeting runs over two sessions, approving a Community Preservation Fund grant to restore the windows at First Parish Church despite arguments that the money would violate the separation of church and state. Voters rejected the Board of Health's proposal to ban cigarette sales in stores with pharmacies. During the first session, voters vetoed the meals tax along with a citizens' petition calling for restructuring of the water and sewer departments.

In an upset, Martha Gjesteby, 83, beats incumbent Selectman Ted Carr in the annual Town Election. She ran on the promise to bring some history and news ideas to the board to make government more efficient and open to the public.

Supporters of Police Chief Mark DeLuca show up at a selectmen's meeting after he was placed on paid administrative leave by Acting TM Michael Milanoski over allegations of misconduct from the police union. The estimate includes the cost of making copies, redacting and segregating the emails as well as paying for the time involved doing so. ATM Milanoski also sent resident Howie Altholz an estimated bill of more than $750 for his Public Records request for correspondence related to the First Parish Church window grant request. Altholz appealed that estimate to the Secretary of State's Office.

ATM Milanoski reassures concerned Cohasset citizens that the police station will not "go dark" once the dispatch service moves to the regional center in Hingham. He said someone would be working out of the station most of the time and the lobby would be turned into a "safe room" with a video monitoring system linked back to the regional dispatch center.

Emergency Call Center (SSRECC). At the Town Election one week later, police Sgt. Jeff Treanor was disciplined for displaying a banner on a police vehicle asking voters to say "no" to a dark station.

The 11 allegations the union filed against DeLuca have not been shared publicly, except for four general descriptions that Acting Town Manager Michael Milonoski wrote in his suspension letter to DeLuca: "Using your position as chief to secure benefits for which you and others were not entitled to; forging important documents; physical abuse; abusing your authority during an internal affairs investigation."

DeLuca told the press that all of the allegations against him were untrue.

DeLuca's three-year contract with the town expires at midnight on Jan 24, 2013. His current yearly salary is $136,000.

DeLuca started his law enforcement career 30 years ago in the Metro Dade Police Department in Florida before becoming a Boston cop in 1987. He became the Duxbury Police Chief in 1999 and was at that post for 10 years before his contract was not renewed in 2009.

DeLuca was selected for the Cohasset post from a pool of 80 applicants for the post. DeLuca replaced former Police Chief James Hussey. Deluca was hired at a salary of $111,000.

Deputy Chief William Quigley has served as acting police chief since DeLuca's suspension; Fire Chief Robert Silvia is overseeing the entire public safety department's administration and finances while Quigley and Assistant Fire Chief John Dockray are handling day-to-day affairs.

• Regionalized Emergency Dispatch and the "Dark Station"

A heated debate around town last year was what to do with Cohasset's police station once the emergency dispatchers were moved to Hingham's South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC).

Some were in favor of closing the station on nights and weekends, while others were vocal about doing whatever was necessary to keep it open 24/7.

Police Chief Mark DeLuca famously remarked at Town Meeting that he was "dead set" against a dark station, a comment that would become embroiled in controversy. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the station would have to go dark because the town could not afford to keep it manned 24/7, then later announced a compromise, along with Deputy Police Chief William Quigley.

Former Town Manager Michael Coughlin continues to make news in Cohasset even though he no longer works or lives in town. He is pictured here during a selectmen's meeting last May where the recent suspension of Police Chief Mark DeLuca was discussed. Coughlin is suing the town over his dismissal so he will undoubtedly be making more news in 2013. PHOTO/K.A. MACDONALD

After negotiating with the town's police union, the force must have three officers on duty at night and on the weekends (one in the office, two on the road) in order to keep the station staffed around the clock. This has required some flexibility and creativity on the department's part.

The police station lobby is also being turned into a "safe room," which required security upgrades, including a video monitor that links to the SSRECC. The large window in the lobby was removed and a smaller window installed on an adjacent wall.

The May 12 Annual Town Meeting voted to appropriate $100,000 to fund these renovations to the public safety building, which houses both the police and fire departments. The majority of the funds, $80,000, was allocated for replacing windows and doors and mitigate flooding in the basement; the remaining $20,000 is for the security upgrades. That amount doesn't cover all of the upgrades, however; Fire Chief Robert Silvia explained that the state 911 department gave the town a one-time grant of $70,000 to complete the necessary upgrades, including new security cameras and alarms.

• CPC funds and church vs. state debate

How to spend Community Preservation funds was also a hot topic this year, especially when it concerned a matter of church and state.

Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee (CPC) voted to approve spending $65,000 of their funds, which come from a 1.5 percent real estate tax surcharge with some level of state match, to restore the stained glass windows at the First Parish Meetinghouse, located on the town common.

Proponents argued that no building was more historical in Cohasset than the Meetinghouse, which used to house Town Meeting before the separation of church and state in the 1800s.

CPC chair Russ Bonetti often butted heads with resident and attorney Howie Altholtz, who spoke out against the project at CPC and selectmen meetings, as well as Town Meeting, because he felt the matter violated the separation of church and state.

The May 12 Annual Town Meeting voted in favor of funding the project.

• Algae in the Common Pond

Back in June, the town common's pond was looking less than healthy. Covered in algae blooms, the Mariner reported on townspeople's complaints on how the pond was looking. Town Hall jumped onboard to find out what the problem was and try to solve it.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski formed a "pond team" with Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research and Health Inspector, Felix Zemel, forging a new partnership when it comes to the pond. The group determined that the pond's water had an unusually high pH, which they attributed to new cement added to the pond during a restoration project last year. Another factor the group believes led to the algae growth was the pond's pumps becoming clogged.

The town's DPW skimmed the algae off the pond and drained it. CSCR students would continue to monitor the pond's pH up to the colder months.

• Drug busts

Cohasset attracted statewide attention this year following a marijuana and cocaine bust.

In June, police discovered 500 marijuana plants growing on town land near Wompatuck State Park. Deputy Police Chief Bill Quigley called this "guerilla farming."

In October, police broke up a cocaine ring that were delivering drugs directly to local clients' homes. Two men were arrested at the Cohasset Stop & Shop with 65 bags of cocaine stuffed into a potato chip can.

• Town technology

Getting the town and schools up to speed technology-wise was a big focus in Cohasset this year. The town and schools created a joint position of Chief Technology Officer, and hired Rob Bonnell in the summer.

Bonnell proposed a town tech plan that would cost around $250,000 to implement, including new computer workstations and security upgrades. The funds for this plan were supposed to come out of the town's nearly $1 million in free cash; however, due to an error in the Special Town Meeting warrant, the funds will not be able to be voted on until the Annual Town Meeting in April.

Supt. of Schools Barbara Cataldo is a major proponent of improving technology in the schools, overseeing the implementation of wireless internet in the schools and the addition of iPads in many classrooms since coming onboard in 2011.

The School Committee also supports getting the schools up to speed with state-mandated technology upgrades and will be exploring ways to do so in the coming year.

• Hollywood, Cohasset

Tinseltown and the Great White Way have nothing on Cohasset. Our little seaside town has long been known for its scenic views, beachy keen way of life, the home of many stars-to-be, and a place where Hollywood has turned its lens many times in the past.

Humphrey Bogart once graced the stage at Town Hall. Jack Nicholson, Michelle Pfeiffer, Cher, and Goldie Hawn have all filmed movies here in town.

Last year, an indie filmmaker shot a renegade horror film around town, controversially titled "The Cohasset Snuff Film." The director, Edward Payson, said he hoped the film would help put Cohasset "on the map."

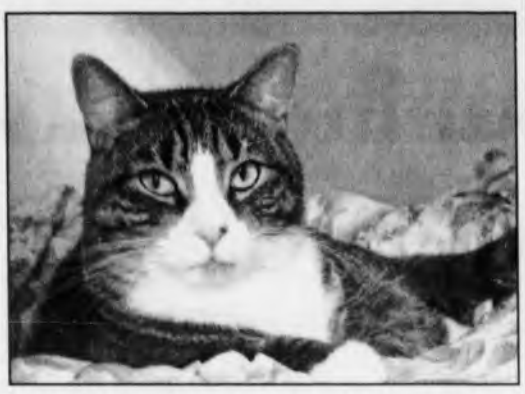
But Cohasset is already on Hollywood's radar — and has been for a long time.

Adam Sandler's production team scouted Cohasset as a possible location for the film "Grown-Ups 2" and were shown around town by Supt. Barbara Cataldo. They ended up going with Marblehead, but Cohasset was reportedly their second choice.

Teen pop singer Simone Cardoso, who hails from New Bedford, opted to film her music video for the song "Yes" at various locations around town this past summer, including JJ's Dairy Hut and in the harbor (yes, literally in the harbor).

In May, Celebrity chef Gordon Ramsay caused quite a stir when he stopped by the town common while filming an episode of his show "Kitchen Nightmares." Ramsay served clam chowder to curious Cohasseters out of the Hull restaurant Barefoot Bob's food truck.

A Cohasset woman's home was featured on the Cooking Channel this past November during an episode of "My Grandmother's Ravioli" with host Mo Rocca. Rocca came to Cohasset in June to learn to cook a New England shore dinner with Genevra Higginson at her Atlantic Ave. home.



In December, CHS alum Kevin O'Donnell starred in the off-Broadway play "Let's Kill Grandma This Christmas." O'Donnell's brother, Liam, is a screenwriter living in L.A; their parents still reside in town.

GIMME SHELTER

Buddy would make a great friend

Being at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is a wonderful temporary home, but for this young man a permanent home would be so much better.

Everyone needs a Buddy. Well, that is true enough isn't it? And whether it is a person or pet, we all need the steady friendship and caring that a buddy brings into our lives. It is this special relationship that our "Buddy" needs once more.

This handsome, male tiger has had a pretty tough holiday. When he and his loving owner had to move, they became separated, a situation that is difficult for both. For a young animal who is used to attention and love from one special person every day, it is a confusing adjustment. Being at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is a wonderful temporary home, but for this young man a permanent home would be so much better.

New to the shelter, Buddy has gone through his shy phase and is showing us his calm, loving and laid back personality. His tiger coat with white bib, belly and gloved paws are just right for the winter season. At about 5 years old, Buddy is a gentle, attentive and friendly boy, a perfect fit for a caring and loving forever home. He is happy to connect with us, play with and enjoy having fun with all the toys in his room, but it would be so much more special and comfortable in a home with a single or family where he can have constant love and attention.

We all make resolutions for the New Year, and Buddy is no different. His is a resolution that we hope will be successful. A home and family, love and attention. He will try very hard for that and guaranteed, he will probably be better than many of us at making it work! He's got a plan and just watching him and getting to know him, it is easy to imagine him comfy and cozy in a sunny window, curled up in a soft blanket, or beside his very own "buddy" forever. It is this cat's dream.

If you or a family member is interested in meeting and spending time with Buddy, please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information. Open Hours at Hull Seaside at 50 L St. are Mondays from 6:30-7:30 p.m. and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. You may also call and leave us a message at 781-925-3121 or check www.HSAR.org for more information on Buddy and other adoptable felines. We have many friendly and frisky young adults waiting anxiously for their forever homes.

Our Newsletter has been out for the past few weeks and we are very thankful to all who have responded with generous donations to help care for the kittens and cats in our shelter. Those who continue to support us with bottles and cans, know that we are busy packing them up and the returns help to cover our many expenses. We are a 501(c)(3) non-profit so every contribution made is tax deductible and goes toward making the shelter as comfortable as possible for out residents. Thank you to all who have supported our efforts for so many years.

As the winds are blowing, temperatures are dropping and sleet and snow have begun falling, winter is hitting hard and we know that there will be more kittens and cats who need shelter, food and warmth. Our mission is to help as many as we can. The shelter wish list is on the website, but dye-free adult food, canned and dry kitten food, clay litter, cleaning and laundry supplies are always in need. With these lower temperatures, fleece blankets and towels are always appreciated. It is a pleasure to meet those of you who come by during Open Hours to visit and drop off your donations. Again this past weekend we were fortunate to receive gifts and support.

There is a limited number of new 2013 Kittendales calendars still available at the shelter. We have almost sold out so if you have not had time to get a copy please contact us. This calendar is one of our best yearly fundraisers and it is great to see so many people enjoying it.

At Hull Seaside, volunteers are always needed and applications are available at the shelter. If you have a few hours to spare weekly, and are interested in helping with the care of our animals please call Nancy at 781-925-3638. Our group of volunteers have made the holidays just as special for the kittens and cats here as they have for their own families! Thank you for that!

We wish everyone a happy and healthy New Year. May 2013 be a wonderful one for all of us. Paula J. Fatersik is a board member and volunteer at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

OUR VIEW

The Old Man and the Kid

The Kid raced through the front door, hoping to chat with the Old Man, if only briefly, but no luck. The Old Man was already gone, and the Kid just missed him, if the slamming back door he heard was any indication.

"So here I am," the Kid said to himself as he looked around the room, craning his neck to see the stacks of books, one representing each year. "I wonder what I should do now."

Then on the table he saw two books. One had a pen next to it and was unopened and labeled "2013" — "Mine, I guess," the Kid correctly thought — and the other was opened the last page. As the Kid suspected, the book was labeled "2012," and he figured that it was left open because the Old Man wanted him to read it.

So he did.

"Dear Kid:

Welcome. Sorry I didn't stick around to talk, but when it's time, it's time. If it makes you feel any better, I had to figure things out on my own, too. You'll feel like you don't have a clue until about March, maybe April, and then it will come. Don't worry about it.

There will be times this year when you sit utterly stunned, shocked or whatever over the things people do to each other. It's not even that they'll kill each other — although the fact that they do and the reasons that they do will often move you to tears over the senselessness of it all, and I hope and pray you don't have to experience anything like what happened in Newtown, Conn. — but the way they treat each other, and the way they're almost casual about it.

Even if you just listen to the way people talk to and about each other, you will hear some of the most vile, hateful things you could imagine, and you'll wonder what could have possibly poisoned their minds to make them feel that way.

But even though you're probably feeling pretty lousy about humanity after reading that — and you just got here! — I didn't tell you that to bum you out. Actually, it's the opposite. What I want you to know is that no matter how horrible people can be to each other ...

... people are basically good.

There was a big hurricane, Sandy, and it killed a lot of people and damaged a lot of other people's lives. I wrote about it, so you can see what I mean. After it happened, people helped each other — people they didn't live near, people they didn't know, people who had different views of the world than they did. They helped each other because people needed help.

Yet even when there aren't disasters, if you look carefully enough, you'll see more instances of people being good to each other than you can possibly count, even if they don't seem that big — holding a door open for someone, giving up a seat on the train to a pregnant woman, a smile and a wave, a hug, a kiss, a kind word during a tough time, a "please," a "thank you," a "you're welcome."

People do those and more for each other all day, every day, without thinking ... because they're basically good. No, not everyone winds up being good, but everyone starts out good, and most everyone stays that way.

Keep that in mind when people make you sad.

Sincerely,

The Old Man"

COMMENTARY

Volunteer your time this year

RUSSELL BONETTI

We as a town have to put an end to all the recent negativity swirling around so many boards, and start pulling in the same direction.

This time of the year people make various resolutions about things they'd like to do, or not do in some cases, in the upcoming year. Most resolutions are broken by the end of February. Here's a resolution I'd like to see kept the whole year:

Volunteer for some of the many committees in town that have vacancies. Volunteers are the lifeblood of town's the size of Cohasset. If you're new to town, being on a committee is a great way to not only meet people, but an opportunity to contribute to the town as well. Some committees such as Planning, School, Board of Health, Board of Selectmen, to name a few are elected positions, but are still made up of people who are essentially volunteering their time. Most committees meet once a month, and then for only an hour or so. All these volunteers have personal and family matters to deal with just like anybody else in town.

The Board of Selectmen has a job that requires even more hours when you factor in that not only do they have more meetings of their own during the year than any other committee does, they also have committees they are the liaison to that takes up even more of their time. Some may say that the BOS members are paid for their time. That's sort of true, but consider a couple things. The members of the BOS are paid the princely sum of I believe, $1,000 a year, the Chairman gets a virtual Kings ransom of $1,500 a year.

When you figure the number of hours that are required of them, they could make a lot more flipping burgers, and selling fries. They don't do it for the money. But when you consider the abuse that gets heaped on them and other committees, and the various ulterior motives attributed to their efforts that they receive in the blogs and other venues you have to question their sanity. Could they actually be doing what they do because they care about the town?

The same is true of any board in town. It is a sad state indeed that when the town has such a need for volunteers, that there are so many people who don't "have the time" to get involved, yet do have the time to complain about those who do get involved.

All committee meetings are by law, posted 48 hours in advance. The full agenda of what will be discussed is posted as well. Holidays, and weekends are not included in the 48 hours notice required for postings. All meetings are posted on the Town website, so you don't even have to go to Town Hall to see which committee is meeting, and what topics will be discussed. All committees have time allocated to comments/questions from the public. While public comments are usually restricted to 5 minutes, most boards will accommodate anyone who feels they need more time. Take advantage of this. All committees are interested in any suggestions that may improve what they do. But please, take the time to attend, and be ready to say what you think should be done to improve the way a committee works. Complaining about what is wrong does no good unless you can offer suggestions on how to improve things. Far too many people do not take the time to attend, yet still find the time to question the motives of those who do.

This past year could well serve as the poster boy for incivility towards various groups in town. We as a town have to put an end to all the recent negativity swirling around so many boards, and start pulling in the same direction. To do otherwise is not just a disservice to the people who do take the time, it also hurts the town we all love as well.

Also, please take the time to go to Town Meeting. We are a Town Meeting governed town by our charter. Town Meeting can certainly drive you crazy, but again, if you don't go and speak up, don't complain about how things are being run. Things may not always go the way you'd like, but that shouldn't stop you from trying.

Resolute in my convictions, at least for a day

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

The way I look at it, I am a better person for not breaking promises than I am for not making resolutions.

Should old acquaintances be forgotten, and never brought to mind, should old acquaintances be forgotten, blah, blah, um, ah, blah, um, may Jimmy Stewart have a wonderful life, blah da da da, and curse you Mister Potter you crazy senile man... ... or whatever.

Auld Lang Syne is just one of those New Year's traditions that I never mastered. You would think after all these years I would know the lyrics, but alas another year has passed with me pathetically mumbling along on New Year's Eve. Which leads into another New Year's tradition I never mastered – resolutions.

New Year's resolutions, here's a practice that I threw the towel in on years ago. Why make a promise that you are only going to break a few weeks later? The way I look at it, I am a better person for not breaking promises than I am for not making resolutions. That being said, this year I figured I'd throw caution to the wind and give it another shot. So I present to you, my 10 Resolutions for 2013:

• Resolution #1: I resolve to get in shape. This one should be easy. Seriously, have you noticed the number of health & fitness centers in Cohasset? There's at least as many workout spots around town as there are pizza shops ...ah.. oh ... um ... okay... On second thought maybe this one won't be so easy, but while on the subject am I the only one who wishes one of these fitness places had a racquetball court?

• Resolution #2: I resolve to attend at least two town meetings. Typically, I am not one who watches any of those drama programs on TV, but the ongoing entertainment that seems to emanate from these meetings seems to be worthy of my time, plus I figure by attending I might gain a fighter's chance in figuring out what all these bloggers are complaining about.

• Resolution #3: I resolve to go to at least two of the Friday evening gatherings at Sandy Beach. I must confess, I am simply not a beach person and I haven't been down to Sandy Beach in some time. Sand, waves, the setting sun, good friends, refreshing drinks and of course the Nona's Ice Cream truck, I think I'll be successful with this one.

• Resolution #4: I resolve to do more to help the Food Pantry. Think Globally, Act Locally. We'd all be surprised on how many of our friends and neighbors need our help. Count me in as one who wants to help more. How about you?

• Resolution #5: I resolve to call her up a thousand times a day and ask her if she`ll marry me in some old fashioned way ... (Don't blame me for this, blame Gordon Sumner)

• Resolution #6: I resolve to go to at least 2 shows this summer at the Music Circus. I honestly think we are beyond spoiled by having such an amazing treasure in our backyard, although I would like to use this space to beg them to add either Harpoon IPA or Sam Adams lager (not summer) to their beer selection.

• Resolution #7: I resolve to try to keep this column positive and upbeat. There will be no unnecessary cheap shots taken. All cheap shots will strictly be of the necessary nature only.

• Resolution #8: I resolve to try a few more of the Cohasset dining establishments. I've pretty much got the ground covered when it comes to pizza, but some of the others need my attention. I just hope their beer selection is better than the one at the Music Circus but that the atmosphere isn't as loud.

• Resolution #9: Number 9, number 9, number 9, number 9 ... (Don't blame me, blame Yoko)

• Resolution #10: I resolve to not let the tragedy that occurred in Newtown to become a distant memory. I resolve to keep one eye on the dialogue and to let my Representatives know that as a citizen in their district that I'd like see meaningful reforms enacted.

Well that's it – 10 Resolutions, whew I'm bushed. Next year we'll revisit this list and at that point I am confident that I'll be able to present well thought out and creative reasons on why I missed on so many of these.

Thanks for reading and Happy New Year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Grateful for this special place

We are on our favorite path in Wompatuck, just a few minutes from our doorstep. This New Year's Day is a reminder of how fortunate I am to find myself at home in Cohasset. Starting out in the East New York section of Brooklyn, which despite its close proximity to Brownsville and Bedford-Stuyvesant, still offered the quiet open space of a neighborhood, the backyard gardens and the close knit families, everything that I treasure. Who knew that I would find that and so much more in small town Massachusetts.

The paths into the woods are so beautiful covered in snow. The icy entrance quickly fades as the woods warm the path and there are only wet leaves and patches of snow and ice below. An owl hoots and our dog is sniffing away at the herd of deer or lone coyote that have left their scents. Soon we will be down to the ponds and back over to the reservoir. Every time I'm immersed in the beauty of this natural refuge, I am grateful to have found this special place to live.

This morning we watched a muskrat from our window, swimming and diving for fish, enjoying lunch by the rocks. And if that weren't enough, just outside Beechwood, there is a sandy beach, marshlands and a harbor.

I am also thankful for the conservationists who came before me, leaders who preserved so much for us all to enjoy. The sun is shining in Cohasset and I am grateful.

Ronnie McMorris,
89 Doane St.

Thank you note from Newtown mother

The following letter was sent to Janet Campbell and her Project Linus Cohasset chapter. Campbell sent 21 blankets to the Sandy Hook community after her "Make a Blanket" day held at Atlantica. Jenna Connors is a mother and schoolteacher, whose two children lost a playmate on Dec. 14.

Dear Janet,

Words cannot adequately express my thanks and gratitude to you and to all at Project Linus Cohasset. The blankets that you sent to my children, Molly and Brendan, are beautiful and are constantly wrapped around them like a warm hug, providing comfort and security. I can only imagine the blankets you sent to other children in our community are doing the same for them.

Newtown has suffered a horrible tragedy and we are deeply saddened. But the overwhelming support we have received, the prayers and kind words spoken, and the kindness of strangers near and far have convinced us all that love will triumph. Thank you for the part you and your organization have played in helping us all heal. With love and gratitude,

Jenna Connors,
Sandy Hook, Connecticut

Hockey boosters appreciate support

The following is a thank you note from the Cohasset High Hockey Boosters.

On behalf of the 2012-13 Cohasset High Boy's Hockey Team, we are writing to express our sincere gratitude for your generous support of our student athletes who you supported over the past weekend during our annual "Book Drive" campaign throughout the Town. In addition to our terrific local advertisers who make our Annual Program Book possible, we want to thank everyone who made a donation at the Dump and during our neighborhood drive.

It is only through your support that we are able to fund the Junior Varsity Team, including ice time, uniforms, coaching, referees, and the multitude of expenses incurred by an Ice Hockey Program. Simply put, we don't exist without your help...and we thank you very much!

COHASSET WORKING DOG FOUNDATION

Applicants sought for Service Dog Grant

Cohasset Working Dog Foundation announced that it is now accepting applications for its first Cohasset Service Dog Grant. The grant will help pay for the purchase and training of a personal service dog for a Cohasset resident. A trained service dog can enable a child or adult with visual or hearing impairments, seizure disorders (epilepsy, cardiac seizures), mobility impairments or Autism Spectrum Disorder among others to enjoy a more independent, safe and enjoyable life.

The purchase, raising and training of a service dog often costs upward of $20,000, putting a personal service dog out of reach for many.

Grant applicants should have the ability to provide daily care for a service dog or live with an adult who will be responsible for its care. Food, grooming and regular veterinary care will also be the responsibility of the recipient or his/her family.

Applications will be accepted through Feb. 15. The 2013 grant recipient will be selected before the end of February and announced at the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation's annual fundraiser, which will take place Saturday, March 9, at Atlantica.

Application requests can be made by providing name and mailing address via email to Info@cohassetworkingdog.org or by mail to The Cohasset Working Dog Foundation, P.O. Box 45, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, call Trish Morse at 781-383-1622 or email info@cohassetworkingdog.org.

FOR THE RECORD

The future of journalism

GREGORY MATHIS

In addition to evolving our online strategy, we're coming up with best practices to reach out to our readers through social networks such as Facebook and Twitter.

Editor's note: In the spirit of New Year's (and me being on vacation), with resolutions and predictions running amok, here's a column that was written about a year-and-a-half ago, but is as relevant as ever as we begin 2013.

Don't let the headline fool you. This isn't some Nostradamus-like prediction that will revolutionize the field of community journalism. In fact what I have to say about the future of journalism reveals more questions than answers.

There's no doubt the landscape of the profession and industry has changed dramatically over the past five years with newsrooms across the country trying to figure out how to weave the World Wide Web into the newspaper culture. For some the change has been even more dramatic.

Flashback to 2004 — many newsrooms, including ours, had very little presence on the web. Someone from another department, in another building, posted a handful of the top stories on the website the day the weekly newspaper came out, and we patted ourselves on the back for a job well done. The journalists didn't pay much attention to the process. There was some computer magic that went on behind the scenes and presto; stories were available for the world to see.

Journalists had little clue whether anyone was reading their stories online and many of them didn't care. The print product, our newspapers, still ruled their world.

How times have changed.

Today, the newsroom controls the websites. Editors, reporters, photographers and editorial assistants are charged with producing content for the newspaper as well as our Wicked Local websites. Needless to say, it has been a pretty big transformation for our journalists and newsrooms.

And just taking our newspaper content and putting it on websites is not the answer. Our print audience has different expectations than the online audience and we want to grow and merge those audiences by giving them new reasons to pick up our newspapers and click on our websites. If we figure this out and do it right, our newspaper readers will look to our websites for multimedia presentations, photo galleries, polls, and more interactive content, and our online readers will look to our newspapers for content that is still best served in that medium, including investigative news pieces and features that are well designed.

Once we figure that out, we need to make sure we have the right platforms for our websites to be effective on mobile devices including iPhones, BlackBerries, and the various tablets that are now commonplace. All of this is being worked on, but as quick as we come up with solutions, the technology changes.

In addition to evolving our online strategy, we're coming up with best practices to reach out to our readers through social networks such as Facebook and Twitter. And I know once we figure that out we'll have other new innovations to consider.

You don't need a crystal ball to see what readers want is to get the news they're interested in when they want it, and where they want it. Will there be a need for newspapers in that kind of world? We certainly hope so and have put a lot of time and effort into making sure there is.

Will newspapers survive? Let us know what you think by commenting on my blog or sending me an email.

"A swan is a living being and it symbolizes love, beauty and fidelity. To use the word 'cooked' when it was sadly electrocuted by flying into power lines, to entitle this photo 'Swan Song' and to post a photo of this sad death of a beautiful animal is completely disrespectful and unnecessary. This animal deserves dignity and respect, just like all animals and all people do, and especially in death. I hope in the future you will choose to have a little discretion and respect for all living beings." – Jennifer Talbot

"Very, very pleased and even inspired, and greatly boosting my faith in the populace. In almost every result I see victories for: revitalizing the middle class; ensuring fundamental human rights; deep, principled core values like caring for those less fortunate than us; waking up to serious environmental concerns; and, as one of the most inspiring aspects of this week's elections, a defeat for the politics of fear, anger, racism, and bigotry. • On bridge jumping:

"I've seen jumpers as young as 7 or 8. But they were all people who knew how to swim. And usually accompanied by their parents or elder siblings who also knew how to swim. What should be done to stop the jumping is nothing. The two most common elements in the universe are hydrogen and stupidity. And we think there may be limits on the amount of hydrogen." – Matt Trask

"If you live here and don't know how to swim, that is shocking. Clearly non-swimmers shouldn't jump but it has been happening for a billion years and shouldn't be stopped. Young kids should be with their parents but try stopping the older ones. It's not the Bourne Bridge. If done at high tide with ppl with you, all should be well." – Shannon M. King

"Apparently I am in the minority here. Yes, it is a 'right of passage' but even if you can swim you could drown. I think that a summer policeman should be posted on the bridge. It takes only one person to jump without knowing how to swim to cause a tragedy. The police are constantly patrolling the area to tell the kids to move along. They probably wait 5 minutes to go back to jump some more. Also, a rescuer could be injured or killed. I guess a lot of citizens don't watch the news. There's a drowning accident practically every day!" – Karla Rose Watts

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week. Both branches were busy as the 2012 session neared its end. The House and Senate, with only a handful of legislators in attendance, approved dozens of bills. Many were local measures affecting only one city or town but several were important pieces of legislation that if signed into law will have an effect statewide.

REDUCE FREE 411 CALLS (H 4228) - The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill reducing from ten per month to five per month the number of free directory assistance calls that phone companies must provide to each business and residential customer on their landline phones. The measure leaves intact the current law providing unlimited 411 calls for the disabled, seniors over 65 and state and local governments.

Supporters said that as more and more consumers move away from traditional landline phones to cell phones and Internet phones, it becomes harder for traditional phone companies to pay for the existing infrastructure, including free 411 calls. They noted that even with the reduction to five, Massachusetts will still be requiring companies to provide one of the highest number of free directory assistance calls of any state in the nation.

SABBATICALS (H 4295) - The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a bill reducing from seven years to six years the period of time a faculty member must work at a state university before being eligible for a sabbatical.

Supporters said this would make faculty sabbatical qualifications at state universities consistent with those used by private colleges.

NEW SYMBOL AND FEWER NUMBERS AND LETTERS ON LICENSE PLATES (H 4369) - The House and Senate have approved slightly different versions of legislation that would require all Massachusetts license plates to feature a symbol, like a star, diamond or heart, along with numbers and letters. This system would replace the current system, which has six random letters and numbers.

Supporters said the new plates would make it easier for adults and children to remember license plate registrations and report them to law enforcement officials to track down vehicles used in child kidnappings and other crimes. They cited studies showing both children and adults have trouble recalling the current plates that have six letters. Current specialty, low number or vanity plates would be exempt from the new requirement because they are already easily recognizable.

VIRTUAL SCHOOLS (S 2467) - The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a bill regulating "virtual schools" in Massachusetts. Virtual schools allow students to "attend" an online-only public school. All teaching and assignments are done online through a variety of communication and study methods including e-mail, web conferencing, Skype, Facebook, texting and telephone. These virtual schools are aimed at creating an alternative education option with an individualized approach for students in unique situations including those who are physical disabled, seriously ill, gifted and talented or bullied. Massachusetts currently has only one virtual school, the Massachusetts Virtual Academy in Greenfield. It has 450 students and includes kindergarten through eighth grade.

Students in these schools would be required to meet the same performance standards and testing requirements as those in other public schools. Other provisions cap the per-pupil tuition paid by a school district to send a student to a virtual school at $5,000, limits to ten the number of these schools that may operate at any one time and caps the total number of virtual school students at 2 percent of the state's public school population, or approximately 19,000 students.

MAKE ANTIFREEZE TASTE BITTER (S 88) - The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a proposal expanding the current law requiring that any antifreeze in small retail containers that contains sweet-tasting ethylene glycol also include denatonium benzoate, a substance that makes the antifreeze taste bitter. The bill would expand the requirement to include the large 55-gallon drums that service stations use when servicing a vehicle.

Supporters said the sweet taste of antifreeze is a major reason for its fatal ingestion by young children, pets and wildlife. They noted that sweet-tasting antifreeze often leaks from consumers' cars after they get the fluid changed at a service station.

FLU SHOTS (H 3948) - The House and Senate approved a bill requiring that in August and September all public schools and early education providers distribute to parents information about the benefits of a flu shot for children aged six to 18. This information would include the causes and symptoms of the disease, how it is spread, how to obtain additional information and the effectiveness and risks of the shots. Only final approval is needed in each branch prior to the measure going to the governor.

STUDENTS AND EPINEPHRINE (H 3959) - The House and Senate approved a bill allowing students with life-threatening allergies to possess and self-administer epinephrine on school grounds. The measure would add epinephrine to the current list of medicines allowed to be carried and self-administered by students including prescription inhalers for asthma sufferers, enzyme supplements for students with cystic fibrosis and insulin for diabetics. Only final Senate approval is needed before the bill goes to the governor.

NATIONAL BACKGROUND CHECK ON TEACHERS (H 4307) - The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would require national fingerprint-based background checks be part of a background check on all applicants for teaching positions and any other public or private school jobs who have direct contact with children. The measure would also apply to family child care, center-based child care and after-school programs. Currently the state is only required to conduct a statewide background check that covers crimes committed in Massachusetts. The measure would also require current teachers and other employees to be fingerprinted prior to the 2016-2017 school year.

INCREASE POWER OF TREE WARDENS (H 1839) - The House gave initial approval to a measure expanding the powers of local tree wardens to enforce state and local laws prohibiting cutting or otherwise damaging public trees. A key provision raises the fines that can be imposed for damaging or destroying trees. Another provision establishes new education requirements a potential tree warden is required to fulfill prior to being appointed.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

"THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW" - Friday, January 18 at 5 p.m. is the deadline for legislation to be filed for consideration during the 2013-2014 legislative session. Many late-filed bills are admitted to the Legislature following the deadline but vast majority of proposals are filed by January 18.

Massachusetts is one of a handful of states that give citizens the "right of free petition"— the power to propose their own legislation. A citizen's proposal must be filed in conjunction with his or her representative or senator or any other representative or senator. Sometimes a legislator will support the legislation and sponsor it along with the constituent. Other times, a legislator might disagree with the bill but will file it anyway as a courtesy. In those cases, the bill is listed as being filed "by request"— indicating that he or she is doing so at the request of the constituent and does not necessarily support it. Citizens that are interested in filing legislation should contact their own or any other representative or senator.

Perhaps one of the most famous bills filed "by request" goes all the way back to 1969 when a constituent opposed to the Vietnam War asked Newton Democratic Rep. James Shea to file a bill prohibiting Massachusetts citizens from being forced to fight in an "undeclared war." The bill challenged the constitutionality of sending Bay State men to fight without a Congressional declaration of war. It was approved by the House and Senate and signed by then-Gov. Francis Sargent. The new law made national headlines.

To comply with the new law, Massachusetts initially filed a complaint in the U.S. Supreme Court. The high court declined to hear the case, which was later refiled in the U. S. District Court federal court and dismissed — rejecting the state's argument that President Richard Nixon had usurped the war-making powers of Congress. In a tragic footnote, Rep. Shea committed suicide in the fall of the year the legislation passed.

The town does not renew Police Chief Mark DeLuca's contract, which expires in January. DeLuca, who had been suspended with pay since May over allegations of misconduct, did not seek a public hearing after all. December

When it came to changing the language in the Town Manager Act, changing the restriction on town officials serving in the post, voters at the Special Town Meeting on Dec. 10 said "nay." Due to the controversial nature of the issue, a "secret ballot" was called for. Voters also said "no" to a solar power array at the water treatment plant. Long-time and now retired Board of Health member Steve Bobo was recognized with a resolution in his honor.

Cohasset celebrated the season with the annual Village Fair in early December, sponsored by the churches around the Town Common, and the Holiday Stroll in mid-December, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce. Both events showcase Cohasset's "Norman-Rockwell-like' atmosphere this time of year.

Cohasset also learns that Kevin O'Donnell, who is from Cohasset and graduated from CHS in 1995, is starring in an off-Broadway comedy, "Let's Kill Grandma This Christmas." O'Donnell is continuing in a long-time Cohasset acting tradition that included Humphrey Bogart and Broderick Crawford who performed at Town Hall during the summer of 1934 to the filming of "Witches of Eastwick" and "Housesitter" to current Hollywood movie star, Kate Bosworth.

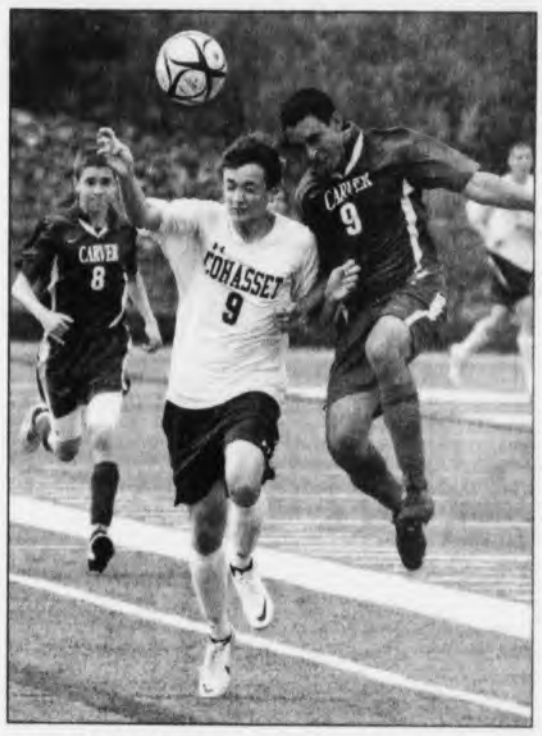
Cohasset sports are no stranger to championships, and 2012 was no different, as there were a few titles, a few close calls, and a bunch of great performances.

The girls tennis team had an outstanding season winning the Div. 3 South Sectional championship, and an individual championship.



The tournament itself was an adventure with the semifinal against Martha's Vineyard running two days in three locations due to weather, and opponent Martha's Vineyard needing to make a boat to get home.

On the whole, the team finished 19-3, including their loss to Bedford in the state semifinal.

Hannah Rawson played an extraordinary tournament for Cohasset.

The team was led by Emma Davis, who also won

Tough stretch for Skippers

Pucksters edged by Scituate and Hanover

The Cohasset Mariner

The past few games have been tough ones for the Cohasset boys hockey team.

In their most recent action, New Years Eve, the Skippers waged an intense, spirited battle against neighboring Scituate that ended with the Sailors' Tucker Ciessau netting the game-winner in the final minute of a 4-3 Cohasset loss at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena that dropped the Skippers to 2-4 as the season heads into the new year.

Both teams struck early. Cohasset jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first minutes of the game. Junior Colin Whelan and sophomore Jeff Powers did the honors for the Skippers.

Scituate fired back just as quickly, evening the score by the 6-minute mark, thanks to goals by senior Brady Cunningham and junior Josh Beck. The Sailors took the first sustained lead of the game with 4:36 to play in the second period. Senior captain Mike Hassett beat the Cohasset defenders and punched in the goal that put Scituate up, 3-2.

Cohasset evened the score again almost exactly a full period later, at the 4:41 mark in the third. Scituate responded as senior captain Tucker Ciessau ended the seesaw match, scoring the game's deciding goal in the final minute of regulation.

"We kind of got, I think, a little bit caught up by the fact that we scored two goals rather quickly," Walsh told the Patriot Ledger. "We lost our focus a little bit. They did the small things – they did all the little things they needed to do."

The game came on the heels of another tough game.

The Skippers lost a hard fought game to Hanover on Saturday, December 22 at the Connell Memorial Rink in Weymouth.

Cohasset was shut out 2-0 by Hanover after defeating them just one week ago 4-1.

Legends, Red Wings win titles

By Mark Ducharme

The two finals for the Fall Season in the Men's South Coastal Hockey League both went down to the final buzzer.

The Legends Div. saw the Saints set the pace throughout the game as they never trailed and hung on in the final seconds for their second title with a 5-4 win over the Stingers.

The Red Wings got a goal from Pat Burke with 3:36 left in the game to break a 2-2 tie and hang on for their eighth title by beating the Bruins 3-2.

The Saints, who were the third-seed in the Legends Div. had two players come through for them at the offensive end in their win over the top-seeded Stingers. Jim MacNiell and Jim Callahan both scored two goals apiece in the game to keep the Saints on top in the game.

Hanover's Tom Shaughnessy scored the other goal for the Saints.

Duxbury's Mike Purdy and Mike White of Marshfield had two assists each for the winners.

Peter MacPherson of Hanover and Paul Smyth each had a goal and an assist for the Stingers, who tied the game, 1-1 and 2-2.

Norwell's Joe Murray and Dave Chrisstensen of Pembroke also scored goals and Chris Poudrier had two assists for the Stingers.

Ron DiCecca and Mike Mullen both of Marshfield each scored to give the Red Wings a 2-0 lead in the second period.

Richard Spence's wrist shot from the circle and a short handed break away goal by Peter Fallon of Hanover tied the game, 2-2 for the Bruins.

Mullen and Kevin Barnard set up the game-winning goal by Burke for the Red Wings, who improve to 8-1 in the finals.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Malone enjoying Wildcats

Scituate star earns scholarship with defending NCAA champ

By Dick Trust
For the Scituate Mariner

The first time Sam Malone walked into fabled Rupp Arena as a member of the University of Kentucky varsity basketball team, it took his breath away.

It was Midnight Madness, or Big Blue Madness as they call it in Lexington, Ky., and Malone was a wide-eyed freshman in his blue-and-white warm-up suit.

All of the players on that 2011-12 Kentucky roster were introduced to a pulsating throng of fans amid blaring spotlights in a choreographed show best described as nothing less than an extravaganza, rhapsody in blue.

"The feeling was just a rush through your whole body," said the 5-foot-11 guard from Scituate. "It just makes you want to work as hard as possible. It's cool to see all those other schools, but Kentucky is a unique place. There are 23,000 people there every game. They are really passionate. It's pretty much unmatched."

Unmatched, too, is the joy this scrappy sophomore from the South Shore of Massachusetts experiences as part of the nation's winningest Division 1 men's college basketball program (2,098 victories all time). Kentucky last season won its eighth NCAA championship (second only to UCLA's 11), the team gets lots of national television exposure, and the coach is high-profile John Calipari.

None of that is lost on Malone.

"It's a great feeling and we've got a lot of great guys here," he said. "It's just unbelievable. I feel very grateful for the opportunity and I try to make the best of it every day. I earned a scholarship this year, so that means a lot to me."

It means so much that Malone pushes himself in the classroom, becoming an 'A' student with a perfect 4.0 grade point average. That'll go a long way toward helping the business major retain his full scholarship, awarded annually based on his academics and his hoop proficiency.

"I was never a great student before I came here," said Malone, a 2011 graduate of Scituate High School. "Part of it is the motivation to get a scholarship and that made me work hard to get a 4.0. I figured if I had a chance to work toward something, to earn something, I might as well put all my work into it."

Among the lessons Kentucky fans have learned is that it's not always how many points you score or how many minutes you play that measure your value to a basketball team.

Still feeling the effects of knee surgery performed just about a year ago – it was his fourth such procedure – Malone is not only a member of the Wildcats' varsity, he's an inspiration to his teammates, coaches and fans alike.

"Sam is as tough as they come," Calipari is quoted as saying on the team's Web site. "After suffering three knee injuries, he worked his way back and earned a spot on our team last year. I'm happy to see he's worked his way back from a fourth knee surgery and (is) a part of our team this year as a scholarship player."

Heading into the Jan. 2 Eastern Michigan game at Kentucky, the Wildcats had an 8-4 record this season, during which Malone had played only one minute in one game - Dec. 8, in a 74-46 victory over Portland.

But he's still very much in tune with the program. He's in the timeout huddles, cheers enthusiastically from the bench, and awaits his next opportunity to get more minutes. He participates in every practice, although sometimes caution rules the day.

"I'm comfortable here, but I'm still in a lot of pain after my fourth knee surgery," Malone said. "I don't do every drill in practice. That's part of my knee situation. But it's getting better every day. It's getting healthier.

Sam Malone

"There's nothing wrong with the structure of my knee. It's tendinitis. I just play through it. It doesn't slow me down at all. For the most part I'm going full tilt. I'm happy with the part I'm playing."

Malone played in six games for Kentucky as a freshman in 2011-12 before sustaining a torn ACL in the Chattanooga game and missing the rest of the campaign. Among his pre-injury action was a career-high four minutes in a victory over Penn State and a career-best four points in the season-opening win over Marist.

It's not unusual to see Malone limping following a particularly demanding workout.

"After a two-hour practice, I'll limp most of the time because it's sore," he said. "I throw ice on it every day and just move on to the next day."

Despite his limited playing time, Malone is a crowd favorite.

"I've gotten the reputation of being very aggressive when I get into a game and I carried it on to this year, too," he said. "I guess the fans like that. I think a lot of people appreciate that I'm still playing at a high level even though I've had four surgeries (two on each knee)."

Malone originally was a walk-on before his freshman season, but, he said, he wasn't as much of a long shot as that suggests. Every year from age 10 or 11 to 15 or 16, Sam attended Calipari's camps and made a big impression. The two stayed in touch.

"I think what helped the most was Cal getting to know Sam through the camps and seeing, A, that he could play, and, B, that he had a passion for the sport," said Malone's father, Joe, a businessman and former Mass. State Treasurer (1991-99).

"When you get to that player who is maybe the 10th, 11th, 12th kid on the team, you're not necessarily looking for the best kid you could find in the country to fill that role. You're looking for someone who's going to be a good kid on and off the court, will work hard in the classroom and set a good example. So, I think in Sam he saw a lot of those attributes."

Malone averaged 14.0 points, 9 assists and 4 steals as a senior at Scituate High, where he was a 2010-11 league All-Star.

Two of Sam's siblings are now at Scituate. Charlie is a freshman basketball guard, while Carolyn is a senior at the high school. Older brother Joe Jr. is a senior at UKentucky and most likely Sam's biggest on-campus fan. His parents, Joe and Linda, are right up there on the rooting scale, too.

Malone sees himself playing through his junior and senior seasons, then planning for his future.

"I'm only trying to squeeze two more years of basketball out of my body. That's what I've got left in me," he said. "After that, I want to work in some aspect of the sport, maybe coaching. And where I am is a great place to learn.

"All I'm thinking about is working as hard as I can and keeping my body healthy for two more years. If I walk with a limp for the rest of my life, so be it."

What drives Sam Malone? What accounts for his tenacity?

"A lot of people don't have the opportunity I have, being at Kentucky, and I just want to make the most of it," he said. "Coach knows how much I love the game, and one reason I love basketball so much is just watching him, watching how hard his teams play.

"I've gone through four knee surgeries and there's no reason to quit now."

the MIAA Individual title.

One new wrinkle in the Cohasset sports scene was the addition of a varsity girls ice hockey team.

Coached by Deb Beal, Cohasset's long-time girls soccer coach, Cohasset teamed up with Hanover to build a team from the ice up and the Skipping Indians officially became a varsity team after playing an abbreviated schedule as a JV squad the year before.

It was tough going on the scoreboard at first, with the team opening 0-10-1.

The numbers started turning in the stretch run and the girls ended the season on a 4-1-1 run.

The boys hockey team was at the beginning of an outstanding season that ended a bit too soon.

Led by a high-flying offensive attack (a state-high 124 goals), Cohasset rolled to a 14-3-3 season and a No. 4 seed in the Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament, where they were upset in the early rounds.

Alex Evans scored his 100th career point during the season.

On the basketball court, a fantastic season for the Skippers ended under the cloud of near tragedy when coach Bo Ruggiero was seriously injured in a head-on crash with an alleged drunk driver in February.

The Skippers fought on with assistants Dick Lawless and Jim Willis helming the ship and Cohasset won its MIAA Div. 4 South Sectional opening round game against Blue Hills before being edged at Westport in the next round. Cohasset finished the season 16-6 overall.

More importantly, Ruggiero battled through the injuries and is back on the sidelines coaching his squad to a 4-0 start.

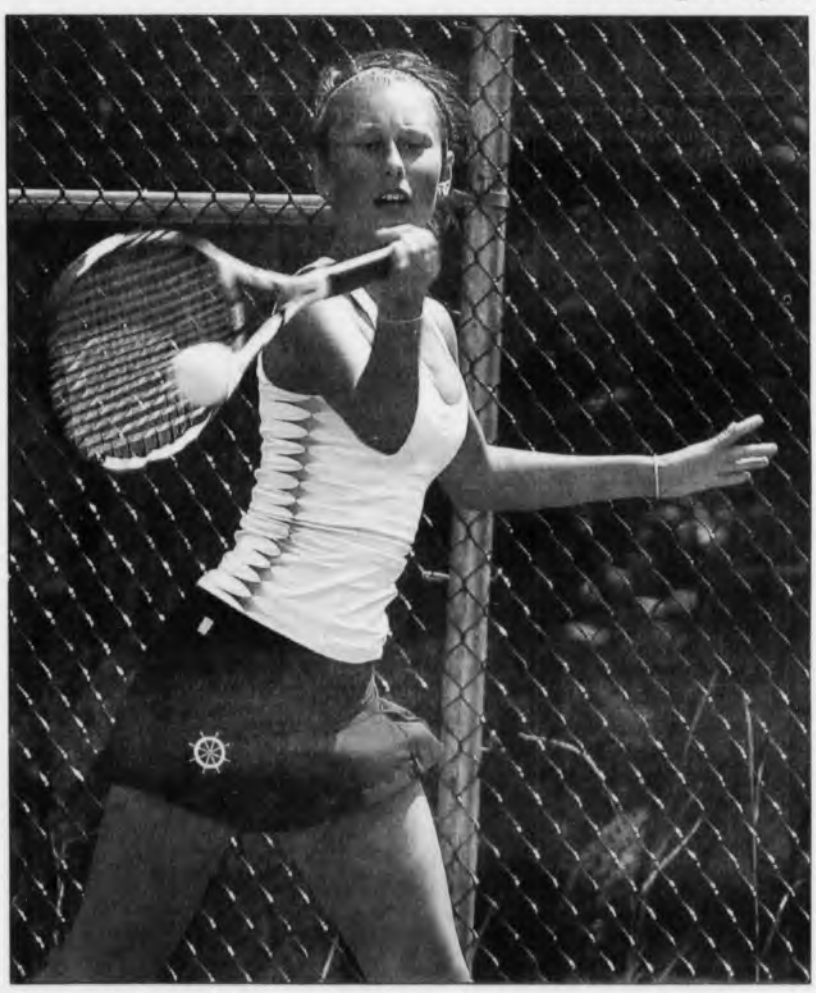
The girls basketball team struggled to pick up victories, with graduation and injuries one big reason the team missed qualifying for the tournament.

On the wrestling mats, Cohasset had nine wrestlers qualify for the Div. 3 Individual State Tournament via top-four finishes in the Div. 3 South Sectional tournament.

They also qualified two alternates.

Derek Froio (152 lb.) won his weight class at sectionals.

As a team, Cohasset qualified for the team tournament.



In the swimming pool, Hope Kissick notched a personal best time and a second-place finish in the Div. 2 State Championship.

Clarke Indek was third in the 100 backstroke in the same tournament.

On the baseball diamond, the Skippers won the South Shore League and earned a No. 1 seed in the Div. 4 South Sectional tournament.

huge season, striking out more than 100 batters, including a 17 strikeout performance in a 7-1 win over Abington.

Unfortunately, the Skippers couldn't add a third straight state title to the resume. They were knocked out of the tournament by Harwich in a 2-1 loss.

A few local baseball players were back in the area over the summer, with the Brockton Rox, who recently joined the Futures Collegiate Baseball League.

Brendan Doonan, Rob McCunny and Jordan Berry all played.

The three of them had played for the Cohasset Post 118.

The boys and girls lacrosse teams were also playoff bound.

The boys sported a 6-10 record, but made it with the Sullivan rule and made the most of it, winning their opener 18-5 before falling out at Newburyport.

The girls lacrosse team beat Cape Cod Academy in their opener before falling to Norwell 18-9 in the next round.

On the links Cohasset finished 13-1 and won the South Shore League.

The football team also had an interesting season, finishing 6-5, with a huge 54-37 win over Hull.

Chris Haggerty was almost perfect on the day, completing 9 of 10 passes for 188 yards and four touchdowns for the Skippers (6-5).

Junior running back Ryan Gillis ran for 138 yards, including a 72-yard touchdown to open the second half. Sophomore back Tim Gillis amassed 111 yards and three TDs. He passed the 1,000-yard mark for the season late in the game.

The boys soccer team made it to the quarterfinals of the Div. 4 South Sectional Tournament, winning their first game 2-1 in penalty kicks over South Shore League rival Monomoy. They followed with a 7-0 win over No. 4 New Testament at Bristol-Plymouth High School.

The run ended in a 1-0 loss to Seekonk.

The girls had their fun on the gridiron, with the seniors beating the juniors 16-6 in the Powder Puff game.

"It's a disappointing day for us as we go into Christmas week," remarked Skippers Coach Bob Walsh. "It's rare that this team, (Cohasset), is shut out by an opponent but Jonny Abban brought his guys ready to play."

Hanover's senior goalie Elijah Marciello was unwavering in his efforts to bring a shutout performance to the show turning aside all 18 shots by Cohasset players. Cohasset junior goalie Brandon Winn came up big on a number of Hanover opportunities tallying 14 saves, but in the end, two shots found their way into the back of the net.

"Winnie played a game that was good enough for a win," said Walsh. "We just didn't help him. We couldn't find the net. Both teams made mistakes, Hanover was better at exploiting them than we were. It's as simple as that."

SEPAC MEETING TUESDAY

Mother/son share their journey

The question of how our students will transition past high school is a question on all parent's minds. The Cohasset Special Education Parent's Advisory Council (SEPAC) is pleased to host Catherine and Michael Mayes to help answers those questions. The Mayes, a mother/son advocate speaking team, will present "Transition — A guide to assist families on the journey from adolescence to adulthood on Tuesday, Jan. 8 at 7 p.m. at Paul Pratt Library. The presentation is about their personal and professional experiences and will advise on how to successfully transition from secondary school to college and beyond.

Catherine Mayes was the past Plymouth County Program Coordinator for the Asperger's Association of New England. In that capacity she oversaw social and recreational programs for teens with Autism Spectrum Disorders, Asperger Syndrome, Nonverbal Learning Disorder and communication challenges. Catherine also coordinated AS-focused educational programs for parents and educators in Plymouth County. Additionally, she is the Autism Project Advocate for Massachusetts Advocates for Children where she provides technical assistance to families with children with autism throughout the commonwealth. She is the mother of a 20-year-old person with high functioning ASD and has been advocating for families with Children with Disabilities for over 15 years. She has completed the Federation Parent Advocate Training and is one of 16 graduates of the STEP National Advanced Advocacy Program offered through the Federation for Children with Special Needs.

As a student living with Asperger's, school was a constant battle for Michael getting the support and services needed to succeed. His goal is to make it easier for those following him. In 2009, he graduated from Marshfield High. While in high school he was an avid athlete, coach, umpire and mentor to younger students. Michael was one of 28 youths sworn in Sept. 12, 2008 to the Governor's Statewide Youth Council, a new group of young people handpicked to advise Gov. Deval Patrick on issues facing teenagers. He served a two-year term as one of two teens serving Plymouth County. Michael took on the challenge because he wanted to find out how laws were made and how a person could help make changes. He not only represented teens in general but was a voice for students living with Autism. Today, Mike is a successful student at Mitchell College.

For more information on this meeting and other South Shore events, visit our website at www.cohassetsepac.com. Light refreshments will be available. The meeting free and open to the public.

LIFE AT CHS

Winter sports in full swing

Today, the Girls' and Boys' Swimming Teams are competing in tri-meets against Scituate and Silver Lake, and the Gymnastics Team has a meet at Carver tonight.

WHITNEY MALONE

Welcome back Cohasset! I hope you are all enjoying the start of the New Year. It's hard to believe that my classmates and I will be graduating this May and all parting in different directions, come September. Still, we are all excited that this is our year!

Adding to the excitement, winter sports are in full swing. Monday afternoon, CHS students filled the Hingham rink to cheer on the Boys' Ice Hockey Team who put up a strong fight against Scituate, but lost by one goal in the last two minutes of the game. The boys play Hull tomorrow night at their home rink in Weymouth.

Wednesday, the Boys' and Girls' Varsity and JV Basketball Teams played Rockland. Also, that night, the Girls' Ice Hockey Team played Norwell and the Ski Team had a meet, hosted by Hingham High School, against multiple opponents.

Thursday, aside from athletics, the Math Team had their third meet of the year at Notre Dame Academy. There is only one meet left for the season, so if any students would like to see if Math Team is for them, they are welcome to participate as alternates. If you're interested, you can contact Ms. Guiliano or find me in school!

Today, the Girls' and Boys' Swimming Teams are competing in tri-meets against Scituate and Silver Lake, and the Gymnastics Team has a meet at Carver tonight. Also tonight, the Chorus Ensemble is performing on-ice at the Providence Bruins game, as they have done in past years. Tomorrow morning, the Boys' Varsity Wrestling Team will host a meet against multiple towns. Good luck to everyone!

Whitney Malone is a senior at CHS; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JAN. 14, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be hurt by a colleague's harsh criticism. But don't let it shake your confidence in what you're trying to do. A more positive aspect starts to appear by week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're torn between your sensible self and the part of you that enjoys acquiring lovely things. Best advice: Wait for an end-of-month sale, and then buy something wonderful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your artistic side has practical applications this week, such as redecorating your home or redesigning your personal stationery. Whatever you do, someone special will like it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You could be drawn into a problem 'twixt friends or family members. Best bet: Ask the questions that go to the heart of the matter, then get them all together for a group hug.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As much as you love being the center of attention, your big Lion's heart impels you to share the spotlight with a colleague who helped you with that well-praised project.

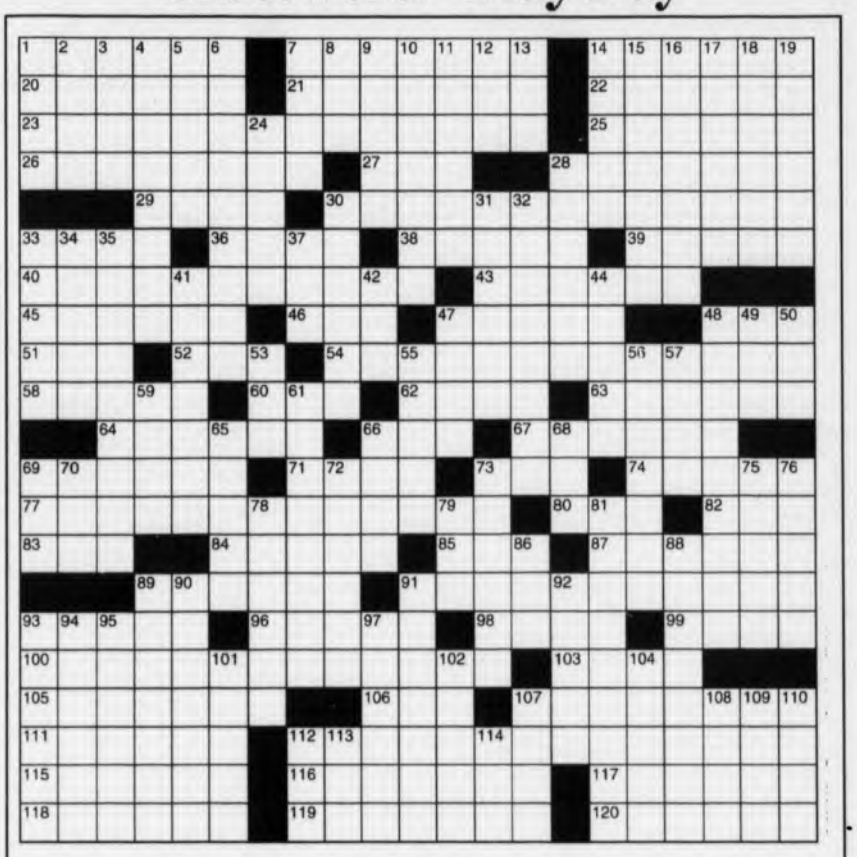
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your eagerness to act on a challenge is wisely tempered early in the week by a lack of necessary information. Things begin to clear up during the weekend.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A relationship you'd hoped would keep going seems to be going nowhere. Close it out and move on to a brighter romantic aspect just beginning to manifest itself.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Things don't go completely as planned this week. But enjoy the surprises, even if you have to adjust your schedule. Some of them could be quite delightful.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Making choices is usually easy for straight-shooting Archers. But a new development could deflect your aim. Try to put off decisions until you know more.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While part of you might prefer taking a more familiar path, let your more daring and — admit it — super-curious self see what the unexplored has to offer.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Those nasty types have slithered back under the rocks and present no more problems. Now's the time to move ahead on that promising new relationship.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new offer could clear up that lingering money problem. Also, a more confident attitude on your part might well help get that personal situation back on track.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of turning chaos into order. You're also generous with your help for those who seek it.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OPEN HOUSE AT GLASTONBURY ABBEY

Br. David Coakley talks about music in the monastery then and now inside the chapel at Glastonbury Abbey in September. The monks had invited everyone to celebrate autumn with a fun-filled day on their grounds. The first-time ever event featured chowder and ice, rock 'n roll music, tours of the gardens, hayrides throughout the grounds, walks through the Abbey's one-of-a-kind stone labyrinth, and visits with – and a chance to feed – the monks' herd of goats. MIDDLESEX COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Middlesex CC welcomes adult students back to campus

Sometimes life gets in the way of the best-laid plans – especially when it comes to attending college. Increasingly, busy adults with work and family responsibilities are turning to Middlesex Community College to finish what they started.

With more than 75 degree and certificate programs, including accelerated programs, MCC offers courses during the day, evening and weekend on our Bedford and Lowell campuses. And our many online courses can be completed any time, day or night.

"Adults return to school for a wide variety of reasons," said MCC Dean of Admissions Marilynn Gallagan. "Sometimes, they want to complete the degree they started when they were younger. Others may be interested in pursuing a new career, or might need a credential to advance in their current position," she said.

Regardless of the reasons behind their return to college, said Gallagan, Middlesex understands and welcomes adult students. MCC will host two upcoming Finish Your Degree Walk-In Planning Sessions, designed specifically to assist adult students interested in returning to college.

The Bedford Campus Finish Your Degree Walk-In Planning Session will be held from 2 to 6 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 8, in the Bedford Campus Center, 591 Springs Road. The Lowell Campus Finish Your Degree Planning Session will be held from 2 to 6 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 9, in the Lowell Campus Cafeteria, 33 Kearney Square.

"Every semester, we see many adult students returning to MCC to finish a degree, and most admit they are much more focused this time around – even with their much busier lives," said Gallagan. "Many have a high level of motivation and want to set a good example, since they are returning to school at the same time their children are beginning college."

Counselors at the Walk-In Planning sessions will meet with students one-on-one, Gallagan explained. "Bring your college transcripts and we will review them. We can award up to 45 transfer credits," she said.

"If students have previously taken college-level English and math, we can waive the College Placement Test for most programs," said Gallagan. "Or, if you need to take the placement test, we offer math, reading and writing Refresher Workshops – free of charge – so students can brush up on their skills prior to taking the placement test."

Middlesex Community College, with campuses in Bedford and Lowell, welcomes returning-adult students like Mark Valentine, of Maynard, who graduated in May 2012. Upcoming Finish Your Degree Walk-In Planning Sessions are designed for adults thinking about returning to college. CONTRIBUTED PHOTO

Middlesex offers a variety of services to help adult students make the transition back to college, Gallagan added, including advising, academic support, and financial planning. "We also offer accelerated programs, such as our Weekend College Business Administration program, and Academy of Health programs. And, MCC offers online courses – as well as 15 totally online degree and certificate programs – that fit busy lifestyles."

Are you a former Middlesex student? Attend a Walk-In Planning Session to determine what classes you need to finish your degree, said Gallagan. "You may be closer than you think!"

MCC is one of the largest, most comprehensive community colleges in the state. We offer more than 75 degree and certificate programs, plus hundreds of noncredit courses, during the day, evening and weekend, on our Bedford and Lowell campuses, and online. CWDF to grant service dog

Group founded to fund K9 is giving back

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Two years ago, the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation was formed to raise funds to provide the police department and community with a K9 service dog.

This year, the CWDF is giving back to the Cohasset community — by donating raised funds to provide an individual with a service dog of their own.

The CWDF recently announced its first annual Cohasset Service Dog grant, which will help pay for the purchase and training of a personal service dog for a Cohasset resident. Trained service dogs can aid individuals with visual or hearing impairments, seizure disorders (Epilepsy, cardiac seizures), mobility impairments, autism or other serious health issues.

CWDF founder Trish Morse further described just a few of the many "amazing" feats service dogs can do.

"Service dogs can be trained to provide physical stability for someone with balance issues. They can alert for seizures before they happen... If someone has a seizure, they stay with their partner and alert for help," Morse explained. "They can cushion a fall for someone with mobility impairment; the dog is trained to get underneath them as they fall. They can pick up dropped items, turn on light switches, carry medication and oxygen tanks... For [those with] autism, they provide emotional comfort... They

CITIZENS FOR CHILDREN'S SAFETY

New group pushes for safer schools

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"You can't put a price on children's safety."

That is the notion behind the Citizens for Children's Safety (CFCS), a local movement of parents and concerned residents who are striving for better security in public schools.

Brian Stratton, president and founder of the organization, is a local musician, producer and father, who said that he was profoundly impacted by the school shooting in Newtown, Conn. last month. The group has already gained a number of supporters as it seeks to accomplish its chief goal: placing a resource officer in every local public school.

This initiative will start small, focusing on the South Shore; but, ultimately, Stratton said he hopes the organization will have a national impact.

"We want to mandate it at every school around the country," said Stratton.

Other long-term goals involve having surveillance cameras and metal detectors installed in every public school. Stratton is aware of the potential backlash this proposal could get from those who do not want to see schools look like prisons; he

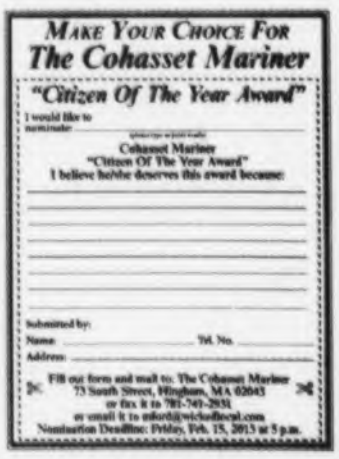
Who is the town's top citizen?

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

In keeping with a 20-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

We invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset.

Last year Cohasset honored Veneta "Vee" Roebuck her long-time service on the Conservation Commission and her dedication to the environment.



The deadline for nominations for the Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Feb. 15. Please see the nomination form on page 4. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@wickedlocal.com are also welcome.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the Citizen of the Year.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the 20th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

PICTURE THIS

This week the Mariner caught up with Trish Morse, President of the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation. For story on the CWDF, see page one. If you see Trish around town be sure to tell her you saw her in Picture This! PHOTO/MARY FORD

Name: Trish Morse.

Occupation: President of the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation.

Best day of your life: Our wedding day 20 years ago. Officiated by the wonderful Ed "Fast Eddie" Atkinson at First Parish followed by the most fun party I've ever been to.

Best vacation: Best vacation was a cycling and cooking trip through Tuscany. Beautiful countryside to ride through and amazing, fresh food every day. I love all kinds of food, but could seriously live on good bread, olive oil, pecorino and wine.

Favorite season: Autumn, without question. I love the way it smells, the colors of the leaves and the way things seem to slow down a little in anticipation of winter.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving. I love continuing family traditions and starting new ones and have never turned down a turkey sandwich with cranberry and stuffing, or pumpkin pie. I think we should have Thanksgiving at least four times a year.

ONLY IN PRINT

Favorite junk food / meal: This changes all the time. My husband, Sam is a very adventurous cook, so my favorite meal is usually the last new thing he just made. I crave Indian food. My favorite junk foods are far less exotic: Oreos and milk or a Fluffernutter.

Best book/Magazine: "The Education of Little Tree" and "Cooks Illustrated."

Best movie: "Singin' in the Rain."

Best TV show: "Bones" - because it's my father's favorite show and we watch together when I visit him in Virginia.

Best music, group, or artist: My husband and sons when they jam in the basement.

Pet peeve: Negativity and Unkindness.

Most embarrassing moment: Oh that list is VERY long and very much buried away.

Fun fact: I can juggle.

Goal: To successfully match a trained Service Dog with a deserving Cohasset resident in 2013!

Person you'd most like to meet: God, (but maybe not just yet). I've got a lot of questions for him.

Biggest worry: The future of America.

Best part of Cohasset: I thought this would be an easy question, but there is no ONE best part of Cohasset. The natural beauty, our little village and the picture-perfect Common, and the kind, funny and generous townspeople all make Cohasset such a wonderful place to live and raise a family.

POLICE BEAT

Vacation home fraud being investigated

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 38-year-old Cohasset resident, who is a husband and father, recently rented a house in Stowe, Vt., for a family vacation only to find out he had been the victim of fraud, police said. Police said the Cohasset resident rented the vacation home through Craig's List and had several conversations via email with the person saying they were the landlord.

Last month, the Cohasset family of four drove to Stowe, Vt. only to find another family had rented the place and someone else owned the home. Police said the victim wired $1850 to the Craig's List contact for a four-night stay. Cohasset detectives are investigating this and the Stowe police are also involved, police said.

Civil rights

As the result of a police investigation, a 46-year-old Cohasset woman is being summonsed to court for alleged civil rights violations, police said. She is facing felony charges of civil rights violations; assault to intimidate, and property damage to intimidate. She is also facing the misdemeanor charge of threats to commit a crime.

Police said the alleged victim is a 56-year-old gay man who lives in the same apartment complex with his partner. Police said the woman has been harassing two neighbors in part because of their sexual orientation. The landlord of the apartment complex where they all live has also initiated an eviction process against the female due to her actions.

Warrant

A 55-year-old Jerusalem Road woman was arrested on a default warrant at home last week after her husband went to the police station to report that she was intoxicated and out of control. The default warrant (which means the woman did not appear in court as scheduled) is for the charge of operating under the influence of alcohol, police said.

Cruiser mishap

A police cruiser sustained very minor damage when it backed into a DPW truck in the DPW yard at the gas pump on Wednesday (Jan. 2), police said. The DPW truck was not damaged. The dent in the cruiser's bumper was pushed out and the cruiser did not have to be taken off the road for repairs.

Fraud

A 50-year-old Cohasset man reported to police last week that someone had obtained his debit card number and made a number of charges totaling $3215 online. He notified his bank, which closed the account and will replenish the funds after the police report was filed.

Hit & run

A 57-year-old Quincy resident who works at Shaw's discovered her 2009 Nissan Rogue had been sideswiped in the parking lot. Damage is estimated at more than $1500, police said. Police said the damage was fresh but the car was parked outside the video surveillance area.

House entered

A 50-year-old Cohasset man, who was watching another home for residents who were away, reported to police last week that it appeared someone entered the house and helped themselves to a bowl of soup. The man reported everything was in order the previous day but the following day he found an entry door unlocked and open, a snow shovel out of place, an open can of soup, a Dunkin Donuts coffee, and other things out of place in the house. Police detectives are following up and seized the evidence for prints.

Alleged threats

A 37-year-old Hull man was looking for possible recourse when he went to the police station last week to report indirect threats made to him by a former co-worker at a Cohasset establishment. He not longer works there and the case is before the labor relations board, police said.

Vandalism

A 65-year-old Cohasset man reported vandalism to his basketball hoop last Saturday. The hoop had fallen during a storm last month. But on the morning of Jan. 5, he woke up to find the glass backboard shattered, damage to the molding surrounding the backboard and black marks on the support pole of the basketball hoop, consistent with a vehicle driving over the hoop, police said. Neighbors did not report seeing anything, police said.

Unwanted

A 43-year-old Cohasset man and his girlfriend were asked to leave a local establishment last Saturday when, after a few drinks at the bar, he allegedly began to swear. They were asked to leave and they did, police said, vowing never to return.

EMPLOYEE RECOGNITION

Awards program to proceed

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"There's been a turnaround in town, by new employees and existing, when it comes to righting the ship. Where their efforts are exemplary, they should be identified."
Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski

Three of the town's top employees will receive special recognition sometime this winter with a new awards program initiated by Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

Milanoski announced plans in November to commend town employees for their hard work with a special Employee Award and Recognition program, with nominations to be submitted this month followed by an awards dinner in February or March. He announced that nominations are due by the end of January during the town manager update portion of Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting.

"There's been a turnaround in town, by new employees and existing, when it comes to righting the ship," Milanoski explained. "Where their efforts are exemplary, they should be identified."

A committee of town employees will award three different honors to carefully selected nominees who have done top-notch work for the town.

The acting town manager explained in November that the program will provide a good time and place to reward employees who go above and beyond at work and on a volunteer basis.

"There are a lot of hard-working people here for the town, as demonstrated by the storm [Sandy] and fixing multiple issues in the past," Milanoski said at the time, "people putting above and beyond the effort beyond what their normal job requires. We want to have the ability to recognize those standout employees."

The town manager said that a group of employees worked together to create and draft the awards program, and that this is how they wanted to be recognized. "This has been an employee effort to recognize those who go above and beyond the call of duty."

Milanoski explained to the selectmen on Tuesday, he feels employees want to be awarded for going above and beyond, not just "doing their every day job."

Selectman co-chair Diane Kennedy said that it was important to note that the program was developed by a committee of employees. Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore wondered how the group would keep the awards program from becoming a "popularity contest."

Milanoski said they would "have to trust the process."

How it works

The program has three awards: the Excellence Award, Meritorious Service Award, and Community Service Award.

All paid employees who have worked for the town for at least a year are eligible for the Excellence, Meritorious Service, and Community Service awards, and will be nominated by their fellow town employees.

The Excellence Award recognizes excellence and improvement in the workplace. In order to receive this award, the winner must display:

- Integrity and setting high standards
- Dedication and fulfilling a purpose
- Punctuality and accountability
- Internal and external communication skills

The recipient of the Meritorious Service Award is someone who "will have shown a high degree of initiative, professionalism and proficiency above and beyond their required job description." Cohasset citizens or an individual or business can nominate an employee for this award.

The Community Service Award, meanwhile, is for a paid town employee who, by virtue of sacrifice and expense of his or her own time, fosters or contributes to a valuable and successful program in the area of community affairs, or who acts to substantially improve town-community relations through contribution of time and effort during their off-duty hours.

The Town Manager, member of the Board of Selectmen, or a town department head will make the nomination for the Community Service Award. The nominee must have worked for the town for at least one year.

All three winners will receive proclamations from the Board of Selectmen and state officials, a to-be-determined Cohasset keepsake, and a $50 gift certificate to a local merchant of the recipient's choice.

Nomination forms are available at the Town Manager's office in Town Hall and must be filled out and submitted to the Town Manager's office by Thursday, Jan. 31.

Once the deadline has passed, a committee of four town employees or volunteers will review the forms and vote on the recipients. The committee will not consider anonymous nominations.

A date, time and location for the awards ceremony have not yet been set. Check back in the Mariner for updates on this issue.

SAFER

considers the alternative far worse.

"It's created controversy," he said of the security cameras in particular. "Schools maintain that they want their privacy, but some are starting to bend on that. It's in everybody's best interest that the police know what's going on on school grounds."

Stratton added that there is more to a police resource officer than just standing guard for an attack. "They wear many hats," he explained. "They can help prevent bullying or drive sex offenders away from the property... Having a resource officer there might deter some of these crimes."

Perhaps the biggest challenge of placing such an officer in each school is funding, said Stratton. "It would cost the same amount of money as funding a teacher on the payroll. I understand the fiscal challenges of this, but you can't put a price on children's safety."

The founder added that it's up to each town to prioritize; perhaps some would be in favor of an override or a "modest increase" on a tax, such as real estate.

The CFCS will continue to promote the idea in South Shore towns, gather supporters, and seek to prepare articles to present to local boards of selectmen. Stratton said that he's gotten advice on the "mechanical process" of the initiative from officials like state senator Robert Hedlund (R – Weymouth) and state representative of the 6th Plymouth District, Josh Cutler (D – Duxbury).

Stratton said that so far, support for the newly formed organization has been overwhelming.

"Right now, we have over 1,000 supporters," which have been gained through a Facebook page and word-of-mouth. "It's amazing... We started with just a handful," said Stratton.

Among those working alongside Stratton is Cohasset resident and business owner Paul Kearney, who owns the fitness chain Atlantis Sports Club and Spa. Kearney once challenged Hedlund for his senate seat; now, the two are working together on this issue.

Kearney said that he got involved with CFCS because he feels "protecting kids in all aspects of schools" is top priority.

As a father of three, two of whom are twins in the first grade, Kearney said that the Newtown tragedy "hit home for me.

"Every one of my friends can't stop talking about this," Kearney added. "Every father and mother I talk to is so sad about this. It could have been prevented."

And while Kearney said that he does not want to see schools turn into "military zones," he thinks there is a way to balance better school security with current technology, so that children can be safe while not feeling scared to go to school.

The Cohasset resident also feels, like Stratton, that money is no object when it comes to keeping kids safe.

"If we can put people on the moon, if we can spend one dollar out of every three on military, but we can't protect kids in school, it's ridiculous," said Kearney.

Stratton has even done some preliminary math to determine how much it would cost some towns to hire a resource officer. "In a town with a $100 million budget, it would come out to less than one percent of the budget... If we did a $75 hike on property taxes for each family, we could get it done in every school. I would go to town hall and give them cash right now," if it would safeguard schoolchildren, said Stratton.

The CFCS founder has discussed this issue on local radio shows, including his own show on WATD, and with local newspapers as well as the Boston Globe.

"This is happening right now— we're getting out there full throttle," Stratton said of the grassroots movement. "When media outlets see a large number of citizens stepping up, it's definitely a newsworthy organization."

And while he does expect a "very strong reaction" to the initiative one way or the other, Stratton believes that increasing school security would be the best possible outcome.

"There's no magical answer here, but I do believe it will save lives."

Date set: Road Race by the Sea

The 37th annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea is set to take place on Sunday, April 7 starting at 1 p.m.

Members of the Cohasset Rotary Club, which sponsors the event, came before the Board of Selectmen Tuesday night, asking the board to approve the event permit for the proposed date. The selectmen voted to approve it unanimously.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby called the race an important event that gives back to the town each year. "I've been involved with the sign-up since [the race] was instituted and have seen it grow," she said. "It's one event where a lot of monies go back to Cohasset... This is really a town project."

Registration is now open for the race, which starts in downtown Cohasset, goes along the coast and along the hills back to the village. For more information, visit www.roadracebythesea.com.

Michael, a college junior, started Cbay LLC, an online selling service that donates a percentage of its profits to charity. Michael, who began selling his toys on Amazon at the age of 10, started Cbay during his first year in college and has raised thousands of dollars for Wellspring Multi-Service Center while helping residents de-clutter.

Now in its third year, CBay continues to successfully sell household treasures for local residents, returning 60 percent of the sale profits to the owners while making a substantial donation to Wellspring, a regional social service center. Michael explains: "Got stuff you no longer use? Let Cbay turn your abandoned valuables into cash! From picking up your item to shipping it out, Cbay does all the work; you don't lift a finger. You get 60 percent of the total sale, 30 percent of the sale goes to Wellspring and 10 percent of the total sale goes to Cbay, everybody wins!"

Week was long and eventful

WHITNEY MALONE

Today at lunch, 11th grade students met in Mr. Welch's classroom to discuss the application process for induction into National Honor Society.

Following winter vacation and a three-day school week, this week felt especially long, and eventful!

The Peer Leaders had their second-to-last workshop with the middle school students. Some of the activities in the workshop included skits about prejudice and an exercise in which students formed a circle and passed a tennis ball around without using their hands, testing their cooperation and creativeness.

Today at lunch, 11th grade students met in Mr. Welch's classroom to discuss the application process for induction into National Honor Society. To apply, students must show that they have completed volunteer work and established themselves as leaders in the community, all while maintaining academic GPAs above the minimum requirement for membership.

Tuesday, the Student Council met with the senior class advisors to devise the final details of the Semi-Formal, which has been moved to Friday, January 25th and will have a "Winter Wonderland" theme. Unlike past years, this dance is open to underclassmen and students are allowed to invite guests from other high schools!

Next week, the Best Buddies will meet for the first time this year. Every other week, the members of the Best Buddies program meet after school to play games and other fun activities with the students from the collaborative at CHS. If you are interested in joining, see senior Mollie Chipman!

These few weeks before the end of first semester can be stressful, but also exciting with the anticipation of new second semester classes. There's no need for CHS students to feel too stressed though; remember we have a four and a half day weekend next week!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High; her column runs monthly during the school year.

allow people to enjoy a more normal life — that's the goal."

Such specially trained animals, however, can come with a hefty price tag, especially for an individual or family already facing medical bills. The purchase, training and raising of a service dog can cost around $20,000.

This is where the CWDF comes in — the group's mission is to cover a significant portion of the costs for one recipient each year. This is a new initiative for the organization, which was originally formed to raise funds for the Cohasset police department's K9 unit.

"This is the second prong of the working dog foundation's mission," said Morse. "We were very successful last year in getting the K9 program supported, and now that's in good shape. We're using our efforts this year to get the first service dog grant awarded and our goal is to do one grant a year, although if we raise a ton of money at our event on March 9, we may be able to give more, depending on how many people apply."

Morse said the she hopes that many will show a strong interest in the new grant program. "We think it's going to be, ultimately, a very big annual thing people will look forward to."

As to why the goal is to assist one individual per year, Morse explained that the application process to receive a service dog is a lengthy one.

"It's going to take time to help the family through the application process. It can take a year or more between the initiation of the application itself and the time the dog and its partner come together," Morse explained. "The dog needs to be trained, and the applicant goes through a screening process... It's a long process, but perhaps down the line it will be easier."

"This is the second prong of the working dog foundation's mission. We were very successful last year in getting the K9 program supported, and now that's in good shape. We're using our efforts this year to get the first service dog grant awarded and our goal is to do one grant a year..."
Trish Morse, Cohasset Working Dog Foundation

Even after a dog is placed with an individual or family, the CWDF will continue to offer support.

"We would help to welcome the dog into the community, and educate the community on how we can support this service dog," said Morse.

After all, the reason the CWDF is starting this new grant is to give back to the community.

"A properly trained service dog can really change someone's life," said Morse.

Fundraiser details

The CWDF's annual fundraiser will be held on Sat., March 9 at the Atlantica restaurant in Cohasset.

Applications will be accepted from Jan. 1 to Feb. 15. The 2013 grant recipient will be selected before the end of February and announced at the fundraiser.

Grant applicants should have the ability to provide daily care for a service dog or live with an adult who will be responsible for its care. Food, grooming, and regular veterinary care will also be the responsibility of the recipient or his or her family.

Application requests can be made by providing your name and mailing address via email to Info@cohassetworkingdog.org or by mail to The Cohasset Working Dog Foundation, P.O. Box 45, Cohasset. For more information, please contact Trish Morse at 781-383-1622 or at info@cohassetworkingdog.org

Thanks for speaking up in 2012

Before 2013 gets too far along, we still have some important 2012 business to attend to.

Some of the following names may be familiar to you, others may not be. But the people attached to these names all have one thing in common: they wrote at least one letter-to-the-editor or penned a commentary to the Cohasset Mariner in 2012.

A few wrote thank you notes to the people of Cohasset or organizations for their help or support; others complained about a decision or lobbied to have their views considered; while still others educated us about programs, problems or activities.

But no matter what the subject, putting pen to paper to share your views with your fellow citizens is important. The First Amendment is close to our hearts here in the newspaper business and at no time do we appreciate it more than when ordinary citizens, like those listed here, take advantage of their Freedom of Speech. And what better vehicle is there than your local paper?

So here at the Mariner, we salute the following citizens:

(Please note: if more than two people signed a letter, due to space restrictions, only the first person is listed)

The editorial pages of the Cohasset Mariner belong to you. It's where you can speak out or just say thank you to a citizen or group that went beyond the call of duty.

Sometimes it takes a good dose of courage to let your voice be heard, but we think it's worth it. Often one voice is all the inspiration needed to propel others to action.

Last year, the Cohasset Mariner received 156 letters and commentaries from people, groups or organizations.

To those of you that have thought about writing and haven't, please reconsider. To those whom we hear from on a regular basis, keep writing!

There are lots of weeks to go in the New Year — which will be filled with events, decisions, happenings and controversy. Let us hear what you think in 2013.

(Editor's note: Unless they penned a letter, names of the Mariner's regular columnists were not included in this list).

COMMENTARY

Medical marijuana delay supported

RICK COLLINS

Supporting medical marijuana, and supporting a well-regulated medical marijuana industry, governed by common-sense rules that protect the general welfare, are not two irreconcilable concepts.

There's an old saying used by craftsmen along the lines of, "The job can be done quick, or the job can be done right, but it can't be both."

That saying can also apply to how our state approves new laws and regulations. Sometimes the legislative and bureaucratic process can be timed with a calendar. But when we are dealing with issues of significant public health and safety, expediency is not necessarily a virtue, nor is deliberateness and thoughtfulness a sin.

The voters of Massachusetts have made it clear that they support medical marijuana. However, the ballot question that passed in November also established a hyper-speed legalization process that handcuffs local and state officials' ability to responsibly prepare for the introduction of a major new industry into our neighborhoods; an industry that even when well-managed is still rife with public safety and public health hazards.

It is because of this that I would encourage the state's new Legislature to quickly consider and support legislation delaying the implementation of our new medical marijuana law for nine months.

Supporting medical marijuana, and supporting a well-regulated medical marijuana industry, governed by common-sense rules that protect the general welfare, are not two irreconcilable concepts.

What if we replaced the term "medical marijuana" with "casino gambling," another newly legalized industry in Massachusetts also rife with complex and substantial public health and public safety issues. Few people would have supported the legalization of casino gambling without some basic rules, regulations and protections. But that is the difference between casino gambling in Massachusetts, and the new medical marijuana law.

For example, the state's casino gambling law has strong rules preventing organized crime or other criminal elements from opening, managing or even being associated with casinos. There are no such rules concerning who can open, manage or be associated with a medical marijuana shop in Massachusetts.

Gamblers must be 21 years of age, and show a photo ID. There are no such restrictions or requirements to purchase medical marijuana in Massachusetts.

Casinos face a 25 percent daily tax, with a portion of that money going to help pay for services for problem gamblers. Medical marijuana in Massachusetts will not be taxed.

Table games and slot machines in casinos will have to undergo regular independent testing to make sure they are not cheating customers. There are no "truth in labeling," or other consumer protection rules when it comes to the sale of medical marijuana in Massachusetts.

Casinos have to monitor possible problem gamblers, and maintain and share banned lists of gamblers. There will be no way of telling who buys what when it comes to medical marijuana in Massachusetts, even if that customer has a known substance abuse problem.

In addition, the medical marijuana law will take effect before cities and towns will have an opportunity to look at their zoning laws, and determine whether any changes need to be made in terms of where the facilities can be sited.

The medical marijuana law also gives the state Department of Public Health a hard deadline of 120 days to research, write, review, receive public comment, revise and then finalize a critical new sets of rules that will outline how, where, and when Massachusetts residents may receive a substance that is still considered illegal under federal law. Even if the Department weren't mired in a pair of massive scandals, 120 days to complete this work would be a highly ambitious deadline, if not practically infeasible nor arguably irresponsible.

Although the debate over casino gambling dragged out over several years, the end product – for good or bad — was one of the nation's most comprehensive casino gambling laws, that legalized the industry but in a well-regulated manner that attempts to protect the interests of the public.

In short, our public officials are currently being asked to place speed ahead of safety, thoroughness, and transparency for no reason aside from an arbitrary deadline chosen by the drafters of the ballot question.

The voters have made their voice clear; they want marijuana legalized for medicinal purposes in Massachusetts. It is also a viewpoint shared by many legislators. A nine-month delay is not obstruction; it's an opportunity to make sure Massachusetts gets it right the first time.

SENIOR SCENE

Looking forward to 2013

LOUISE SMULLEN

Here we are starting a New Year, 2013! We always hope it will be better than the year just past. Do you find that time is relative, and the older we become the more quickly time flies by?

At one of the seminars, presenters Patrick Kelleher and Matthew Cunningham, spoke to us concerning estate planning and capital preservation. The discussion included the subjects of healthcare proxy, durable power of attorney, wills and trusts. Many questions were asked and answered.

On Dec. 5 physical therapist Michael Britton spoke to the seniors gathered at the Center about avoiding injury during fall and winter. This is the time of year when injuries increase due to snow and icy conditions. Exercises to help with balance were demonstrated.

We continue to enjoy the complimentary lunches at Golden Living. In December they held a Christmas party with a roast beef dinner and professional entertainment. This month the lunch is scheduled for Jan. 29 at 12:30 p.m. If you wish to attend and need transportation, be sure to call the Center at 781-383-9112.

Don't forget Brown Bag lunch and Movie Day. This month it will be on Jan. 14. Bring your own lunch and the staff will supply soft drinks and popcorn. Sign up if you need transportation. Otherwise you may just drop in.

At our Christmas party we enjoyed the singing of a quartet comprised by Lilly Sestito, Kay Kelly, Doris Serall and Mary Ann Koslow. In addition to singing a few numbers as a group, they led us in a singalong. I especially enjoyed "The Twelve Days of Christmas" when each table was given the different parts to sing in turn.

Don't forget Brown Bag lunch and Movie Day. This month it will be on Jan. 14. This month the lunch is scheduled for Jan. 29 at 12:30 p.m.

The following week, with John Campbell playing the guitar, we had another singalong of popular Christmas songs as well as traditional carols. John's daughter, Catherine, joined him in singing a beautiful rendition of "Mary's Boy Child."

By popular demand the Monday morning coffee hour is continuing through the winter, weather permitting. It will take place during this time at Our Children's Museum located behind the Paul Pratt Library.

We wish everyone happiness and many blessings in the New Year.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Local resolutions and wellness

JON BELBER

At Holly Hill Farm, a resource for many a healthy vegetable, the ground is indeed quite frozen. The snow and ice have covered the fields and paths to the remaining produce left standing in the ground.

Many resolutions may well have been made (and hopefully not yet broken), as this is the time of year when people commit and promise to perhaps try and exercise more, eat more healthy food and generally do something to better their own and others' lives.

If one were to start with an effort to consume more healthy food, the effort may lead them right to the produce section of the local grocery store, to the nearest Whole Foods or to their local farm, which looks all but closed in winter.

At Holly Hill Farm, a resource for many a healthy vegetable, the ground is indeed quite frozen. The snow and ice have covered the fields and paths to the remaining produce left standing in the ground. A trip (with a walking stick) to the broccoli patch would yield a few small side shoots of broccoli florets. There would be enough to make a salad or warm them up by steaming a pot full. These plants and their leaves are quite hardy and able to handle even the cold temperatures we have now.

Nearby, under the light dusting of snow, one could find equally hardy tatsoi, whose leaves could also be put into a salad or lightly steamed. The case is similar for kale, chard and spinach. Those have a little extra growing strength, as they have hoops and plastic for an extra layer of protection. These vibrant dark greens and the fact that they are still barely available stems from a farmer's careful planning of knowing which crops have the ability to stick around well into the cold days. These crops also fall under the category of hardy annual, meaning these plants will send new leaves and growth as we have more daylight and hopefully some warmer degrees in late February.

When it comes to trying to eat healthy, many wise gardeners among us have also taken time in late fall to prepare for these cold days. Some folks still can their summer fruits of peaches, tomatoes, pickles née cucumbers and put up beets and beans, to name a few. I have several bowls, in a cool spot in the house, of winter squash, so named for their lasting qualities well into winter, so aptly named they are. Butternut, delicata and acorn are terrific roasting vegetables, also containing marvelous seeds for pan cooking, as one would pumpkin seeds.

Preparation and thinking ahead are the results of those in the know or who are able to draw from their past, perhaps as an elder practiced years ago. Many root crops, such as carrots, parsnips, turnips and beets who were not pickled wait patiently in a produce bag in a drawer in the fridge, holding their freshness and readiness for a crisp winter snack.

If it seems as if you have missed the boat on these tips, there is an increasing effort to feature farmers and their produce, artisans and their wares at winter farmers markets. Marshfield and Plymouth have these terrific markets once a month. It is a great excuse to revisit with a farmer you may know or get to know to find out what they have set aside and lasts well. These winter days are cold and challenging for a health seeking local, but there is still the need to eat and maybe resolve to eat more locally or in a healthy way.

To that end, when Holly Hill Farm hosts a nutrition and healthy snack workshop on January 10th in the warm greenhouse with lots of the aforementioned vegetables. We will feature as much as we can from the farm. So that means local, healthy and organic produce, in the depths of winter, with a nod to resolved wellness.

FOR THE RECORD

Taking a look at the big picture

GREGORY MATHIS

Our photos are for sale, but the idea is those photos are for personal use. The intention is the picture ends up in a frame and placed on a desk at work or hung on the wall for family and friends to see.

As the saying goes, a picture is worth 1,000 words.

I'll spare you and won't use that many words to describe our policy on purchasing photos, but we do get many requests for photographs so a brief explanation may answer some questions and clear up some confusion.

We take pride in the photographs produced in our newspapers and for our Wicked Local websites. Part of our philosophy always has been to provide as many photos from community events as possible, as well as high school sports, school events and even news photographs.

Going back a few years, in the day of film and darkrooms and before digital photography, many people were content to cut the photograph and the caption out of the newspaper. It may have ended up on the refrigerator for a few weeks and then find itself in a scrapbook or tossed in a box to be discovered years later.

As the industry's financial situation started to decline in the mid-1990s, publishers realized they might be able to make a few extra bucks by selling photographs. It was a lengthy and cumbersome process to get photos to customers, as it often involved photographers having to go back into the darkroom to make prints or bring the negatives to a photo shop. It sometimes took months for a reader to get a copy of the photo.

Purchasing photographs today is a lot quicker and much easier thanks to our website and digital photography. It also creates some challenges because those digital images theoretically can be easily shared.

Our photos are for sale, but the idea is those photos are for personal use. The intention is the picture ends up in a frame and placed on a desk at work or hung on the wall for family and friends to see.

The photographs for which we have the copyright are not intended to be used in advertisements or for commercial purposes, on political propaganda or on websites for other companies. And it is our general policy not to provide free copies of our photographs to be used for those and other purposes, just like we don't give away free copies of our paid newspapers. Both are valuable sources of revenue for our business.

With that said, it's easy to purchase photos. Each photo that's eligible for purchase online has the phrase "Purchase this photo" to the right under the photo. When you click on that, it will take you to an online order form. You'll see a number of options and price ranges for various size photographs, from four by six inches to 11 by 14 inches. Options also include having the photo put on a coffee mug, mouse pad or a T-shirt. We even have a photo puzzle with box (252 pieces) available for $45.

If you're intimidated by the online order form and would just like to speak to someone about a photograph you saw in the newspaper, you can call our photo reprint hotline at 866-746-8603 and a customer service representative can help you through the process.

While a picture might be worth 1,000 words, and maybe cost a few bucks, it also can be priceless when it captures that special moment for someone.

Selectmen offer new contract to Milanoski

Board seeks to keep ATM through Dec. 2013

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Acting Town Manager may soon sign a new contract to stay onboard with the town for an additional six months.

The Board of Selectmen voted 3-1 Tuesday night to offer ATM Michael Milanoski a new employment contract, effective Jul. 1, 2013, that would keep him onboard through Dec. 31, 2013 (selectman Martha Gjesteby voted 'nay' while selectman Fred Koed was absent). Milanoski's current contract is through the end of June; this is not an extension, however, but a brand-new contract starting on the first day of the new fiscal year.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis explained Tuesday that he has written a "good contract, an Acting Town Manager's contract."

The selectmen voted on whether to offer Milanoski a new contract during their open meeting, then convened in a closed session to further discuss the manner.

Gjesteby voted against offering a contract and recused herself from the closed session, because she did not see a copy of the new contract ahead of the meeting. DeRensis said he had emailed a copy to the five board members, but Gjesteby said her town email account was not working so she did receive it. She asked to receive hard copies for matters like this in the future. The board reconvened back in public session after nearly 40 minutes of discussion but did not make any announcements and adjourned the meeting.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson confirmed in a phone call Wednesday, "We offered Michael a contract. He has to look at it and review it with his attorney." In the meantime, said Carlson, Milanoski's current contract, ending in June, remains in effect.

The current contract came under scrutiny recently with some asking whether it was a legal contract, since Town Counsel wrote in a December letter that the contract was not "void as a whole" although parts of it were "unenforceable." DeRensis said Tuesday that the new contract is enforceable.

Selectmen debate

The selectmen have been trying to keep Milanoski onboard as an acting town manager for as long as possible, stating a need for stability in town government. A majority of the board has said they would like to make him a permanent town manager. However, Town Counsel has stated, according to the town's Town Manager Act (TMA), no acting town manager can take the job permanently.

Carlson stated that "numerous other attorneys" disagree, and say Milanoski is eligible. He added that the selectmen could seek a second opinion, or else decide for themselves whether Milanoski could become town manager or not.

The selectmen chair explained that he was in favor of keeping Milanoski onboard at least through Dec. 2013 to allow for a few important things to take place; by then, the town's Governance Committee, which has been charged at reviewing the TMA and recommending changes, might have recommendations ready for the April 22 Annual Town Meeting.

The Dec. 10, 2012 Special Town Meeting voted down a proposed change to the Act that would have allowed town employees or officials to become town manager; currently, the TMA prohibits any person in town government from eligibility unless they have vacated their position for a year.

Some who voted against the TMA change were trying to keep people like Milanoski, who previously served on the Governance Committee and Conservation Commission before accepting the appointment of Acting Town Manager, from getting the job; others said they simply wanted to wait until the Governance Committee had a complete list of proposed changes to vote on, rather than vote to change only one small section of the Act.

Since the Act is not a town by-law but a state law, any changes will have to be voted on by the state legislature. If the spring Town Meeting approves changes to the TMA, they could take effect in the summer. This means that, by the time Milanoksi's contract expires in December, he could be eligible for the permanent position.

"If he can stay here for three years, it would be a tremendous boost for the town."
Selectman Leland Jenkins

Carlson said that this part of the reason the selectmen would like to keep him until then. He also said the town might get through its lawsuit with former town manager Michael Coughlin, who was removed without cause in March 2012 after six months on the job and is suing the town for reinstatement.

The consensus among the four selectmen in favor of keeping Milanoski, instead of conducting a search for a new town manager, seemed to be that the town manager position would not be attractive to a good candidate, knowing that the town is embroiled in a lawsuit with a former town manager.

Selectmen co-chair Diane Kennedy said, "I have talked to the DOR (Dept. of Revenue) and other state agencies" who stressed, "you have to get stability in management... To have a seemingly revolving door among the staff in town, to constantly come into work and to not know what's going to hit you that day... I feel horribly; this board has failed for a while in controlling the narrative of this town. This is not a 'Scooby-Doo' episode... We tried to do the right thing at all turns to make decisions to bring stability to town."

Kennedy said the selectmen are "trying to keep this train a-rolling for better or for worse, like him or don't like him... I think we need to stay the course." She added that the board would "promise the community" to discuss opening up a search for a new town manager in the months ahead, but that she hoped Milanoski would be one of the candidates.

While selectman Gjesteby has stated that Milanoski is not a qualified town manager because he lacks the credentials or experience, selectman Leland Jenkins countered, "He's not a professional town manager, but he's a manager. The problem with town managers is they get tied up in the politics. Not Michael— he tries to get the job done."

Jenkins added that in his short time as acting town manager, Milanoski has implemented programs that needed to be done for years that will "bring us up to the 21st century. If he can stay here for three years, it would be a tremendous boost for the town."

Gjesteby said, regarding the need for stability among town employees, "I never found a problem with town employees... They're good, they work hard and are innovative in many ways. I don't think that's the issue... We hired someone for Acting Town Manager, but he was never vetted."

Gjesteby stated her position that the selectmen should issue a Request for Proposals (RFP) for a new town manager and keep Milanoski until June. She noted later in the meeting that the town could make the town manager job more attractive by offering a higher salary, saying that at around $130,000, Cohasset's starting salary is low compared to similar towns that pay in the $170,000-180,000 range.

Carlson responded that if they initiated a search now, Milanoski "couldn't be included" because of the prohibition in the TMA.

Other officials speak

The selectmen's office was packed with audience members, many of whom were there to speak for or against keeping Milanoski onboard as Acting Town Manager, or possibly making him a permanent town manager. Most of those speaking out were current or former town officials.

Peter Pescatore, Advisory Committee chair, commended Milanoski's ability to do the day-to-day town manager job and said that the acting town manager "demonstrates a wonderful grasp of municipal finance law, which is what is needed to be a town manager."

While adding that he and Milanoski have "butted heads many times," Pescatore said he finds the acting town manager to be "ethical and intelligent."

Jack Keniley of the Capital Budget Committee served on the town manager search committee that selected Coughlin as their top candidate for the town manager job in 2011. Keniley also serves on the Governance Committee and said, "Nothing in my read of the town manager act keeps the board of selectmen from appointing [Milanoski] for another six months. I think we could do it forever." Like some of the selectmen, Keniley agreed that starting a search now "would be a disaster" considering that the TMA could be changed and the Coughlin suit is ongoing.

"We would have to disclose [to potential candidates] that we're in a suit with a town manager who wants his job back," said Keniley. "What would happen if Coughlin prevails? We could be in for another four to five years of instability. Let's not be stupid."

Ralph Dormitzer, who is also on the Governance Committee, asked Town Counsel if the town would actually have to rehire Coughlin if he wins in court. DeRensis said that was inappropriate to discuss and was between the lawyers involved in the suit. Dormitzer rephrased his question more generally and asked, "Can we issue a search if there's an opportunity to hire someone back?"

"The answer is 'yes,'" said DeRensis.

Ronnie McMorris, Doane Street, urged the selectmen to "listen to all the views in the community and not dismiss those not in accordance with your own." She added that Town Meeting already decided against changing the TMA, and it was "disturbing" that the board was basically saying future changes were a done deal.

"It's not an open question any longer," she said of altering the Act. "You already have the decision; you may not like it, but the town did make a decision on that point."

Carlson responded that many people who voted against it said they wanted to see all the changes made at once, not piecemeal. "I don't think the vote was as crystal clear as you say it is."

Agnes McCann, Doane Street, agreed with McMorris. "It's as if you only listen to yourselves," she said to the selectmen. "Nobody but this board wants to revisit the town manager act. Why are we spending so much time trying to save the job for one individual? With all due respect to Michael Milanoski, he's not one in a million who can do this job, he's one of a million who can do this job."

Kennedy said that she "100 percent disagreed" and that she listens to people all of the time, and also did not feel that the TMA change proposed at Special Town Meeting was even about Milanoski.

Kennedy also wanted to dispel the notion that the selectmen seemingly handpicked Milanoski for the job when they appointed him last February, after Coughlin was suspended. Kennedy said that the board "reached out to about six people," including town employees and former finalists for the town manager job, and were looking for someone to sign off on payroll at the time.

"We were in a difficult situation," said Kennedy. "Michael was available and willing."

Milanoski started out as a volunteer before the selectmen offered him a stipend. They later offered him a contract with a salary.

Kennedy said the selectmen "had no master plan to pluck somebody... This was not, 'Let's go get our buddy and take over the town.' I'm tired of hearing that... I'm tired of him being bullied and picked on... He's done a good job, we've been keeping him on, that's the simple story. If you want a different story, you'll have to imagine it."

Carlson said the selectmen reviewed Milanoski six months into the job and were impressed by his work, which is when they voted to extend his contract. "We've had much better management than in the five and a half years I've been on the board," said Carlson.

When Karen Quigley, Clayspring Road, said she found it "disconcerting" for the board to continue employing Milanoski with a contract that Town Counsel called unenforceable, DeRensis responded, "I have given you a contract that's lawful and meets the requirements of an acting town manager. It's not the same contract; it's in effect on July 1 for six months, and the provisions would be enforceable."

The selectmen voted 3-1 to offer Milanoski the new contract, with Gjesteby voting against. After the positive vote, several audience members who had spoken support for Milanoski burst into applause.

TOWN TECH

Phase one of tech plan partially funded

Selectmen to use Avalon grant

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The first phase of the town-wide technology plan that covers both town offices and the schools, as proposed by Chief Technology Officer Rob Bonnell, will soon be underway.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski identified a new funding source for the project, which was going to be voted on during the Dec. 10 Special Town Meeting in a warrant article concerning the expenditure of the town's Free Cash, as certified by the state Department of Revenue (DOR) for fiscal year 2013. Article 6, however, was thrown out on the town meeting floor after a voter identified a flaw in the warrant. This meant that the use of the nearly $1 million in free cash could not be voted on until the Annual Town Meeting in April.

Phase one of the tech plan, which includes new computers and security upgrades, costs around $250,000 and would have been covered by the free cash. Officials who supported the plan, including Milanoski and members of the Board of Selectmen, Advisory, Capital Budget and School committees, expressed disappointment after Article 6 was indefinitely postponed, thus delaying the project's implementation.

During the Dec. 19 School Committee meeting, Milanoski discussed having the schools expend $70,000 to get the project going, but School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro had concerns about spending that much money this early in the school's budget cycle. School Committee chair Jeanne Astino agreed that it was a bad idea.

This week, Milanoski presented his new plan ("Plan D," he called it) to both the selectmen and school board, explaining how the first $100,000 of the tech project will be funded in the next few months, before the spring Town Meeting.

The funds will come from the Avalon Bay luxury apartment project. Milanoski explained how the company owes the town around $250,000. When the company started building the complex in Cohasset, they agreed to provide the town with $350,000 to improve the intersection of Sohier Street and Route 3A and improve sidewalks along 3A. Any design or permitting work done was to be deducted from the $350,000.

Former town engineers, the "Greenbush Guys" Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber, were involved with the sidewalk project, and according to Milanoski less than $100,000 was expended on preliminary design work; Avalon then owed the town a little over $250,000.

However, the town manager and former selectmen chair Ted Carr, who now serves on the Economic Development Committee, met with Avalon several times, said Milanoski, and Avalon was willing to consider absorbing the money spent on design and would give the town the total $350,000.

Milanoski said that he and Director of Project Management and Planning Brian Joyce met with an engineering firm at 7:30 Tuesday morning at the intersection of Sohier and 3A to evaluate options for improving the intersection and sidewalks. They plan to discuss options with the Planning Board and MassDOT soon.

Avalon is also giving Cohasset a gift of $150,000 for the selectmen to use at their discretion for "meaningful purposes" to make the town "a better place," said Milanoski.

While the $350,000 from Avalon is earmarked for improving the sidewalks and intersection, Milanoski said that $100,000 of Avalon's gift would be used to get the tech plan started. Of the $100,000, $70,000 will be used to replace 10-year-old computer workstations in the schools while $30,000 will be used for security upgrades.

Selectman Diane Kennedy wondered why the town couldn't spend the total $150,000 on the project, since that amount is "a lot less" than the cost of phase one ($250,000). Milanoski said that they "can always come back to that," but that the $100,000 is the amount needed to "get the momentum going."

The town manager said he asked Bonnell, the CTO, what the immediate need would be in the next 60 to 90 days to get the project started; "This is the number," Milanoski said of the $100,000.

The selectmen voted unanimously to accept the funds. Under Mass. General Laws 44, section 53A, the selectmen can accept and expend these funds as a grant or gift without a Town Meeting vote.

Advisory chair Peter Pescatore said later in the selectmen's meeting that Milanoski's ability to identify this funding source for the tech project "demonstrates his grasp of municipal finance law."

School security

The town manager had a separate discussion on the tech plan with the School Committee Wednesday night. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo started the discussion by explaining the need for upgraded security in the schools.

One of the items the tech project will fund is installing the software LobbyGuard in all the schools. This will change the way visitors sign in; everyone will be required to show identification.

Milanoski explained that the details of other security upgrades, including surveillance cameras, could not be discussed publicly. Some of the funds will also pay for consultants to come in and develop new protocol and procedures for dealing with intruders and other security threats.

Cataldo said that she has been meeting with the public safety department, Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Deputy Police Chief William Quigley, as well as CTO Bonnell to discuss the best options for improving security across the district. She also said that the schools' emergency plan book would soon be updated.

Much of the discussion on security centered around last month's school shooting in Newtown, Conn.

"Our world changed with the tragedy down in Newtown," said Milanoski. The new tech plan will help "provide a safer environment for our children and move the town forward."

Officials irate over email

State ethics board to review matter

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Martha Gjesteby, the selectman who allegedly sent the email, said that she felt entitled to be heard through her attorney, Brandon Moss of the law firm Murphy, Hesse, Toomey and Lehane.

The selectmen are turning in one of their own to the State Ethics Commission for allegedly leaking confidential information via email.

The matter was discussed vaguely during the first Board of Selectmen meeting of the year on Tuesday, Jan. 8. The meeting's agenda described as the discussion as "procedural steps by the board related to open meeting regulations in response to the unauthorized release (Mass. General Laws 268A) of confidential attorney client privileged information."

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said during the meeting that the matter concerned "one member" of the selectmen sending an email to a "non-member" that contained sensitive content, but that the content would not be discussed publicly.

Carlson said the board had three options to consider: holding a formal hearing in a closed session to decide on what "sanctions" should be taken; submitting the matter to the State Ethics Commission for their review; or letting the issue slide.

A majority of the selectmen was in favor of the ethics route. Selectmen co-chair Diane Kennedy said that she did not feel qualified to rule on the matter and that it was best left to the ethics board.

"I feel very uncomfortable," said Kennedy. "I don't feel I have the information base to make a judgment as to what the breach was... I can't function as a juror of my peers." She was in favor of letting the state authorities "decide if it's a big deal or not."

Selectman Leland Jenkins said the issue was "non-political" and agreed that the Attorney General's office should review the matter.

Martha Gjesteby, the selectman who allegedly sent the email, said that she felt entitled to be heard through her attorney, Brandon Moss of the law firm Murphy, Hesse, Toomey and Lehane.

Moss explained that the email in question dealt with a "public records issue," and involved his client seeking legal advice. He said that calling the matter a violation of the AG's Open Meeting Law (OML) was a "stretch."

Moss added that the section of the MGL the board was referring to, 268A, does not deal specifically "with a public official's attempts to seek guidance."

Kennedy said that she was still hesitant to make a decision on the matter, wanting to defer to the ethics board. "It's a very fine line," she said. "It makes us nervous."

Gjesteby said that she planned on also filing a complaint against her fellow board members with the ethics board, claiming an OML violation during the Dec. 18, 2012 meeting. The selectmen met in executive at the close of public session during that meeting, and while the agenda stated that employee contracts would be discussed during the session, it did not specify which contract.

Gjesteby added, "I'm objective of people going into and reading [email], that's part of the issue here. Town accounts shouldn't be readily available... for people to look in there. It's a very serious situation; there's a lot of stuff that's privileged. There should be a rule on that."

Gjesteby said later in the meeting that she felt that the matter of "other employees trolling through" town officials' emails was "the real issue" at hand.

While some have speculated in online blogs that Milanoski has been "trolling through" town email accounts, he denied doing so in a phone call Wednesday.

"I assure you that I as town manager do not have access to review other employees' or officials' emails, nor have I."

Carlson said that all emails sent between town employees and officials are public documents, and those with town email accounts "have no right to privacy."

Agnes McCann, Doane Street, commented that she was surprised to learn that "anybody can go into anybody's email" without written consent, and was confused how the matter of Gjesteby's email could have come up during the Dec. 18 executive session involving contract negotiations. "This is more character-related."

Carlson responded, "We're discussing it now." The selectmen chair added that he agreed with Kennedy and Jenkins that the selectmen should not decide the matter; however, at the same time, "I also don't believe this release should be ignored."

The selectmen voted 3-1 to submit the matter to the ethics commission, with Gjesteby voting against (selectman Fred Koed was absent).

Later, during the selectmen's comment period, Gjesteby stated that she planned to file her own complaint with the ethics commission, claiming that the selectmen violated the OML.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis asked Gjesteby to talk with her lawyer about refraining from releasing the email document as part of the complaint form in order to protect attorney client privilege.

"If [the email is] attached to what she's releasing today, that defense will be gone," DeRensis explained.

Moss responded that the email does not contain a notification of attorney client privilege, and said that a public records request for the email would be a separate issue. DeRensis asked them to at least refrain from releasing the email document to the press.

"I ask the board not to release it to the public at this point," said DeRensis. "It should go to the attorney general or law enforcement agency to decide... but not tonight; not in this manner."

Gjesteby recused herself from the board's executive session at the end of the public meeting and adjourned to a room near the selectmen's office with her attorney.

'Visual Poetry' exhibit opens Friday at SSAC

South Shore Art Center is mounting an exhibition of work by six of the Center's Gallery Artists in the Dillon Gallery. Titled Visual Poetry, the exhibition blurs the lines between text and image, narrative and pure formal composition. Using ephemera, nostalgic imagery and a playful use of mixed media, these six artists push the limits of collage. An opening reception, open to the public at no charge, will be held on Friday, Jan. 11, from 6 to 8 p.m. The show will continue through Feb. 17.

Included in Visual Poetry are Marion Carlson, Abington; Elizabeth Lilly, Hull; Joe Norris, Stoughton; Stephanie Roberts-Camello, Pembroke; Regina Thomas, New Haven, Conn. and Mary Wilkas, Hanover. Showing in the Center's Bancroft Gallery will be secrets, an exhibition juried by Boston artist Ed Stitt.

The Manning Lobby will showcase the work of SSAC faculty member Laurinda O'Connor of Milton. Laurinda teaches drawing and painting to middle school students at the Art Center.

Haggerty notches 1,000th point in rout

Captain drops 37 on Monomoy

Call it a going-away present for Shane Haggerty.

With three road games up next on the schedule, Haggerty gave the Cohasset High boys basketball fans a thrill Tuesday night, pouring in a career-high 37 points in a 64-34 blowout of Monomoy Regional.

Point No. 36 on the night gave him 1,000 for his career.

"I definitely wanted to do it tonight," Haggerty said of the milestone, "because it was in front of all the fans and students. I didn't know if I was going to get it, though, because that's a lot of points. But it ended up happening."

Powers nets four in win over Hull

The Cohasset Mariner

Sophomore forward Jeff Powers scored four goals, and the Cohasset boys hockey team needed every one of them to hold off an improved Hull team in a 6-4 Skipper win Saturday night at Weymouth's Connell Rink.

Powers scored twice in the first period and added two more in the third, including the game-winner, to lead Cohasset.

Cohasset coach Bob Walsh was pleased with Powers' play, and the way his netminder stood up when the game was on the line.

WRESTLING

Young squad has big start

Grapplers battle to 8-5 beginning

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Whi¹ the Cohasset wrestling team has struggled with numbers this season, the results on the mats have been pretty good.

After Wednesday night's 40-33 win at Scituate, the Skippers checked in at 8-5, and had a good showing at their own Cohasset Wrestling Tournament over the weekend, finishing sixth in the 10-team field.

For the Skippers, freshman Drew Skolnick finished fifth at 106, while teammate Sean Kearns finished sixth in the 106 division.

"We were able to get them both in the same division," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "It was a good experience for them."

At 120, senior captain Greg Berube finished fifth, while freshman Sean Mavilia was fourth at 126, winning twice on the day.

Also finishing fourth was junior Joe Sestito at 132.

Sophomore Matt Froio finished third at 170, and Mike Livingstone notched the top Skipper performance of the day with a second-place finish at 182.

Against Scituate, Livingstone clinched the victory with a pin.

Berube was a winner at 120, and Mavilia picked up another win at 126.

Junior Chandler Skolnick took the 154 weight class and Froio helped the cause with a win at 170.

For Sweeney, the season has been a new type of challenge.

"We're very young," he said.

Shane is a joy to coach, a wonderful young man and a hard worker. He's one of the better players in my career.

Cohasset boys basketball coach Bo Ruggiero

Haggerty scored his 1,000th career point in Jan., but to get there he had a huge December. He scored 20 in a win over Carver, 30 in a win over Abington, 14 in a loss to Norwell, 20 against Hull, 24 against Avon and 27 in the tournament championship game against Blackstone, where he was named Tournament MVP.

forward, had 6 points in the first quarter, 11 in the second, 10 in the third and 10 in the fourth.

He reached 1,000 points on a layup with 3:40 left in the game and thanked senior point guard Christian Davis for the assist. Haggerty was fouled on the play, but before he sank the free throw (he was 9 of 13 from the line) the game was briefly halted for an on-court ceremony.

Haggerty is the first Skipper to join the 1,000-point club since point guard Robert Jones two years ago.

"Shane's a four-year starter for me," coach Bo Ruggiero said. "He's just a player."

Haggerty's brother, Chris, a junior, is on the team. Other family members in the stands Tuesday night included Mom and Dad, two sisters and grandparents.

"It feels good" to get it over with, Haggerty said. "Everyone's been asking me every day about it – how many points do I need? It was a lot better getting it at home, too."

Said Ruggiero: "I'm extremely happy for Shane and the entire Haggerty family. It's been a great run so far for him."

Joe Buckley and Henry Brown each added 10 points for Cohasset (8-2, 5-2 South Shore League). The Skippers raced out to a 14-2 lead and were ahead 33-10 at halftime.

Sunday, the Skippers relied on Haggerty in a 70-50 win over Southeastern Regional.

Shane Haggerty's dominance in the fourth quarter Sunday night propelled the host Cohasset High boys basketball team past Southeastern Regional, 70-50.

The 6-foot senior captain scored 13 of his 32 total points during the final period, allowing Cohasset to cruise to victory in a game that was played much closer until that point.

Cohasset trailed Southeastern, 16-15, after one quarter, but once they were able to establish their press, the Skippers exploded. By halftime the hosts had a seemingly comfortable lead, 37-24.

Southeastern would not go without a fight, though. Led by freshmen Trey Londen (12 points) and Deshon Texeira (10), the Hawks tightened up their defense while outscoring the Skippers, 19-12, chipping the lead down to 49-45 going into the fourth.

Also playing well for Cohasset was Shane's younger brother Chris, who in his first varsity start scored 11 points while going 7-for-7 at the free-throw line.

"Chris has always been our sixth man, and he came in and played great tonight, and Shane has been our leader this year," said Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero. "I'm very happy to have the Haggertys playing Cohasset basketball."

As a freshman, Haggerty averaged 7 points per game.

He improved to 10 ppg in his sophomore season and followed with 17 per game in his junior year.

Shane was a South Shore League all-star as both a sophomore and a junior. In his sophomore season and he helped lead his team to a South Sectional title and a spot in the State Championship game at the Garden.

In his junior season, Haggerty not only led Cohasset with 17 points, he also led the team in assists and steals as the Skippers won 16 games.

"Shane has been involved in 52 wins for us," Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero said. "Coming into this season, he needed 217 points. I had no idea he'd get them so quickly."

He's averaged 20 ppg this season, and fans were there when he was going after the big 1,000.

"At the game, there was great support," Ruggiero said. "They had a countdown board for him. He needed 36. They held him to 6 in the first. I didn't think he'd get it. Then we pressed and went up 14-6. He added 11 in the second period and we had 19 as a team.

"In the third period we went with our normal eight or nine man rotation and went up by 10 in the final period. In the fourth, he got fouled three times in a row, then he came down on a fast break and got a nice feed from his best friend, Christian Davis. He pulled it out to the left side got fouled and made the basket."

At that point, the game stopped for a presentation, then Haggerty went to the line and notched the free-throw for his 37th point of the game.

"It was like a Rockwell scene," Rugiero said. "His whole family was there. He's had a great career and a great season to date."

The Skippers are at Mashpee on Friday.

front of the net, he makes things happen," he said. "I'm proud of the effort our goalie Alex Kent gave us tonight. He stood tall in the second and third periods which gave us the opportunity to score the goals we needed to win this game."

The first period action looked like a jousting match between Hull's senior defenseman Jake Mahoney and Powers with Powers scoring first at 5:35 followed by Mahoney's first about one minute later with a blistering slap shot.

Mahoney followed up with another blast about one-and-a-half minutes later putting Hull in the lead. It took a little over three minutes until Powers sliced a backhander by Hull's goalie Brian Chase; to tie it up.

Then came a flurry of goals with about one minute left in the period when Hull's Pat Richardson, (this time assisted by Mahoney), beat Cohasset goalie Alex Kent.

Walsh appreciated Mahoney's work, and the overall improvement of the Pirates.

"The Hull Pirates have a much stronger team this year and Jake Mahoney has a heck of a shot from the blue line," he said. "Coach Mark Concannon has really put his guys in a positon where anyone taking them for granted is going to get a boot in the butt."

Mahoney blasted one more about 10 seconds later putting Hull up 4-2 when Cohasset junior forward Colin Whelan scored to end the period with Hull in the lead 4-3.

The second period was scoreless, despite a number of penalties and power plays on each side, leaving Cohasset heading into the third down 4-3.

In the third period, the Skippers appeared to wake up and realize that they were losing and needed to do something about it when Powers went back into action about three minutes into the period scoring his third of the night.

Two quick changes by the Skippers put Powers out again for his fourth tally (and game winner), of the night about one minute later. Cohasset got an insurance goal from junior assistant captain Chris Cohen at 11:31 of the third period to put Cohasset up 6-4.

Cohasset had a tough one Wednesday night, falling 7-4 to Norwell at the Bog.

The Skippers trailed 5-0 with 13:38 left, then scored two goals in 1:30. They scored again with 5:09 left to play to cut the lead to 7-3, and added another with 10 seconds left to play.

"We have five seniors, but they don't all have a lot of experience. We're filling 14 weight classes with freshmen and sophomores. It's challenging with 17 guys, especially when there's sickness or injury.

"It's been more back to basics. From a teaching standpoint there's a lot of work to do skill-wise. That's driven by the age and experience of the kids. Some of the younger kids have held some exciting matches. It's nice to see the progress. It may be slow, but it's there. There are flashes of good athletic wrestling. We're working on consistency, on the basics every day."

Sweeney was pleased with the win at Scituate.

"It was a very good win," he said. "We had a couple of guys sick and a couple hurt. I'm pleased. I'm very pleased to be 8-5 with this group."

GIMME SHELTER

Being a young teenager in cat years, Midnight is very strong, full of life, lots of fun and will need a forever home where he can be entertained and know that he's getting proper attention. COURTESY PHOTO

Midnight is a true prince

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Holding Midnight, giving him lots of love and making him comfortable and will be a great opportunity to bond with him forever.

It is always a curious thing when a young, handsome and striking black cat arrives at the shelter. Thinking back to historic times, Egyptians revered cats and believed that they could capture the glow that we see when sun is setting and keep it safely inside them until dawn. Thus the glowing gold and bronze eyes of an ebony cat.

When Midnight came to us, from a situation that certainly did not include such grand ideas and love, it was easy to see he had the looks and the "walk" of a regal cat. He is a 10-month-old Siamese mix, and when you see him, it is clear that he has that breed and perhaps more. Midnight's muscular build and athletic ability are much like a Bombay as well.

This is a feline who loves to run, play and pounce. Beware any toy or object that is tossed or dangled! Midnight will be on it in an instant. Being a young teenager in cat years, he is very strong, full of life, lots of fun and will need a forever home where he can be entertained and know that he's getting proper attention. As it is with cats, he will expect it!

Once his need for playtime is done, he loves having a good neck rub and will emit a wonderful purr as he stares back at you almost like he is thanking you for giving your time and love. Holding Midnight, giving him lots of love and making him comfortable and will be a great opportunity to bond with him forever. He is a keeper.

He does have a quirky side and has learned to make himself invisible. There are days when you might have to check under a comforter or blanket to find this funny feline. Just seeing those bright eyes in the dark space he has found brings a smile and a chuckle. Midnight is a true gem.

While living at HSAR, he has had a constant buddy from day one. You may have read about our Teddy 2 weeks ago. Well, these two boys are about the same age and hang out together like kids on the corner. If there is a single or family who might be interested in two great guys, this pairing is very sweet.

Starting the new year with a new family member would be wonderful and Midnight is a great choice. Come by and visit him during Open Hours on Mondays from 6:30-7:30 or Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. at Hull Seaside Animal rescue at 50 L St, in Hull or by appointment. Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Midnight. You can also reach us or leave a message at 781-925-3121 or visit our website at www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets to view more of our cats and kittens who are waiting for forever homes.

The donation bins have been brimming with supplies for our residents and we are so thankful to all of you for your support. The past weekend was a pretty busy with NFL parties and we have been very lucky to have many more bottle and can drop offs! It is a great way to help us and all of the money collected helps us to pay rent and other bills. With the Patriots playing this weekend, keep us in mind.

There are still a handful of 2013 Kittendales calendars available for purchase at the shelter so stop in during Open Hours for one last New Year's gift!

As we move forward into the winter's cold and the guarantee of snowy weather there will be more animals facing uncertain circumstances. It is not easy for many cats and kittens, and we are always hoping for special families who have the heart and commitment to provide a special feline a new forever home. Older cats are finding their way to us and make wonderful senior companions. If you or someone you know could give a deserving kitty a fresh start, please contact us. They need just as much love and attention as the little ones, maybe even more. Animals cannot fathom why they end up in a shelter and we do everything possible to keep them safe and secure, but a real home is so much better.

Thank you to all of our volunteers who have been at the shelter through the holidays and always lend a hand when needed. It is a community effort and we are always looking for new members who have the love and compassion necessary to spend time helping with the care of all of the cats and kittens waiting for homes. If you are looking for a new way of giving, please consider our organization.

Our newsletter has information and stories about what is happening at Hull Seaside and if you are not on our mailing list, please call or e-mail hsar@verizon.net to have your name added or drop by to pick up a copy.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JAN. 7, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Guess what, Lamb? You're about to experience a new perspective on a situation you long regarded quite differently. What you learn could open more opportunities later.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Bold Bovine is tempted to charge into a new venture. But it might be best to take things one step at a time, so that you know just where you are at any given point.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's a good time to go on that fun getaway you've been planning. You'll return refreshed, ready and, yes, even eager to tackle the new challenge that awaits you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The Moon Child loves to fantasize about magical happenings in the early part of the week. But the sensible Crab gets down to serious business by week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) What goes around comes around for those lucky Leos and Leonas whose acts of generosity could be repaid with opportunities to expand into new and exciting areas of interest.

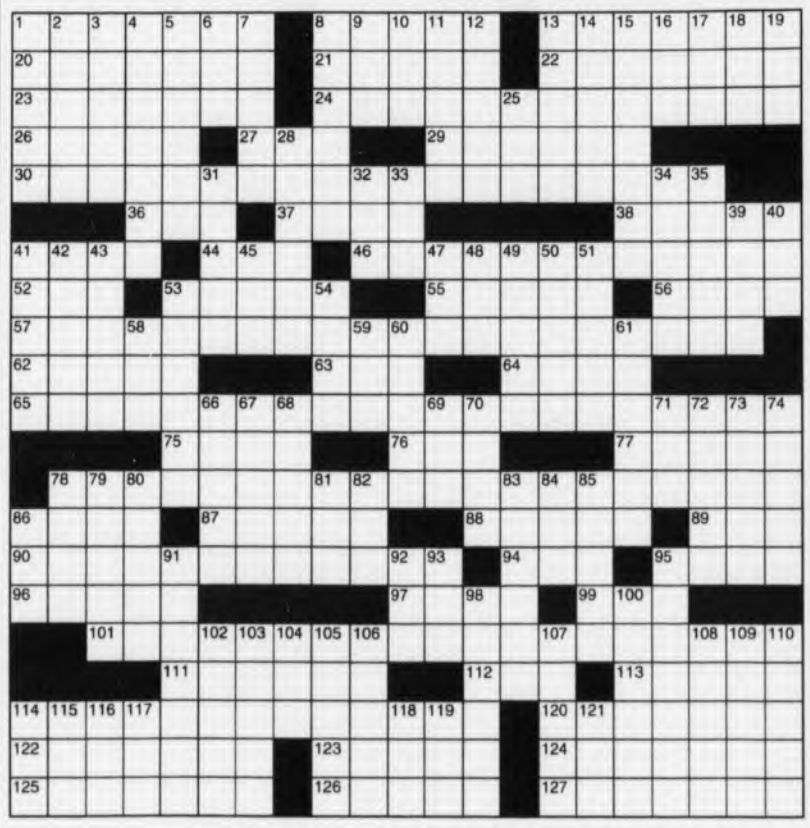
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your concern about your job responsibilities is commendable. But you need to take some quiet time to share with someone who has really missed being with you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Aspects favor getting out and meeting new people. And as a bonus, you might find that some of your newly made friends could offer important business contacts.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might take pride in wanting to do everything yourself. But now's a good time to ask family members to help with a demanding personal situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Pay more attention to the possibilities in that workplace change. It could show the way to make that long-sought turn on your career path.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your need to succeed might overwhelm obligations to your loved ones. Ease up on that workload and into some well-deserved time with family and friends.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Love rules for amorous Aquarians who can make good use of their ability to communicate feelings. Don't be surprised if they're reciprocated in kind.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Fishing for compliments? No doubt, you probably earned them. But it's best to let others believe they were the ones who uncovered the treasure you really are.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your good works flow from an open, generous heart. Nothing makes you happier than to see others happy as well.

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

NEW NORTH CHURCH

'Heatless Sundays' help needy families

New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham (across from the Lincoln statue), is asking the public to support its fuel assistance program, now in its 10th year, to help hard-pressed South Shore families cope with their heating bills. Since 2003, New North's Heatless Sundays have highlighted the difficulties faced by area families who for one reason or another are not served by government-sponsored fuel assistance programs.

The church teams with two local oil dealers, the Alvin Hollis Co. and Williams Coal and Oil, to provide assistance to homeowners in Hingham and other South Shore towns who are having trouble paying their fuel bills. Money raised by the church is supplemented by donations from the fuel dealers, providing a "free tank of oil" for households that need help.

"This is a purely volunteer program with zero administrative costs. Every dollar donated ends up as oil in the fuel tank of a South Shore family in need," New North pastor the Rev. Bill Turpie said. "Our fuel program in conjunction with partners Alvin Hollis and the Williams Companies has been a vital stopgap in keeping many people from suffering unduly."

This year as in prior years, New North will leave the Sanctuary in its historic meetinghouse at 1 Lincoln St., unheated on the second Sundays of January, February and March. The money saved by not heating the sanctuary will be combined with proceeds from special collections taken at the "heatless" services and donations from the public.

On these Heatless Sundays, the first of which will be Jan. 13, the 10:30 a.m. worship service will take place in the Ruth Curry parlor in the parish house at the rear of building.

"Our 'Heatless Sundays' are all about helping our neighbors," said Rev. Turpie. "Anyone who would like to support this program is invited to send a tax-deductible donation to New North Church/Fuel Assistance Effort, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham, MA 02043."

New North is an interdenominational Christian community church that welcomes people from all religious traditions as visitors and members.

Making the Most of Financial Aid Opportunities

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

As a parent who's put one child through college and has two more in line, I know applying for financial aid to fund your loved ones' higher education, or your own, can seem onerous.

At UMass Boston, we award more than $132 million in financial aid to our students every year. We are experts on financial aid, so I'd like to share a few tips.

Beginning this month, the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) will be available to students applying for financial aid for fall 2013. The FAFSA is the first step in applying for financial aid from all sources: federal, state, and institutional funds. Complete it online at www.fafsa.ed.gov.

Completing the FAFSA is free, but you will need to electronically sign the application using a federal PIN number. Apply for your PIN early at www.pin.ed.gov.

The FAFSA provides the colleges and universities you're applying to with information needed to determine your eligibility for grants and waivers (free money), student loans (money that must be repaid), and federal work-study (money you earn working part-time on campus). You can complete just one FAFSA and have it sent to as many schools as you like. Check with the campuses to which you are applying to ensure that you are meeting all of their application requirements.

Last year, filing the FAFSA became a little easier: An IRS Data Retrieval Tool allows you to pull financial information into the FAFSA directly from your federal tax forms. To use this tool, you must wait two weeks after filing your federal tax return electronically (six to eight weeks if you are filing by mail), and you must be eligible for a tax refund, with a tax filing status of single, married filing jointly, or head of household.

To receive the maximum amount of aid available to you, it is important that you submit your FAFSA by the school's deadline. UMass Boston's priority deadline is March 1 for new students. You should not wait for an admission decision before applying for financial aid.

Upon receiving your FAFSA, the university will provide you with a financial aid award letter that details the types and amount of aid you are eligible to receive; UMass Boston's letters will be mailed the week of March 18. Your awards may include student loans, which you are not required to accept. If your grants and waivers (free money) are enough to cover your costs, then you may choose to decline student loans.

If you'd like help with the FAFSA, be sure to take advantage of FAFSA Day, January 27, at 1 p.m. At a number of locations throughout the state, financial aid professionals will offer free assistance in completing the FAFSA. Locations can be found online at http://www.fafsaday.org/locations.php.

Big raise, new contract for Milanoski

Agreement signed by four of five selectmen

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen signed a new employment contract with Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski on Tuesday, Jan. 15. Milanoski has been working as acting town manager since March 2012, replacing former town manager Michael Coughlin, who was fired after only six months on the job.

The selectmen voted 3-1 during their Jan. 8 meeting last week to offer Milanoski a new contract and discussed it during an executive session following the public meeting. The board reconvened in public after the executive discussion but did not make any statements. Selectmen chair Paul Carlson confirmed in a phone call the following day that the selectmen offered Milanoski the new contract.

The board met in executive before their public meeting on Jan. 15 and announced during the public portion that they had approved the new contract between the town and Milanoski. The selectmen voted 4-1 to approve the contract; Selectman Martha Gjesteby was the dissenting vote.

The new contract is not an extension of Milanoski's most recent contract, which had him employed through the end of June 2013; this is a brand new contract with a pay increase from $132,000 to $150,000.

Carlson said Tuesday, "This contract will supersede the existing contract and extend [Milanoski] through the end of the calendar year 2013."

The selectmen chair added that Milanoski has made "an incredible effort" in leading the town since he took the helm last March.

Selectman Leland Jenkins echoed comments he made last week, saying that he feels Milanoski "has gone above and beyond the call of duty... He's been proactive in setting policies and procedures

Dreams take flight:

Tuskegee Airman shares his story

Jack Bryant to speak at Dr. King breakfast

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Growing up in Dowagiac, Michigan, Jack Bryant knew he wanted to be a pilot. According to Jack, every kid growing up in the 1930s "just wanted to fly." He collected model airplanes, which he hung all over his bedroom.

But unlike every kid who has a dream, Jack is someone who got to live it. In 1945, at the age of 18, Jack entered the Army Air Corps and began training to become a Tuskegee airman.

Joining the military the same month he graduated high school was scary and intimidating, but Jack had someone leading the way — his older brother, Joseph, a B-25 bomber pilot. Joseph, who was two years his senior, helped Jack prepare to face the challenges of the rigorous training program at the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, the training center for all black fighter pilots during Word War II.

Jack Bryant stands in his hallway filled with mementos of his service with the Tuskegee Airmen during World War II. The pictures include his brother, Jospeh C. Bryant, Jr., who served as a pilot of a B25 with the Tuskegee Airmen. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

It was the only option for young African-American men who wanted to serve their country at the time. As Jack, 85, explained, when segregation of blacks and whites was in full force, the only positions available to blacks in the military were in food service or hospitality.

"At that time, the only categories that an African-American could serve in the Navy were as a cook or a steward; in the Army, he could only be in the quartermaster's corp. There were no officers," said Jack.

Joseph heard about the flight training program in Tuskegee, Alabama, enlisted, and eventually "got his wings." Jack joined him two and a half years later.

"I became of age and I wanted to follow in my brother's footsteps... I asked him for help to get into the program, and he helped me immensely," Jack said, which was no small feat. "You had to take a pilot's test — many of the draft boards would not give you the pilot's test. Some people went to 12 different draft boards to volunteer to serve their country, and they wouldn't give them the test... I had to travel over 100 miles to go take my test. That's crazy. Anyway," he said, cracking a smile, "I passed the test."

RED LION INN

More rooms at the inn?

Abutters oppose new development

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Plans to build two brand-new condominium units behind the Red Lion Inn (James Lane and South Main Street) have been floated informally at a few Planning Board meetings. This Tuesday, the preliminary plans came before the Board of Selectmen, and neighbors were there to express their dismay at the possible new development.

The proposition is to build two three-story condo units that would each house 20 apartments, along with 40 corresponding parking spaces. Each building would have six 755 square-foot one bedroom units and one 540 square-foot studio on the first and second floors, and six 590 square-foot one-bedrooms on the third floor. Each unit would also have a kitchenette.

The Mariner caught up with Dr. Harvey Dickstein this week. Harvey is the guest speaker for the Historical Society Wednesday Lecture Series on Wed., Jan. 23. His topic is the World War II D-Day invasion of Normandy with a concentration on Omaha Beach titled "No Sacrifice Too Great." This program will be held at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., beginning at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome and light refreshments will be served!

Harvey Dickstein

ONLY IN PRINT

Name: Harvey Dickstein.

Occupation: Retired physician.

Best day of your life: Our wedding day 46 years ago. When I look at photos of the event there has never been such a broad smile on my face.

Best vacation: A Baltic cruise we took some years ago. It was our first cruise. I'd visited most of the countries on business trips previously, but we saw a much more appealing aspect of each. The local group we traveled with enhanced the fun with their congeniality.

Favorite season: I used to look forward to skiing season at our condo in Bretton Woods and at other resorts, especially ski racing, but as I've grown older I am more comfortable with summer and my golf game.

Favorite holiday: Christmas because we either visit our family, none of whom are nearby, or they come to us.

Favorite junk food/meal: Deep dish pizza. I grew to like this when we lived in Lake Forest, Illinois. Chicagoland is particularly rich in restaurants which have perfected the preparation of this delightful food.

Best book/magazine: My favorite book as a child was "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland." One of my favorite golf instructors talks about getting deeper into the rabbit hole. I also like "People Magazine" because I enjoy gossip.

Best movie: "The Longest Day" because it had the largest collection of stars of any movie.

Best TV show: "Jeopardy" because of its intellectual challenge. I try to watch it regularly.

Best music group or artist: "ABBA". "Mamma Mia" the movie butchered their music, but we saw the play twice and it was great. There was a Swedish group that came to the "Music Circus" twice, performing their music and we saw them both times. They were also very good. If the original group were still performing I'd go to Sweden to see them.

Pet peeve: People who don't follow the rules.

Most embarrassing moment: As much as we tried to train him, Aidan, our Sheltie, started visiting other dogs off the property. We would receive calls about him and would go to collect him. When he strayed across the street and was returned by a good neighbor our embarrassment turned to real concern, so we now have him contained with an "Invisible Fence".

Fun fact: I graduated from high school in the lower quarter of my class and left my first year of college on academic probation. In spite of this dismal record I still managed to graduate from medical school.

Goal: To maintain good health and reasonable physical condition so I can achieve a good golf game.

Person you'd most like to meet: I think it would be wonderful if I could get together with both Woody Allen and Mel Brooks. We'd probably get along well as we share a quirky sense of humor.

Biggest worry: The inevitability of physical decline, which might prevent me from ever achieving a really great golf game.

Best part of Cohasset: The harbor area. I've always loved the ocean. Perhaps something in our human evolutionary history, which is basic to our genetic makeup, pulls us in this direction.

SWAT officers are trained on how to properly breach a window.

SWAT team conducts exercise

Cohasset provided the setting last Saturday for a training exercise featuring the Metropolitan Law Enforcement Council (MetroLEC) Special Weapons and Tactics (SWAT) team.

Police are grateful to Art Avilla, a local contractor, who gave permission use the house at 139 Border St. (near Parker Avenue) for the important training.

The Cohasset Police Department is a member of MetroLEC, a consortium of more than 43 local area police departments and law enforcement agencies. The chief executive officers of MetroLEC's member agencies recognize and acknowledge that certain critical incidents call for a law enforcement response that may exceed the capability of any one single local agency, both in terms of capacity and/or duration, police said. To resolve this need and augment local capacity to prepare for and respond to acts of disorder, crime, and violence, MetroLEC has formed a regional partnership that cooperatively shares local resources and enhances the collective capabilities of its members.

On Saturday, Jan. 12, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., the MetroLEC SWAT team conducted the training exercise, which was realistic in nature. MetroLEC SWAT and other agencies routinely conduct such training exercises to prepare in the event of an actual emergency.

The Cohasset Police Department worked to ensure minimal impacts to citizens and their daily routines. Citizens saw an increased police presence, including SWAT vehicles during this time. The area used was clearly marked, with signboards and police officers stationed in the area, Deputy Chief William Quigley said.

"About 12 years ago, area chiefs got together to pool resources because they realized their small towns could not handle a major event," Quigley explained. Cohasset officers are members of the K-9 and motorcycle units in MetroLEC. Det. Lt. Gregory Lennon is commander of the MetroLEC CART (Child Abduction Response Team).

Money for training for the MetroLEC units is provided through federal grants.

Quigley said the Border Street house provided a great training venue where the officers conducted a mock exercise of serving a high-risk warrant on a suspect. Part of the training included breaking and raking windows during which officers put bars through the window and rake the broken glass out which can serve as a distraction to the suspect.

Quigley said neighbors in the area were supportive and happy to see that this type of training goes on.

POLICE BEAT

ALLEGED THIEF

Caught on camera

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The father of a 15-year-old girl walked into the police station on Sunday (Jan. 13) around 3:45 p.m. to report that his daughter's cell phone had been stolen at Stop & Shop. The girl had left her cell phone at the checkout by mistake and when she went back to retrieve it, it was gone, police said. Police checked the surveillance video that shows a young man, who was next in the checkout line, pick up the phone, look around and put it in his pocket.

Detectives are working with loss prevention at Stop & Shop to determine who the young man is. Police said the fact he used his Stop & Shop card for his items will help with the investigation.

Vandalism

Police responded to a report from a 57-year-old Cohasset man, who owns a local business, about a lock being cut off a trailer parked behind the business off Pleasant Street on Monday (Jan. 7). Police met the owner who showed them the Master Brand padlock, which had been cutoff. Nothing appears to have been stolen, police said.

Coyote sightings

Police have been receiving calls about coyotes wandering around. Last week a call came in at 5:44 a.m. on Wednesday (Jan. 9) from Forest Avenue. Coyotes are crepuscular which means they are most active at dawn or dusk. Police said coyotes should have a natural fear of humans and people should stay away from them. They will usually take off if they hear loud noises. Police also warn residents not to keep pet food or garbage outside that might attract coyotes, which are opportunistic feeders.

Constable

Police responded to calls last week (Wednesday, Jan. 9) from concerned parents about a man in a Lincoln Continental who was unfamiliar in the area and was parked near the bus stop. Police have a process in place and notified the schools. Detectives traced the plate number and determined the man was a constable on official business serving paperwork in the area.

Parking complaints

Police have been tagging vehicles parked on the sidewalk in the West Corner area near the antique shop. This has been in response to complaints from an area resident who, when out walking her dog, finds the sidewalk blocked by vehicles.

Lantern walker

Police followed up on a report of a suspicious person with a flashlight and dark clothing walking along Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) last week (7 p.m., Wednesday, Jan. 9) in the area of the train station. Investigation revealed the man, who had a lantern, was headed toward the fire road off 3A into Wompatuck State Park where he was going on a night nature walk.

Right-of-Way

Police responded to reports of a man walking along the Greenbush right-of-way last Thursday (10:07 a.m., Thursday, Jan. 10) and caught up with a 25-year-old man matching his description at the Cohasset train station. They gave the man a warning. Walking along the right-of-way is an arrestable offense but Cohasset police did not arrest him because they did not actually witness the incident.

Suspended license

A 28-year-old Marshfield woman is being summonsed to court on the charge of operating with a suspended license following a traffic stop last Thursday (Jan. 10) at 1:18 p.m. on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). An officer conducting traffic enforcement pulled over the 2012 Toyota Prius she was driving when it went through the red light at 3A and Pond Street. A check through the Registry of Motor Vehicles showed her license was suspended. The Prius was towed and she was transported to a Cohasset business on Route 3A where she made arrangements for a ride, police said.

Expired plates

A 2010 Jeep Wrangler, operated by a 46-year-old Scituate woman, was towed on Sunday afternoon (Jan. 13) after an officer pulled the vehicle over near Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Sohier Street because the Wrangler's plates had expired. The woman was cited for having expired plates.

Domestic

A 50-year-old Cohasset mother was arrested and charged with domestic assault and battery on Sunday afternoon (Jan. 13) following a fight with her teenage son. The son called police after his mother allegedly punched him in the eye with a closed fist over alleged marijuana use, police said. The mother was kept overnight at the station and arraigned in Quincy District Court the following morning.

Hand hurt

Police helped a young boy who was brought to the police station after his hand had been slammed in a door the evening of Monday (Jan. 7). The officer at the desk provided assistance and the Cohasset paramedics from the fire station next door attended to the boy who was transported to the hospital via Scituate ambulance as the Cohasset ambulance was on another call, police said.

Property lines

Police advised neighbors in the area of Jerusalem Road and Deep Run, who are having a dispute over property lines, that ended up in the police log that the issue is a civil matter. They both have attorneys involved and were advised of their recourse through civil court.

State OPEB report published

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We need an additional $1 million every year if we're ever going to slow this thing down."
Peter Pescatore, Advisory Committee

The state's commission which studies the Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB) for state and municipal employees published a 50-plus page report this week on how the state will tackle its large liability. According to the report, the unfunded liability for state and local government amounts to approximately $46 billion.

OPEB (other post employment benefits) is the set of benefits offered to a retiree other than their pension, consisting mainly of health insurance and including medical, dental, Medicare Part B premiums and prescription medications. The OPEB liability is what the town owes for its share of the retirees' health insurance costs, plus their dependents, from the time they retire up until they die.

The unfunded liability that the government owes its employees is an issue being discussed on the municipal, state, and national levels.

The town of Cohasset has a $32 million unfunded OPEB liability that is expected to increase over the next few years.

Cohasset has a trust fund with $164,000 earmarked for tackling this liability. The May 2012 Annual Town Meeting voted to set up the fund to start chipping away at the unfunded liability. The town voted to appropriate $20,000 to the fund, as well as reallocate $144,000 from an older trust fund, so that Cohasset has $164,000 total saved in what Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski has called an "irrevocable" fund. These monies "can only be used for OPEB," the town manager explained.

However, the $20,000 added to the fund for fiscal year 2013 has been described as a "drop in the bucket" by officials. Milanoski has previously stated, "The $20,000 drop evaporated before it even hit the bottom of the bucket."

Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore said during Tuesday's selectmen meeting that if Cohasset wants to stay on top of this liability, "We need an additional $1 million every year if we're ever going to slow this thing down."

Milanoski suggested that the Board of Selectmen place an OPEB discussion on their next meeting agenda to discuss possibly changing the law that allows the town to pay for 85 percent of retired teachers' benefits while paying 50 percent for town employees. This falls under Mass. General Laws (MGL), Chapter 32B, section 11E, and Milanoski suggested that the town take a hard look at that law and consider adjusting the split.

Milanoski said that of all the towns in the Commonwealth, only nine cities and 37 towns still have this law in place.

"Only some towns have this archaic program still around," said Milanoski.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that the town should be careful before changing the system, since "multiple prisms are involved." She added, "I want to understand all the potential collateral damage" before any decisions are made.

The selectmen voted unanimously to allow Milanoski to continue working on this issue and return to the board with his recommendations at a later date.

Solar RFP process wrapping up

Potential bidders tour site, ask questions

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"I feel the RFP process is moving according to the timeline and we have sufficient usage to create a competitive bid."
Tanya Bodell, Alternative Energy Committee

Cohasset could soon be going solar, if companies bid on the Alternative Energy Committee's solar project to put solar panel arrays on the town landfill and Middle-High School roof.

The solar panel project has been underway since the December 2011 Special Town Meeting approved leasing the landfill and school roof. The vote authorizes the town to enter into a lease with a solar panel vendor for 20 years for $1 per year.

The AEC brought the project forward two years ago not only as a push toward clean, green energy, helping Cohasset to become a "greener" community, but also to see if the town could save money on electricity. If the town signs a lease with a solar energy vendor, the chosen vendor will then sell the energy produced by the solar array back to the town at a reduced rate (depending on the meter, the town could purchase the electricity for somewhere in the area of $0.6 per kilowatt hour).

A request for proposals (RFP) was published last month, and the AEC reported this week that there's been a good deal of interest so far. Bids for the project are due by the end of the month.

Five different solar panel installation companies attended a site visit on Monday to evaluate the two sites. Town engineer Brian Joyce, Director of Project Management and Planning, organized the site visit and showed the vendors around. Carl Sestito of the Dept. of Public Works (DPW) showed the group around the landfill at 81-91 Cedar Street while Mark Kelly of the DPW took the group up on the school roof.

While the names of the prospective bidders could not be named publicly, the questions that they asked during a bidders' phone call last week and Monday's site visit are available to view on the committee's website, http://aec.cohassetma.org. The RFP itself is also available on the website in PDF form.

AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell said during the board's Monday night meeting that around 20 different companies have expressed interest in the RFP. Some vendors have indicated they might bid on the landfill or roof, while others might bid on both sites.

Companies are allowed to submit questions to the AEC until Monday, Jan. 21. Proposals (eight printed copies and one electronic version) are due on Wednesday, Jan. 30 at 2 p.m.

The bids will be reviewed (according to criteria established in the RFP) by an evaluation committee consisting of two AEC members, School Committee chair Jeanne Astino and School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro (who comprise the school's alternative energy subcommittee and have been working closely with the AEC on the project), and a member each from the Planning Board, Advisory and Capital Budget committees. The Board of Selectmen has also been invited to have a liaison sit on the evaluation committee.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski will be the procurement officer in the bidding process, and will choose the best value for the town after reviewing the committee's recommendations. Bodell asked him if he would like to chair the evaluation committee, but Milanoski said that it was better for him to come in at the end of the process.

The RFP process will soon come to an end, and the AEC will soon know whether having solar panels in Cohasset will be a feasible project, whether the town will profit from energy savings, and, if so, how much money the town will save on energy costs.

"I feel the RFP process is moving according to the timeline and we have sufficient usage to create a competitive bid," said Bodell. "I think it's going smoothly so far. We're abiding by the [Mass. General Laws] Chapter 30B procurement process and moving forward with that."

While "exciting things are happening" in terms of response to the RFP, Bodell acknowledged that while companies have expressed interest, nothing is set in stone. The AEC chair has said before that if the project will not save the town money, there will be no reason to move forward.

"This is an information finding exercise... None of us would know if it's economically viable," Bodell explained. "This is the process we're following, and we have robust interest."

An architect's rendering of the proposed condos at the Red Lion Inn.

The Inn's neighbors, particularly the Karp and Dippold families, are less than thrilled with the thought of increased traffic and noise so close to their homes.

The ambitious project, brought forward by Jim Sandell of the Cambridge architectural firm Carr, Lynch and Sandell, Inc. on behalf of Inn owner Gerd Ordelheide, would increase the available rooms at the popular wedding destination. Sandell, who lives in Cohasset, explained to the selectmen that the Inn functions as an important part of the downtown business district, and weddings are its main attraction.

"It's a restaurant and a tavern, but weddings drive it," Sandell said of the Inn.

However, the 15 rooms the Inn currently offers are quickly filled each time there is a major event, and guests end up "dispersing" to Hull and Scituate. Adding more rooms would be a way to drive more business to downtown Cohasset, Sandell explained.

The Inn's neighbors, particularly the Karp and Dippold families, are less than thrilled with the thought of increased traffic and noise so close to their homes. They are also concerned about the size of the condo structures. Standing at 34.3 feet and 3/4 inches, each building's total height would be just shy of the 35-foot limit per Cohasset's town bylaw. Abutters are worried about these units towering over the village and their homes.

In a letter dated Jan. 14, Jean Healy Dippold and Alex Dippold asked the selectmen to require a balloon test before the structures are built, floating a balloon at the actual height of the proposed buildings. It is not the role of the selectmen, however, to approve the project, but to weigh in on traffic and parking lot concerns. The selectmen also issue the Inn's innkeeping, entertainment and liquor licenses. The Planning Board is also reviewing the project; Sandell said that he has been before them as well as the fire and sewer departments.

"It's a long process," said Sandell. "We're at the beginning of the path."

The new parking spaces would be created on vacant town land near the development site along James Lane. Each apartment unit would get its own parking space, and the plans show a large cul-de-sac in the middle of the development. This will add 10 parking spaces to the existing town parking lot. Ordelheide is reportedly willing to pay for these additions on the town lot himself.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the town is hiring a consultant to study traffic in the area and will add the town parking lot to the review.

Another issue is the amount of ledge in the area that would be developed for the new buildings. Michael and Rowena Karp said that when the Inn was built years ago, blasting took place around 80 feet away from their property, but their 300-year-old house still "shook for weeks." This new project would involve blasting around 30 feet away from their home.

The Karps, who are "in strong opposition" of the proposed building project, said that they have a long history living next door to the Red Lion Inn, and it has not been altogether pleasant.

"It's been nothing but trouble," said Rowena. "They are the worst neighbors ever."

While Michael Karp acknowledged that the Inn is "an economic driver" to the village, he added, "It's also a stranglehold."

The Karps cited multiple problems, including drunken guests who fight and litter close to their house. "It's party time up there every weekend," Rowena continued. "Just look at the police reports."

The new units, which would have sliding glass doors, would be too close for comfort for the Karps.

"We've already lost our peace and quiet," said Michael. "We're going to lose our privacy... It's very creepy."

Rowena said that while the new parking lot would add spaces to the town lot, it would only make things worse for the neighborhood.

"Just adding a couple dozen more spaces isn't going to solve any problems," said Rowena. "There's just going to be more traffic... Food service trucks [already] block the entire James Lane. When they pull up on South Main Street, they block our whole driveway." Rowena added that she and her husband "put our foot down" so that the trucks no longer block them.

The Karps also cited the Dippolds' letter, which discusses how the Inn's expansion will impact the look and character of the village. They believe the new units will not be in step with the rest of the village's "antique" style. The Karps said they have spoken to other neighbors who are also against the project.

"The [whole] town is an abutter to this, too," said Rowena. "It's not just us."

Sandell said that the project meets the town zoning bylaw "in every respect." However, his client reportedly wants to work with the neighbors. "We understand how sensitive this is."

Sandell also met with the neighbors earlier that day to address their concerns. The acting town manager said this was a positive step.

"There are a lot of issues that need to be addressed," said Milanoski. "The positive thing is, you've opened up the line of communication... We can see if there is mitigation."

CONTRACT

that are bringing us up to the 21st century and is doing an excellent job."

Gjesteby has said that she is against giving Milanoski a new contract because she wants the town to conduct a search for a qualified town manager. While this is Milanoski's first job as a town manager, he has experience in municipal management and planning, previously working as executive director of the Attleboro Redevelopment Authority (ARA) and as the director of economic development in Attleboro, Mass. He hold's a master's degree in regional planning and economic development from UMass Amherst.

Gjesteby said in a phone call that she feels as she always had, that an acting town manager is just acting and the town should make plans to find a new town manager. She would rather keep Milanoski onboard through June and then issue a Request for Proposals (RFP) for a new town manager.

Gjesteby said that she has nothing against Milanoski.

"It's not about the person, it's about the process," she explained. "I'm a process person."

Update: Selectmen, Gjesteby complaints

Last week the selectmen voted to file a complaint against their fellow board member, Gjesteby, for an email she forwarded to a non-board member. The selectmen believe this violated attorney-client privilege, as the email allegedly contained sensitive information that was not to be shared outside of the board.

The selectmen voted to send the matter to the state Ethics Commission and reportedly filed the complaint this week. The contents of Gjesteby's email, and to whom it was sent, have not been made public.

Meanwhile, Gjesteby has counter-complained against the rest of the board for an alleged violation of the state Open Meeting Law (OML). Gjesteby filed her complaint with the selectmen and Town Clerk this week and will also file with the Ethics Commission.

Gjesteby claims the selectmen violated the OML during their Dec. 18, 2012 meeting — they met in executive at the close of public session during that meeting, and while the agenda stated that employee contracts would be discussed during the session, it did not specify which contract.

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset! How is the town doing this week? I know that for me, the weather has been a bit of a crazy mystery with last weekend and Monday being so warm and then Wednesday waking up to snow! I am not complaining at all, it is pretty cool to see but definitely could deal with a little less of the extremes.

The presentation will include a review of the planned battle, the flaws in the strategic plan and the leadership characteristics that emerged on the beach under the stress of the battle. This program will be held at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main Street beginning at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday (Jan. 23). All are welcome to attend this program and light refreshment will be served.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

GIMME SHELTER

How about your very own 'Felix?'

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Felix has his little bag of magic tricks and is hoping to mystify a new owner with his good looks, as well as a loving and sweet personality. COURTESY PHOTO

There must have been someone passing out extra long whiskers when Felix was born! This handsome guy is a wonderful black and white tuxedo short hair who has been with us a very short while. It is always a sad and difficult challenge moving away from owners you have loved and into a shelter after having been the center of attention for such a long time. Well, that is how Felix is probably feeling now, and while it may be hard, he is up for that challenge and showing us that he is really ready to make a new connection and find his forever family right away!

Arriving here was not in Felix's playbook, but like his cartoon namesake, this boy has his little bag of magic tricks and is hoping to mystify a new owner with his good looks, as well as a loving and sweet personality. He is enjoying lots of petting and is very anxious to exercise and play, but in a communal setting he is holding back a little. Being with strangers can be a little intimidating.

Once he is in his new home, he will have lots of exploring to do, and when he is finished, he will be by your side nudging your leg for some attention. If he is on a chair and you are standing next to it, expect the nudge and rub on your thigh, as Felix does make it his mission to be noticed and loved.

When we walk into his room, Felix is alert and waiting for us to get close with him. Looking up and staring intently with his mellow, green and gold eyes, he waits. And really, you just can't turn away. If you take too long, he will be up and ready to approach you, making sure that you reach out with a gentle neck and cheek rub for him. Such a sweet boy he is, and finding himself waiting for the right person to take him home is certainly one of his top concerns now.

Everyone in the shelter who spends time with Felix comments on how friendly and loving he is. Wouldn't it be fabulous if someone felt that he truly was their very own "Felix", the wonderful, wonderful cat!

It would be best for him to be in an adult home, and an only pet. This will be a chance for him to have a new best friend and bring love and entertainment to his new family. If you are looking for a grown up cat who has lots of love to give and wants to chase and play, come by Hull Seaside Animal Rescue and spend some time with Felix. For more information please call Judy at 781-534-4902. You may leave a message at 781-925-3121, or check our website at www.HSAR.org to view more available felines. Open Hours are on Mondays from 6:30-7:30 p.m. and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. We are always helping cats like Felix who are in need of care and kindness and there are many others who are waiting for their chance to have a real home and family.

We continue to be very fortunate with generous donations of supplies for the care of our cats and appreciate that so many people come by not only to donate, but to visit and spend time with those who are waiting for their chance to be selected by loving families. We are still taking in litters of kittens, and wet and dry kitten food is always appreciated. They have special nutritional needs and kitten formulas are necessary to keep them healthy and happy. Flannel, fleece and warm blanketing is also needed as well as sheets and towels. If you are in a redecorating mood, we would be thrilled to make use of those items you may be replacing and no longer need.

All of our volunteers are busy helping with the daily care of our animals and their dedication to the shelter is amazing. If you are looking for an organization to help and have a few hours a week to work with our group, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638 for more information, or drop by the shelter during Open Hours to pick up an application.

Thank you to all of our donors and supporters. You keep us going and all of us here are very grateful that you are a part of our community and choose to help in many ways. We are planning our next Gimme Shelter fundraising event and will be updating date and time information on our website and on Facebook.

To all of our adoptive families, thank you for providing the best care and happy endings for the deserving cats and kittens you have welcomed into your homes.

Female sports fans are game

Cohasset women launch sports media company

Two Cohasset women are introducing a brand new website tailored for the female sports fan. "She's Game Sports" is a media company that produces sports content by women, for women. Or, as founder Alice Cook calls it, "Sister to sister sports."

Cook started her company after covering sports as a reporter for over 25 years in a male-dominated field. Cook, who is also an Olympic figure skater (she competed as a pairs skater at the 1976 Olympics in Austria), entered the sports broadcasting world in the early '80s, and was one of few women covering sports at the time.

Hardcore female fans were also few and far between.

"The female fan just wasn't there yet," said Cook. In the '90s, she started noticing more female fans in the stands wearing pink hats with their team's logo. But over the years, the pink paraphernalia and oversized boyfriend's jerseys started giving way to sport's gear cut to fit women, in the team's colors.

When Cook started seeing more sports clothing lines made just for women, she knew the tide was changing, and it was a good time to get involved.

"I thought, someday, this would be a dream to create a product for women," said Cook. Her idea, at first, was to produce a women's half-hour talk show centered around football, since so many of her friends and fellow moms in the area are diehard Patriots fans.

"Mothers living in the suburbs, some working outside the home while some don't, we all have one thing in common— we all want to watch the Patriots," Cook explained. "It's the common thread holding families together. With all these different activities and the busy work lives we have, it's the only time in a week we all sit down together for two and a half hours to watch a game. There's a great family and social aspect."

Cook was introduced to another Cohasseter with a broadcasting background, Lydia Everett, who quickly told Cook that she thought the idea was much bigger than a half-hour local talk show: "This is a huge media product across all platforms."

"...With all these different activities and the busy work lives we have, it's the only time in a week we all sit down together for two and a half hours to watch a game. There's a great family and social aspect."
Alice Cook, She's Game Sports

"I knew the economics of putting together a half-hour show and was concerned about the cost and advertising opportunities as far as local programming," said Everett. "I kept researching what was out there in the world of female sports media... There was nothing."

Both Cook and Everett saw a gap in sports coverage that catered to the female point of view. As they both explain, women approach sports differently than men, and require different types of coverage. While men might want to see stats, women are often interested in the stories behind the games, teams and players; or, as the women of She's Game Sports explain, the heart of the story.

For many women, especially in the sports-crazed New England area, major league teams and games are part of their daily conversation, whether they're "at their kids' soccer games talking about the Patriots or at hockey games talking about the Bruins."

So who is the "She's Game Sports" girl — the diehard fan who bleeds Patriots/Red Sox red and blue, or the casual observer who cheers for her kids on the sidelines?

The answer is, a little bit of both — or all of the above. The goal of She's Game Sports is to offer sports content to women at all level of fandom, whether they want to read a player profile story, find deals on women's sports apparel, or check the score.

"We want it to be the one-stop shop, the go-to place for sports entertainment and knowledge, deals and connection," explained Everett.

The website features everything from thought-provoking articles, discussions, fashion-oriented blog posts ("Game Day Outfit" options!) and videos to entertainment and gossip.

"Some women want the latest on Tom Brady," said Everett. "We know women are into the sexiness of the players. We're definitely making it fun and entertaining... Women approach sports through a lifestyle lens."

She's Game Sports is unveiling a brand-new website in February, launched by the Boston-based Cramer Communications. Cook also has a She's Game Sports blog on the Boston Globe's website (Boston.com) and is eyeing a national broadcasting opportunity with Litton Entertainment.

In the meantime, they also plan to roll out a mobile version of the website so readers can get on-the-go content on their tablets and smartphones.

But producing all of this content takes a lot of work, including fundraising. This is why She's Game Sports has a crowd-funding project on IndieGoGo.com. So far, the company has raised just over $11,000 out of its $30,000 fundraising goal; the fundraiser ends on Jan. 20. The money will help the company build an audience and get its name out while also raising money to pay for the website, its producer and sports photographs.

She's Game Sports also has profiles on Facebook, Twitter and Pinterest.

LIFE AT CHS

Semi-formal is next Friday

WHITNEY MALONE

Tickets are available only in school, not at the door on Friday, so everyone needs to buy their tickets next week!

Hello Cohasset! There was a bit of a lull in activity at CHS this week. Nevertheless, exciting things are to come as we near the end of January.

The Semi-Formal dance organized to raise money for the senior class is next Friday. We seniors have invited the underclassmen this year to make the dance an exciting event for all students, so we encourage everyone to attend! Tickets are available only in school, not at the door on Friday, so everyone needs to buy their tickets next week!

Next Thursday, CHS band and chorus students will perform their Cabaret show at Atlantica. Unlike traditional Band and Chorus concerts, the night will include a cappella performances from members of the Chorus, instrumental pieces from the Jazz Ensemble and students currently taking band classes in school, as well as piano arrangements performed by individual students. The show starts at 7pm!

As some of you may have noticed the colorful flyers around school, the Gay-Straight Alliance is looking for new members. The GSA, one of the many student-run clubs at CHS, brings together LGBT and straight students to support each other and provide a safe place to socialize. If you're interested in joining, see Mr. Sweeney!

That's it for this week at CHS. I hope everyone enjoys the extended Martin Luther King Jr. weekend!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High School; her column runs weekly during the school year.

This dark, thought provoking film set against a cold and wintry landscape is the second in Bergman's trilogy of films dealing with humanity's relationship with God.

N-Hance Revolutionary Wood Renewal

Don't Replace, Don't Reface – Renew with N-Hance

Don't Replace, Don't Reface – Renew with N-Hance® Revolutionary Wood Renewal. If you've had your wood cabinets for years and want to restore their original life and luster then N-Hance is an option for you. N-Hance is the most affordable and usually the quickest way to bring life back into dreary looking cabinets.

An older, well-worn set of cabinets may appear to be in such bad condition that they need to be completely replaced or sanded down and refaced. But unless you want a completely different layout, N-Hance may be the right solution. Run by Patrick and Paula Greally, this thriving South Shore business has some wonderful options homeowners can choose for an affordable kitchen makeover.

The Basic Cabinet Renewal job requires no color shift or color change and has minimal wear on the wood surface. Grease and dirt are easily removed and touch-up is performed quickly and timely. You will love the convenience along with the shine and luster this service brings to your tired cabinets.

The N-Hance renewal process thoroughly cleans the surface, removes old coatings, repairs damaged areas with less mess and applies an elegant finish. You will love the brilliant results.

The Cabinet Color Shift slightly warms the tone of the wood without covering the wood grain. This is a great look for customers who want a little darker tone to their cabinets. This process can really warm up the kitchen and give it a new look.

The Complete Color Change on cabinets involves a much more dramatic effect than the other cabinet services. Often the change will involve going from a golden oak or whitewash finish to a cherry, walnut or black tone.

Our opaque stained finishes saturate the wood for rich, beautiful color while allowing the natural beauty of the grain to remain visible. Choose from six different colors: Sea Salt, Antique White, Tuscany, Slate, Pistachio and Pewter. We can also apply finishing techniques such as glazing and antiquing to give a much customized look to your cabinets.

CONGREGATION SHA'ARAY SHALOM

Restoring health of rare Torah

Scroll was left to rot by the Nazis

By Glenda Garland
Special to the Mariner

This past fall, Congregation Sha'aray Shalom's president Michael Teller told congregants that, "The oldest member of our congregation is sick." He urged them to help him provide a cure. He was not exaggerating on age — over 250 years. This oldest member of the congregation is one of three Torahs, the scrolls that contain the first five books of the Bible, that the Hingham temple houses.

This Torah was found directly after World War II. It had been confiscated, catalogued, and left to rot by the Nazis before making its way to the United States, and Sha'aray Shalom. "It saddened me and the cantor," said Rabbi Shira Joseph, "every time we opened the ark and saw it, to know that it was sick."

This notion of the Torah, the words on the parchment, as a living being is fundamental to Judaism. When letters are missing or torn or faded, when the words themselves are no longer perfect, it's regarded as not kosher, as ill. Some Torahs can be restored. Torahs that are too ill, that require too much restoration work, are buried like people.

Given this sense of the scrolls as living things, mere physical remedies, such as darkening faded letters or gluing parchment tears, could not restore its health. Restoring a Torah requires a scribe, called a sofer, who uses a highly ritualized process from hand-making parchment to the eventual inking of letters. Each step along the way requires a specific prayer.

"As an architect," said Michael Teller, "I appreciate the training necessary for the scribe to learn his craft and to achieve mastery of it. His field, however, takes the craft to a higher, spiritual level."

Sha'aray Shalom called in a group of scribes from Miami, Florida, who travel the country and the world assessing the health of Torahs. This group, called Sofer on Site, sent Rabbi Yochanan Salazar to Hingham. He's head of their Torah Restoration Project.

Rabbi Salazar spent the beginning of last week in Hingham. As part of his restoration, temple members are encouraged to sponsor words or chapters and help scribe them. Being allowed to do so fulfills one of the 613 commandments found in the Torah.

Rabbi Salazar has also spent some of his time educating the congregation about what a sofer does, how he does it, and the history of this particular Torah, which is an exceptionally rare one.

Rabbi Salazar explained that this Torah is from a small village in Czechoslovakia and represents one of only 1,500 Torah recovered from Europe written in a kabbalistic style. Although the text is always the same, there were different traditions from Northern Africa, Europe, and the Middle East regarding layout and ornamentation. This Torah's layout differs from them. It also has lots of letters and words written in different ways.

The style a Torah is written in has an enormous effect on a sofer's ability to restore it. Again, that is for religious reasons, rather than the mechanical ones. Lauren Teller, another congregant, explained it this way: "Even though he can draw every letter, his tradition is that if you don't understand the intention of the person who wrote it, you can't make a Torah like it."

Michael Teller, President of the Sha'aray Shalom congregation, with Rabbi Salazar of Sofer on Site, Miami, Florida, before one section of the Torah that needed restoration.

An example of flaked letters from the Torah that need to be restored.

The style and age of this particular Torah make it truly unique, among only a couple dozen like it in the world.

Knowledge of other traditions for writing Torahs have survived, as scribes pass on the intentions behind the different layouts to their apprentices, generation after generation. But, Rabbi Salazar said, "You can only reproduce what's taught you by your teacher." The kabbalistic style no longer has anyone alive who knows the intentions of its scribes. The knowledge likely perished in the Holocaust.

The style and age of this particular Torah make it truly unique, among only a couple dozen like it in the world. Rabbi Salazar is excited about restoring it, not only for its own health, but also in the hopes that knowledge of its scribing will come to light from some as yet unknown source. That will enable scholars to connect that knowledge with this particular Torah, and the insights gained from its layout could be learned.

Speaking to the temple's teenagers, Rabbi Salazar further articulated how layout, how words are formed, and what decorations are given to letters, all mean something. "Torah comes from the Hebrew word meaning teaching," he said. "So every aspect of a Torah is supposed to teach." For example, scribes press guidelines into the parchment to show where lines of letters should go. They do not write these lines, because only the words of the Torah should be there. The scribe does not write letters atop the lines, though, but hanging from that line. This arrangement teaches that the words depend on, and from, God.

He said that learning to be a scribe involves getting so comfortable writing letters that he doesn't think about forming them. "When writing," he said, "you're supposed to thinking about the word, and what it means. You say the word out loud, then you write it. It requires a lot of concentration."

There are 304,805 letters in a Torah. If one word is incorrect or missing, a Torah is considered invalid. Rabbi Salazar joked that that is a high standard for accuracy. He mentioned that there are over 900 laws a scribe must know to write a Torah. For just one example, in a Torah, a scribe may go back and correct a mistake, but he may not scrape off ink to separate letters that have run together.

Restoring this Torah will take the better part of this year.

"I took this project on as the centerpiece of my presidency," Michael Teller said, "to bring life back to our most treasured sacred objects, and to honor those who came before us, those who perished at the hands of the Nazis."

"This is a dream come true for us," Rabbi Joseph said. "It makes us all feel proud to be able to give this Torah life again."

Rabbi Salazar shows Sha'aray Shalom congregants examples of flaked letters and other problems with the Torah. Note the ways the columns are broken in different ways. Every Torah's layout means something to the scribe who wrote it, and the meaning gives life to the Torah.

A letter from a history teacher asks Jack to return a few autographs for her students.

On Jack Bryant's wall is a picture of his older brother, Joseph, who was a pilot of a B25 and graduated in 1945.

TUSKEGEE

Tuskegee experiment

Jack explained how the pilot training program was referred to as the Tuskegee "experiment" at the time, as the common perception in the military was that African-Americans were unfit for combat.

"The federal government commissioned a report to study the African-American, and the report got back to Congress saying that the African-American didn't have the mentality or the courage to operate complex machinery or to fight. Through the efforts of the black community, the NAACP, Eleanor Roosevelt and a whole host of others, they lobbied the president to start a program to train African-American pilots.

"The program was designed to fail," Jack continued. "Getting into the program wasn't easy, and staying in the program was not easy, either."

"The federal government commissioned a report to study the African-American, and the report got back to Congress saying that the African-American didn't have the mentality or the courage to operate complex machinery or to fight."
Jack Bryant

However, the program went on to be a rousing success, sending 450 of the original 996 trained pilots into action overseas. While 150 lost their lives in accidents or combat, the famous 332nd fighter group, known as the "Red Tails" for their aircraft paint scheme, never lost a single bomber they escorted.

The Tuskegee airmen's commander, Colonel Benjamin Davis, was the first black Air Force General but was given the "silent treatment" by fellow officers for four years, said Jack.

There is something else that many don't know about the Tuskegee airmen, the veteran added. "Everybody associates it with the Red Tails, which are fighter planes. But the Tuskegee airmen also flew bombers. A B-25 is what my brother flew, and that was my goal."

The war was over before Jack ever saw combat; he was still in pre-flight training when WWII officially ended in September 1945. Jack was discharged in 1946.

He returned to his home state of Michigan and earned his degree in engineering at the University of Michigan, followed by a master's from Northeastern. He started his Boston-based engineering firm, Bryant Associates, in 1976.

He and his wife, Vernita, moved to Cohasset in 1986. They have two children: son Jeffrey, who followed his father's footsteps to become CEO of Bryant Associates, and daughter Saadia, who is director of brand development for Crabtree and Evelyn.

Jack Bryant shows off a poster of the movie, "Red Tails," which is based on real stories from the Tuskegee Airmen.

Living legends

As time marches on, the number of surviving WWII veterans is dwindling. Jack says that of the 996 Tuskegee airmen, only a few hundred remain.

"There were 16.7 million [WWII] veterans — that's a lot," said Jack. "It was 10 percent of the population."

Jack, at 85, is among the youngest that served in WWII.

"The youngest you could be in World War II was 18," he said. "You could lie and get in at 17... The youngest [now] are 84 or 85; if you're not 84 or 85, you weren't in World War II."

Perhaps this is why Jack and his fellow surviving Tuskegee airmen – he knows of seven in the New England area, including himself – are constantly invited to speak at memorial events and other special occasions.

Jack is the featured speaker at this year's Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. breakfast at St. Anthony's Parish Center on Monday, Jan. 21. He was invited to attend President Obama's inauguration and the Commander in Chief's ball on the same day, but chose to stay local. He did attend the inauguration four years ago.

"It was quite an occasion four years ago to see 800,000 people fill the Washington Mall," Jack recalled. "I took my son with me."

The Tuskegee Airmen were all honored by President George W. Bush with a Gold Congressional Medal in March 2007 at a ceremony in the U.S. Capitol rotunda.

He and a group of airmen also attended a recent Boston screening of the film "Red Tails," starring Terrence Howard and Cuba Gooding, Jr. According to Bryant, the movie's producer, George Lucas, invited several Tuskegee airmen to his home to hear their stories in order to ensure his film's authenticity.

Jack's review of the movie? "He wanted to make a movie more true to facts than Hollywood, and it was accurate."

Joseph, who likely had many tales to tell of his pilot days, passed away in 1969.

Hero worship

Jack and Vernita live in a beautiful renovated "summer house" on Hobart Lane in Cohasset with ocean views right outside their living room window. The local Tuskegee airman, who is one of five living in the Boston area, is happy to speak about his time in the military but is not one to make a fuss.

Jack Bryant sits in his living room in Cohasset. Out of 1,000 pilots and navigators in the Tuskegee Airmen, approximately 100 are still living.

However, he continues to speak at special events — and even gets some fan mail. Wondering how people even manage to find his address, Jack shows a letter he received from a West Virginia schoolteacher asking him to sign a pile of Tuskegee airmen cards for her class.

"I get maybe one of those a week," Jack said of the autograph requests. "I get them from fathers or kids who can barely write that collect signatures of World War II veterans."

From his Cohasset home, the veteran is able to serve as a role model and source of inspiration for young students, such as the class in West Virginia, who are just learning about the war. Jack said that being part of the Tuskegee Airmen taught him something about life that he believes kids with dreams – or anyone with a life goal – can benefit from:

"Discipline yourself to focus on your mission. If you have something you want to do – if you're focused on doing something – don't give up. You have to aspire to be a better person, and to do that, you have to be focused on your path."

Jack Bryant is the featured speaker at a breakfast at St. Anthony's on Monday, Jan. 21 in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. The breakfast is from 9 to 11 a.m. and costs $5 per individual, $15 per family. The documentary film, "Tuskegee Airmen," will also be shown.

The back of the Congressional gold medal features the three planes the Tuskegee Airmen flew during World War 2, P-40, P-51, and a B25.

A replica coin of the Congressional gold medal given to the Tuskegee Airmen in 2007 by Congress features an officer, mechanic, and a pilot.

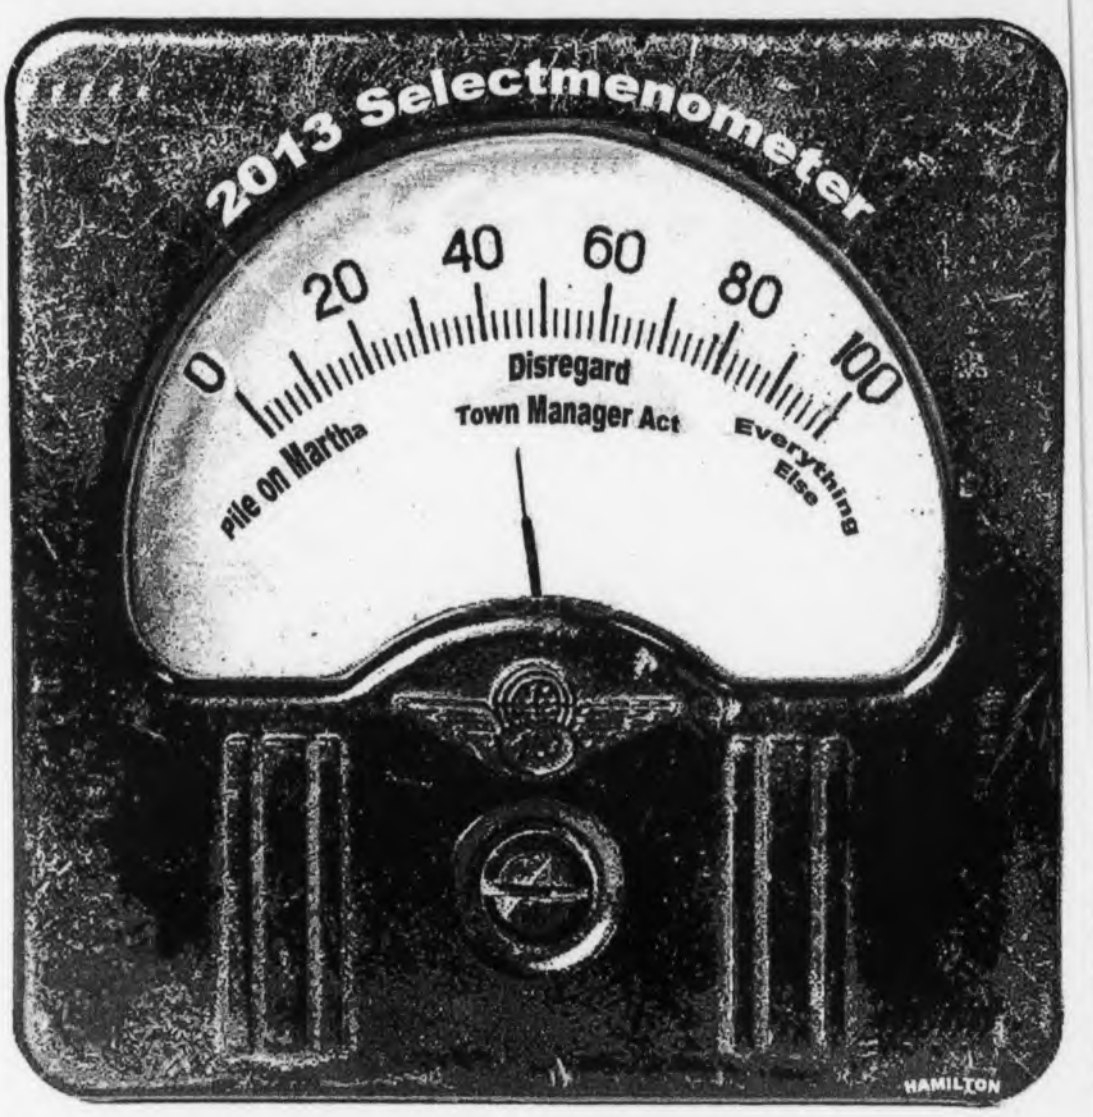
OUR VIEW

Only in Cohasset

Cohasset has to be one of the most exciting towns for a local newspaper. Long meetings with hard seats are difficult to sit through, issues are complicated and complex, and the number of stories can be daunting – but we'd still prefer that than covering a boring place!



This week, a majority of the Board of Selectmen took the unprecedented action of issuing Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski a new contract with an excellent raise. Four out of the five members of the board believe that our ATM is doing a terrific job, is sorely needed to keep the town on a solid financial track, and should keep doing what he is doing. Our ATM came to the forefront about a year ago when he served in a volunteer capacity for a couple of weeks after selectmen fired former TM Michael Coughlin.

While we have not done a comparison, we think it is fair to say that Milanoski's new salary is likely in line with what other area Town Managers are being paid. The majority of the Board of Selectmen clearly believes "you get what you pay for" and therefore, approved the pay hike.

So far, Milanoski's tenure has not been without controversy. He successfully lobbied to have a bunch of contracts awarded by his predecessor cancelled, let some people go, and is tackling changes in personnel management and financial issues with gusto.

In terms of hours spent on the job – from what we've seen, Milanoski could be described by the over-used term "workaholic." We do not envy that fact he lives in Cohasset and is firmly established here, which means when he is not working — he still will be — because it is unavoidable. Also, his new contract is only through Dec. 31 and with elections in the spring for two seats on the Board of Selectmen, the future is anyone's guess.

Here at the Mariner, we do not have a crystal ball but if experience is a gauge — there will be a lot to write about in the months and year ahead.

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Clarification offered on Mariner story

In the last week's Mariner article titled "Selectmen offer new contract to Milanoski" which appeared in the Jan. 11th issue, the Mariner states "..served on the town manager search committee that selected Coughlin as their top candidate ...".

This is incorrect and is a misrepresentation of what the search committee did.

The search committee was charged with finding candidates for the position. We did not rank the candidates (had we done so the outcome might have been different). The process, which is kept confidential in the early stages to protect potential candidates, did not allow us to make recommendation or rank any of those candidates publicly when presented to the Board of Selectmen.

In that same article there were a number of statements about the revisiting the Town Manager Act. Some of these indicated that the visitation of the Act was over and done. These individuals may feel that way, but the Governance Committee expects to have and publish a total rewrite to the act by the end of this month. The act is clearly flawed in numerous areas and needs to be rewritten. This really has nothing to do with the current contract situation, which is somewhat of a mess because the existing act is unclear.

When that is released we on the Governance Committee would like to have any and all comments.

Following this we will also need to revise town bylaws (currently in conflict with the existing act) and possibly redefine the roles of various committees and boards.

Bloggers' identities should be required

I wrote to Gregory Mathis, the Editor in Chief, on Dec. 10, to suggest a change in the newspaper's policy, which allows individuals to comment online without signing their real names. Mr. Mathis replied that although names and addresses are required for all letters, commentary or opinion pieces published in the newspaper, "... we don't have a mechanism in place currently to require them to post under their real name."

This weekend, a vile post appeared, under a pseudonym, which not only revealed some confidential information which apparently was only known by a handful of Selectmen and the Acting Town Manager, but also seriously maligned a private citizen with potentially libelous accusations that this former town official provided perjured testimony in a town hearing. To the newspaper's credit, this posting was deleted after an abuse report was submitted to the editor.

Once again, I urge the Mariner to require full identification for all online posting. There is no difference between posting a response online or responding to an article via a Commentary or Letter to the Editor. The only difference is that malicious and defamatory filth may be directed to any individual and the contributor is free to hide behind their ridiculous online identity. It should not be the job of the reader to patrol the Internet and report abuse to the newspaper. Before I am accused of being disingenuous, let me say that I am aware that many other people have been maligned (fairly and unfairly), in these pages and on the newspaper's web site. To that I say let their friends write a letter.

How many good citizens will be reluctant to speak out if they know they may be the victim of this anonymous, electronic bullying?

If the Cohasset Mariner wishes to be considered a credible news organization, transparency and full identification should be demanded from any contributor to the newspaper. If an individual is so proud of their comments, so confident of their veracity and so willing to make potentially libelous accusations, at the very least, you must require them to be identified.

You may not like my politics, you may not like my point of view, you may not like me. I don't care. At least you know who I am.

Appreciate support for Cradles to Crayons

We would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to the Parishioners of St. Stephen's Church and to the students/families of the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools for their efforts in donating gently used and new goods for Cradles to Crayons. The December Drive was very successful in raising winter supplies for underprivileged children throughout Massachusetts. Thank you!

There are over 305,000 children in need in the area and last year Cradles to Crayons was able to reach out to about 55,000. Clearly there is an ongoing need, and particularly during these cold climactic and economic times. If you have anything more that you would like to donate to Cradles to Crayons please review their drop off locations and times at www.cradlestocrayons.org or contact Franchesca Arnold at 383-2548. Again, many thanks for all your support!

Setting the bar high

RONNIE MCMORRIS

Cohasset deserves an experienced professional Town Manager and, with thanks to Jackie Dormitzer's History of Cohasset, these are my reasons why. When my four children were young and I was first elected to the Board of Selectmen the town was literally falling apart. School safety was about dilapidated buildings and crumbling infrastructure. We needed a makeover physical, financial, you name it, and we got it, thanks to many incredible volunteers, employees and an excellent town manager.

We hired the town's first professional manager despite my complete opposition to the idea. How wrong I was and how right they were! The form of government was changed by a slim margin with less than 150 people voting. It was the will of the people and it was the selectmen's responsibility to implement it. We hired a young, energetic professional administrator who presided over the most vibrant and productive of administrations. Here's what we accomplished:

1. Construction of the new Osgood School
2. Renovation and expansion of Deer Hill and the Middle/High School
3. Upgrade and expansion of athletic fields including Alumni Field
4. Construction of new Little League fields including a softball diamond
5. Construction of a new DPW garage
6. Conversion of the old garage into a recreation center
7. Conversion of the former Osgood school into a beautiful modern library
8. Expansion of town sewerage
9. Adoption of the Community Preservation Act
10. Creation of a public park on Parker Avenue at the former Hagerty property, a center for coastal research and a maritime institute
11. Dredging of Cohasset Harbor
12. The James Brook flood control project
13. Extensive upgrade of the water system
14. Renovation of the Police/Fire station
15. Purchase of the Tykey Hill property

Federal guns laws needed

HOWIE ALTHOLTZ

If guns made us more secure, we should be the safest society instead of the most deadly, with more gun violence over most developed countries by a factor of 20 to 30 times.

However well-intentioned, the recently reported idea for "resources officers" and the like in schools is a bad idea. Better that scarce funding go for more teachers, counselors, etc. Turning schools into fortresses with "resources officers," cameras, metal detectors, etc., is not a way to honor slain children.

If well armed, locked down and "secure" was the answer, how about the shootings at the highly secure and well-armed Fort Hood — 14 dead. Columbine High School had an armed guard.

It's not about schools, security, mental illness, video games, etc. It is about guns.

The US is 5 percent of the world's population, but we own 50 percent of the guns. If guns made us more secure, we should be the safest society instead of the most deadly, with more gun violence over most developed countries by a factor of 20 to 30 times. 11,000- gun homicides, 20,000 gun suicides and 1000 accidental deaths. 900 guns deaths since Newtown alone.

Other countries also watch violent movies, play video games and have similar mental health issues. The difference: access to guns.

It's far easier to kill with, either in a planned massacre or an impulsive reaction. People are not being killed in grotesque numbers with hammers or knives. And it works, where guns are less accessible murder rates are dramatically lower.

And if we did follow the "security" reasoning, we would also need guards on school buses.. in playgrounds.. at every school sporting event.. and at churches, mosques and synagogues... movies theaters and shopping malls, and one standing next to every kid in America because there are 35 gun deaths every day - outside the classroom . Plus in every bedroom because there are 20,000 gun suicides and 1000 accidental deaths every year. Guns do kill people.

Kids would be better served by educating parents about the relationship between guns and tragedy, as a gun in a home is statistically far more likely to result in death/injury than protection.

For now a conservative Supreme Court, has held the 2nd amendment protects many types of gun ownership. OK. But even that court has said, "It is not a right to keep and carry any weapon whatsoever in any manner whatsoever and for whatever purpose". And of course we already limit and regulate weapons that can be owned/used, hand grenades, rocket launchers, etc.

By the way the Court vote was a close 5-4. So just one single new justice could completely reverse that.

Many read the 2nd amendment as only for the purpose of enabling a "well-regulated militia", which is what it says.

In addition to being reinterpreted by a changed Supreme Court, the 2nd amendment could even be repealed or modified (think prohibition). Even that wouldn't interfere one bit with hunting, recreation, personal protection, etc.

Most civilized democracies, many much older than ours, seem to do quite well without such a clause.

This is not about civil rights. We own and use many dangerous products that don't need constitutional protection. Guns are just another dangerous product that some people like to own. Fine. The NRA is not a civil rights organization. It is a lobbying group for the weapons industry. Their mission is money. They spent $20 million lobbying against such proposals as allowing The Center for Disease Control to compile medical information on health implications of gun ownership; opposing tracing mechanisms on guns to help identify criminals; restrictions on armor piercing bullets; or liability for gun makers for defects, like every other industry. It is not about civil rights. That emotional hook is used to attract members, and money. Most Americans don't feel compelled to stockpile arsenals and semi- automatics just in case they need fight off government agents.

Government regulates lots of dangerous products that people once considered the realm of "personal freedom." Tobacco: heavily regulated, taxed, sellers licensed, even where you can and can't smoke... smoking related death/illness is down. Cars: death rates down nearly 90 percent following several decades since safety requirements became the norm. Drivers are licensed and vehicles registered... seat belt requirements were once also considered an "invasion of personal freedom."

Currently 40 percent of gun sales are with no background checks. You need a physical and note from the doctor to enroll a kid in soccer, how about a mental health exam to own a gun. Home insurance rates are higher if you have a trampoline, why not for a gun in the home?

From clip size limitations, automatic weapons bans, universal background checks, limit on number of gun purchases and more, many sensible proposals are in play, and states are moving in the right direction. But gun laws needs to be Federal and uniform because one city with tough guns law means nothing if you can drive to next county or state and stock up.

And no one is more supportive of these common sense measures than law enforcement, who sees the carnage every day and are themselves often outgunned.

America is capable of great things. There's no reason why personal freedom and common sense cannot co-exist.

Why did Ginger and Mary Ann cross the road?

I may have kicked off this 'porch view' with a whimsical quip, but the lack of access to the rest of the town for the kids at Avalon isn't humorous; it's a real issue of safety.

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Are you familiar with the old game where someone is asked to name a few items they'd bring with them if they were stranded on a desert island? (For the record I'd chose a charged global satellite phone and a winning Powerball ticket) Being stranded on a desert island has long been a romantic concept inspiring great pieces of literature and numerous not-so great TV shows including one that spurned the infamous question "Ginger or Mary Ann."

To some living on an island is a dream but for others it can be an isolating endeavor, just talk with some of the kids who live up in the Avalon Apartments. In case you are not familiar with Avalon, it's the new apartment / condominium complex overlooking the business stretch of Route 3A. It's become a place where numerous families have chosen to live and where dozens of Cohasset school children call home but lack safe access to the rest of the town due to an absence of sidewalks and crosswalks.

The town is aware of this and at the Planning Board meeting earlier this month (see, I am fulfilling at least some of my New Year's resolutions) the Board iterated that the sidewalks are a top priority. Avalon had provided $350,000 towards the project, which we all hope covers the cost but one never knows. With designs, permits and construction the project should take about 2 years – which is reasonable, but summer is coming.

For kids, summertime should be nirvana; a time for freedom and outdoor activities, but that may not be the case for the kids in Avalon. For every day of the summer that there are no sidewalks that's a day where kids are unable to safely access swim lessons, sailing lessons, summer school programs, the beach or any other summer activity that other kids in the town can independently get to.

I may have kicked off this 'porch view' with a whimsical quip, but the lack of access to the rest of the town for the kids at Avalon isn't humorous; it's a real issue of safety. The want to cross Route 3A is already deep for many of the kids; it's only going to get worse in the summer months. And please don't think of this is just an Avalon problem, many of us have children who have friends who live up in Avalon and the desire to hang out with their peers is strong. Friendship is a two way street but so is Route 3A and Route 3A has thousands of fast moving cars.

The entrance of Avalon is at the crest of a hill with traffic travelling at a pretty decent rate of speed and vehicles fighting to get onto 3A from both Avalon and the shops across the street. Without proper sidewalks the unthinkable becomes not a matter of if it becomes a matter of when.

I have full confidence that the town will pursue the completion of this project with real diligence, but in the meantime they (the town and Avalon) should consider the possibility of other safety measures. Traffic signs indicating children in the area, slower speed limits through the stretch or perhaps a seasonal Avalon shuttle van between complex and the elementary schools (a nearby drop off where there are sidewalks) are just a few that could be considered.

Thanks for reading, summer's too much fun for kids to be left stranded on an island. Oh, in case you were wondering ... without question, Mary Ann.

FOR THE RECORD

This job can get crazy

If you take the above definition, excluding criminality, you can see how some of these professions and occupations made it on such a list.

GREGORY MATHIS

I've always said you needed to be a little crazy to be a journalist, but I never thought my colleagues were psychopaths.

Recently, a top-10 list was compiled from a book recently published by Kevin Dutton titled, "The Wisdom of Psychopaths: What Saints, Spies, And Serial Killers Can Teach Us About Success." In the book Dutton reveals the occupations most likely to attract psychopaths, and journalist falls smack dab in the middle at number six.

When I think of a psychopath, I think of horror movie characters such as Freddy Kreuger, the maniac massacring people with a chainsaw, or Jack Nicholson going berserk on Shelley Duvall in "The Shining." Or in real life, it's those serial killers that we despise for their senseless crimes.

Trying to understand how noble professions and occupations made it onto such an undesirable list, I turned to the dictionary to get a better understanding of the definition of a psychopath.

First, a psychopath is described as one who displays shallow emotions. What are shallow emotions? A lack of empathy is one example. Reduced fear and stress tolerance are others. In addition to shallow emotions, psychopaths are defined as coldhearted, egocentric, exude superficial charm, and are manipulative, irresponsible and impulsive. There is also a criminal element associated with psychopaths, but let's leave that part out for the sake of this argument.

If you take the above definition, excluding criminality, you can see how some of these professions and occupations made it on such a list.

Let's face it — journalists have egos. While many of us may not be outwardly egocentric, it is a profession that allows for editors, reporters and photographers to put bylines and photo credits on their work. How many occupations allow for that type of public exposure?

Truthfully, having a byline on a story or column isn't always a good thing. We're more apt to get negative feedback than positive feedback, and having a name associated with an article gives upset readers a target for their anger if there's something they don't like in the stories.

Which brings us to the other characteristics described in the definition.

I think if everyone were lumped into one group, the overriding public sentiment would be that journalists show a lack of empathy, are coldhearted, manipulative and superficial. Like any other profession or occupation, there are people who possess those attributes, but there also are caring and considerate journalists who care about the people they're writing about, the towns they cover and the stories they're sharing.

Interestingly, Media (meaning television and radio) ranked third, so there's a clear distinction between print journalists and those in other mediums, although the print folks aren't far behind on the list.

Journalists seem to be in good company, however, with CEOs, lawyers and surgeons cracking the top five, although if it were a ranking of highest earning occupations it's unlikely we'd make the cut there.

Other noble positions likely to attract psychopaths, according to this author, include salesperson, police officer, clergy person, chef and civil servant.

On the opposite end of the spectrum, the lowest rates of psychopathy lie with such occupations as: care aide; nurse; therapist; craftsperson; beautician/stylist; charity worker; teacher; creative artist; doctor and accountant.

In my opinion, journalist and most of the other occupations included don't belong on the psychopath list. But what do I know? I'm just a crazy newspaper editor.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Busy winter planning

JON BELBER

We have discussed seeds, where they come from, plants and the life cycle of plants. I have brought in seeds and I have saved seeds to sow.

Quite often, I let people know that the quiet winter months are very busy with thoughts of spring seeds, summer programs and growing organic food at a school near you.

For us at Holly Hill Farm, leap frogging past spring in an effort to publish our complete summer program guide for children ages 3-22 has become an annual tradition. At the same time, on another part of the desk in the office, the seed catalogues are open to new and familiar varieties of fruit, vegetable, flower and herb.

And just to add more thoughts to a January day, there are plenty of phone calls and meetings about spring field trips to the farm and beginning school farm gardens.

What is a farm garden you ask? Let's start from the beginning, as in a patch of grass atop Deer Hill, behind the Osgood School in Cohasset.

The unused, grassy patch sits undisturbed in almost complete sun. Having eyed the spot for many years, the only growing going on is a small six foot by two foot flower and herb garden, which was dug and planted with the notion of art teacher Miss Ogden's still life assignments.

Now there are plans to construct four raised beds with rough cut lumber from Copeland & Sons lumber yard in Marshfield. Each bed will measure four feet by eight feet. The beds will sit atop the space where grass once grew. The grass will be removed so the roots of future crops will have little to no competition. There will also be less grass to mow when the kind grounds crew makes their rounds. Until the students and teachers at the Osgood school start to make their own compost from cafeteria waste (a 2015 state wide goal for many institutions) and having a steady supply of renewable, sustainable soil, the beds will be filled with shipped in compost and sand, ready for planting as early as March 15.

For the past few years, the Friends of Holly Hill Farm educational program has been fortunate enough to work with the pre-K, kindergarten and first grade children. We have discussed seeds, where they come from, plants and the life cycle of plants. I have brought in seeds and I have saved seeds to sow. Each year, kindergarteners have taken home a marigold plant in May.

I often hear delightful success stories during the summer from rising first graders about how well their plants have blossomed and flourished. Now, similar lessons will occur, but rather than just in the stately STEM lab, they'll be outside in the festive farm garden.

And it is a farm garden because we will grow sugar snap peas, along with marigolds. The former should snap off the vine in June and be a healthy, sugary tasting snack for those who visit. The latter will keep away some unwanted pests. Potatoes and beans can follow the pea harvest and be ready for a summer and fall harvest. How great for all members of the community to have access to some fresh food and for those rising second graders to come back in September to dig for potatoes.

Many more varieties of plants can be planted, many more rows can be sown, and more beds can be built. But, for now, four beds for farming, a chance to expand the flower and herb garden too for our local butterflies and lots of prime learning opportunities for the whole community.

This is possible at any school, on any patch of grass, similar to when Mary asked, "Might I have a bit of earth?" Hopefully not too contrary a notion to grow some food, while learning as well.

Professional management and diligent members on every town board I can think of, including the Selectmen, were the norm.

16. Negotiation of the Greenbush restoration agreements
17. Village Revitalization
18. Launch of the Farmer's Market

In addition to these initiatives the town hired a public health nurse who continues to serve Cohasset's many seniors. Most importantly, the Finance Department was created and professional management and long-range capital and financial plans, along with consistent oversight by the BOS, led to an improved Bond Rating. Oh, I almost forgot, the financial support for the writing and publication of Volume III of the Town's History.

It wasn't all good. There were failures and frustrations and missteps as well as the successes. There were heated arguments, contentious meetings and angry residents. But I am proud to have played a part in this transformative time. It was a time when volunteers (and there were so many) and town employees worked incredibly hard. Professional management and diligent members on every town board I can think of, including the Selectmen, were the norm. We came together, supported progress and strove for a better town. Many, many people contributed to those achievements, but it was the oversight, the coordination and the broad experience of the Town Manager that made it work so smoothly. We all continue to reap many of the rewards of that administration.

We set the bar high then, and I believe it is fair that I set the bar high now. The town didn't accomplish all of those things in a relatively brief period by expecting anything less than hard work by conscientious selectmen and a highly competent town manager. We still have many motivated, well-intentioned leaders in Cohasset and we continue to expect a lot from them. Not just knowledge of the basics of town government – open meeting laws, preparation of town meeting warrants, review of financial reports, but also respect for the hard work of all volunteers (including conservation commissioners) and respect for your colleagues, especially older ones.

In conclusion, I ask all of the nasty whiners, the finger pointers and the cowards who use my name and disparage me around town while hiding their own identities behind blogging pseudonyms, what role have you played in making Cohasset a better place? What can you point to as your legacy? What will your list look like a decade from now?

I'm proud of the leadership I provided and the role I played and continue to play. I know from experience why we need not only an experienced professional town manager but also a hard-working Board of Selectmen. The record shows that I don't play "gotcha games," I work hard and I continue to offer guidance, even if it falls on deaf ears. So before the next round of personal attacks begins, try something productive instead.

SWIM AND DIVE

Small team gives big effort

Group sets individual and team goals

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

There has been a bit of confusion over the past few season about the Cohasset swim and dive team.

Part of that was due to a relationship with Scituate that had the towns practicing and competing together on a regular basis.

That partnership had to do with numbers and pool availability.

This year, the teams have a few meets where they compete at the same time, but the teams are both their own entities.

Marked improvements

Cohasset/Norwell hits season high

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

Facing Bridgewater-Raynham is certainly no easy task. The Trojans recently handed a talented Marshfield squad a significant loss. But the certainly didn't have an easy time against Norwell/Cohasset. In fact, Norwell/Cohasset turned in one phenomenal performance after another in all four events to take a 120.70-116.50 victory. The following night, the Clippers set a season high in a tough loss to Hingham.

In the meet against Bridgewater-Raynham, after the first rotation, Cohasset/Norwell held a four-point lead. The team delivered strong performances on the beam from Emma Basso (7.5), Olivia Rober (7.40), Elizabeth Coletta (7.1), and Alex Oremus (6.80).

Norwell/Cohasset still maintained a lead after two events, performing well enough on the vault to lead at halftime. Basso led the way with an 8.35, followed by Kelsey McCunney (8.1), and Carly Oremus and Emily Kuhn, who both had an 8.0.

After the balance beam, Cohasset/Norwell increased its lead to five and a half points. Mimi Waters (7.70), Basso (7.5), and Coletta (7.45) led the way.

The team ended the meet on the floor exercise, and the routines were pretty spot on, led by Basso (7.8), Coletta (7.6), McCunney (7.4), and Christina Tedeschi (7.30).

Sickness and injury hampered Norwell/Cohasset in its 124.35-123.80 loss to Hingham. On the bars, Basso scored a 7.60, followed by Alex Oremus (7.40), Rober (7.35), and Tedeschi (7.30).

Rox a hit in first season as Futures Collegiate Baseball League

The Brockton Rox have been named the 2012 FCBL Organization of the Year after setting a league attendance record with 41,141 total fans and averaging 1,714 fans per night.

The 2012 season was Brockton's first in the Futures League, and in summer collegiate baseball. Prior to 2012, Brockton had been affiliated with independent professional baseball in the Can-Am League. As President of the Rox Michael Canina said, "There were some skeptics on whether a switch in leagues would be successful, but we believed in what the FCBL was doing and we knew we wanted to be a part of it. It was an amazing year both on and off the field. We couldn't have enjoyed this success without our fans, corporate sponsors, the support of the Brockton 21st Century Corporation, and the City of Champions. We are looking forward to bringing the Championship back to Brockton in 2013."

Cohasset was represented well on the Rox with Brendan Doonan, Rob McCunney, Jeff Cavanaro and Jordan Berry playing for the team.

All of them played for Cohasset American Legion Post 118, and Doonan and Cavanaro were big pieces in Cohasset High School state championship baseball teams.

The Rox immediate success on both the business end and on the playing field quickly vaulted the franchise into the upper echelon of summer collegiate baseball across the entire country. In their inaugural season, the Rox drew the 12th highest attendance in all of summer collegiate baseball, and made the playoffs in a league that had rapidly expanded in terms of talent from the prior season.

YOUTH LACROSSE

Registration open

2013 Cohasset Spring Youth Lacrosse registration is now open

Cohasset Spring Youth Lacrosse registration is now open. COURTESY PHOTO

Registration is now open for Cohasset girls and boys in grades 1 through 8 for the spring lacrosse season (www.cohassetlacrosse.com.) This is the 18th year of lacrosse in Cohasset, sponsored by Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, which is the primary organizing body for spring lacrosse instruction, league play and for supporting the woman's and men's Cohasset Varsity Lacrosse program through fund raising and organizing events. The program is run by volunteers and coaches who strive to promote a love for the game with a focus on providing a positive, encouraging experience for every player.

U9 Clinics:

First and second graders participate in the U9 intro-to-lacrosse clinics. Sessions are held weekly on Saturday afternoons on the middle school front field.

The U9 players are coached by parent-coaches and high school volunteers with a focus on fun and encouragement. Basic skills are introduced through fun drills and we include a 2-3 scrimmages with neighboring towns as the season progresses.

Third grade through eighth grade boys and girls:

This year teams are arranged by grade in both the boys and girls program. We continue to work closely with the Cohasset High School coaching staff to ensure we are teaching players the most advanced skills and game concepts. We combine weekday practices with weekend games to ensure a healthy balance of instruction and competition.

Pre-season training begins in March and the regular season runs from early April to June.

We will take full advantage of Alumni field this year with a new feature for eighth grade boys and selected girls teams: the "Friday Night Lights" program.

So what else do you need to know?

Register for the season by following the registration link at www.cohassetlacrosse.com

Contact Brian Murphy (b.murphy@ubs.com) and Paul Appleton (pappleto@bidmc.harvard.edu) for questions about the boys program and Tom Hansen (tom.hansen@cbre.com) on girls related questions.

Please note the deadline for 2013 registration is Friday, February 1.

Late registrants will be accepted onto a waiting list and late fees will apply.

The on-field success can be attributed to manager Jud Thigpen and his assistant Ted Currle who guided the Rox to playoff contention.

The Brockton organization was led by President Michael Canina and general manager Tom Healy both of whom had prior experience with Brockton in its past affiliation with independent baseball. Despite the organization's immediate and tremendous success in the FCBL, the organization still has tremendous growth potential, making the Rox a serious player on the national landscape for summer collegiate baseball in the coming years.

The FCBL provides student-athletes from New England and New England Colleges the opportunity to compete and play with the elite players from across the country and to promote them to MLB organizations. The Brockton Rox successfully fulfill the FCBL mission of providing a family friendly, affordable, and fun experience to their community in a professional minor league setting.

The FCBL currently competes within four New England states. The Torrington Titans play in Connecticut, the Brockton Rox, Martha's Vineyard Sharks, Pittsfield Suns, North Shore Navigators, and Wachusett Dirt Dawgs play in Massachusetts, the Seacoast Mavericks and Nashua Silver Knights play in New Hampshire, and the Old Orchard Beach Raging Tide play in Maine. You can visit the league's website at www.thefuturesleague.com.

"We are extremely proud and honored to win this award and are thankful to commissioner Chris Hall and the owners of the FCBL Franchises for all their help and support," said Canina.

"This year we have been much more independent of Scituate," Cohasset coach Michelle Millerd said. "We have a few away meets together, but it's more clear that we are separate. Scituate has gotten big. I'm hoping those numbers come to us."

Regardless of the numbers, Cohasset has done extremely well this season, despite the actual overall team records.

The boys are 1-3, while the girls are 2-3.

Most of the team numbers have to do with numbers.

"It's hard for a smaller team," Millerd said about winning meets. "But individuals are improving. Our relays are getting better. As a team, we can have someone come in first, but if we don't have the second, third or fourth there aren't as many points."

Cohasset does win its share of first place finishes.

That can be attributed to a bit of star power.

For the boys, junior Clarke Indek is usually a lock for a top finish in then 100 backstroke, the 200 IM and the 500 freestyle.

He has already qualified for States in those events.

On the girls side, senior Hope Kissick is a state champion and she has qualified for States in the 100 breast and Sectionals in the 100 fly and 200 IM.

Kissick will be playing lacrosse at the University of Florida next year.

While the two stars have brought a number of points to the meets, the team has a group of swimmers who have been growing and improving on a consistent basis.

"Maggie Littlejohn and Christine Guinee are our distance swimmers. They have both improved a lot since last year," Millerd said. "Maggie dropped 20 seconds from her 500 from where she was last year, and Christine has dropped 10 seconds."

Freshman Luke Norton swam with the team as an eighth grader last year.

"He's showing big improvement," Millerd said. "I can put him in anything. He steps up and swims it. He's a jack of all trades."

Bridget Berube has also done well as a freshman.

"Bridget had an older sister who swam a few years ago," Millerd said. "She's doing well."

Millerd said there is an influx of youth that will help for the next several years.

"I have seven eighth grade girls who have been a great asset," she said. "They do a nice job filling in the relays. The whole eighth grade group is good. There are two eighth graders, Maggie and Vivian Littlejohn who have been really helping with points."

Despite the smaller team size, Cohasset has been competitive.

"They do have team goals," Millerd said. "The boys want to win three meets. They have a good time. They have fun."

Millerd said the team captains, seniors Bobby Nahill, Kissick and Ryan McCarthy have been a big part of keeping things fun and competitive.

"The captains have done a great job making the younger kids feel welcome," she said. "They make sure they know they're important to the team and want to help them fee comfortanble and do well."

Brigette Berube competes in the 100 yard backstroke.

For Millerd, who is in her second year as head coach, and was an assistant before that, part of the fun is watching the kids mature.

"I'll see Clarke next year as a senior and I'll have been there all four years with him," she said. "It's been a pleasure watching Hope go from a sophomore to a senior."

In recent action, Cohasset swam against Hingham, which was interesting for Millerd.

"My daughter swims for Hingham she said. "It was an interesting day. Hingham had a lot of their boys out sick. We thought we might sneak up on them, but we still lost. The girls beat us pretty good."

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The Rangers finished last in the Fall Season in the Classics Div. of the South Coastal Hockey League, but they are the only team in the division to win their first two games.

The line of Marshfield's Tom Smith (three assists), Bob Sideropoulos of Pembroke (a goal and two assists) and Rockland's Jim O'Toole (two goals) combined for eight points in the Rangers' 3-1 win over the Black Hawks.

Tony Rota scored the goal for the Black Hawks in the first period.

John Tympanick and Hanover's Jim Martin scored two goals each while Steve Anzuoni and Pembroke's Mike Martin had two assists each in the Bruins 4-2 Classics Div. win over the Canadiens.

Pembroke's Mike Fahie and Glen Harnisch of Marshfield scored the goals for the Canadiens. Harnisch also assisted on the Fahie goal.

Rockland's Marty DeCourcey scored two goals while Chris Harrington of Marshfield scored a goal and assisted on another in the Maple Leafs 4-1 Classics Div. win over the Red Wings. Jeff Gauthier scored the other goal for the Leafs and Ted Duggan scored the goal for the Red Wings.

Pembroke's Mark Frano recorded a shutout while Norwell's Joe Murray, Chris Poudrier and Ken Wingate scored a goal and assisted on another one each as the Stingers pulled out a 5-0 Legends Div. win over the Crusaders. Paul Smyth and Peter Tamborella of Pembroke also scored a goal each for the Stingers.

Jonathan Graham scored a goal and assisted on another one and Marshfield's Justin Stratton recorded the shutout in the Saints 4-0 win over the Whalers in a Legends Div. win. Hanover's Tom Shaughnessy, Chuck Ryan and Mike Ryan also scored for the Saints.

Steve Collela of Duxbury and Rockland's Wayne Murphy scored a goal apiece while Paul Brinkman had two assists as the Toros held off the Sharks by a 2-1 score in a Legends Div. game.

Fitness trends

What will 2013 bring to your workout?

By Douglas Bennett
Special to GateHouse Media

Let the fitness resolutions begin. Another year and more fitness trends to keep you fit. Every year there's always another fitness regime to get you ramped up to lose weight and get into shape. Fitness 2013 is no different.

The biggest trend we'll see for many people is variety. People will be utilizing many different fitness programs to get into shape.

Seniors will be participating in group swimming classes, functional training programs (exercises that mimic daily activity rather than using one-dimensional fitness machines) and group aerobic classes. Children and teens will be participating in sports training programs, obesity programs and dance fitness, like Zumba. Ladies and men ages 25 to 50 will be making this year a big one. I predict they'll be participating in not just one fitness regimen. They'll be a participant in a few programs like Crossfit, Cardio Boxing, Bar Classes, Pilates, Yoga (all types), sports training and even utilizing their phone (fitness apps).

Scituate resident Vicky Defraitis, right, is trained by Doug Bennett, the owner of The Body Studio in Cohasset, in a cardio boxing class Defraitis calls "the best workout ever." PHOTO COURTESY OF THE BODY STUDIO

So, whatever age you may be. This year may be your best chance to get fit with lots of variety. Set your goal, pick one or two fitness programs, eat healthy and get going!

Concussion awareness

Keep informed to safeguard your young athlete

Cringing at bumps, falls, trips and nudges is a common response among parents of young athletes. Seventy-two percent of parents of children ages 6 to 17 report that they are highly concerned about their child experiencing a head injury on the sports field, according to a recent survey conducted by NMI Research and DSM Nutritional Products, and their concern is not unwarranted. In fact, data indicates that emergency room visits of school-age athletes for serious injuries like concussions have significantly increased in recent years.

Not all concussions involve a loss of consciousness so every parent on the sidelines should be aware of the signs that a serious injury may have occurred. PHOTO COURTESY OF BRANDPOINT

Parents should continue to encourage their children to get involved with youth sports, but they need to be aware that hard-hitting spills could have a lasting impact on their child's brain health if not handled properly.

"I've worked with young and old athletes who are experiencing the lasting effects of head trauma during sports," says Dr. Julian Bailes, a neurosurgeon and sports medicine expert who has worked with professional and college athletes for more than two decades. "In many cases, their parents or coaches were eager to get them back in the game because they didn't show signs of an injury. Through research, we're finding that even minor repeated head injuries can cause long-term effects on brain function."

Concussion is the most common head injury and is seen across a wide spectrum of sports – football, soccer, lacrosse, basketball, hockey – virtually all youth sports. Recent publicity and an increased awareness about concussions has helped coaches, parents, educators and school and medical personnel better recognize the often-hidden signs of concussion and treat its many primary and secondary effects.

The Sports Concussion Clinic at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth offers "a multidisciplinary approach to the evaluation and treatment of sports-related concussions," according to its Web site. Young athletes are evaluated by specially trained physicians who then prescribe a course of rehabilitative treatment that includes ongoing cognitive and physical assessment and, if needed, physical therapy. The clinic utilizes ImPACT – Immediate Post-Concussion Assessment and Cognitive Testing – to evaluate and monitor the athlete's progress. Unlike traditional neurological tests such as MRIs, ImPACT is a computerized neurocognitive evaluation system that can measure the subtle neurological changes that can follow a concussion. Many schools and professional sports teams are now recommending that athletes take a baseline ImPACT test so that its results can be compared to a post-concussion test to detect variations.

Dr. Janet Kent, medical director of the Sports Concussion Clinic, is board-certified in physical medicine and rehabilitation and has worked with patients with brain injuries for more than 10 years. Kent prescribes a strict regimen for athletes recovering from concussions, including limiting television, texting and computer time; refraining from physical exertion; and getting rest – and more rest. The brain needs to heal from a traumatic brain injury, or TBI, and the only way that it can accomplish this is through rest.

Physical symptoms of concussion include blurry vision, vertigo, sensitivity to light and noise, and difficulty concentrating, remembering or thinking clearly. Extreme fatigue, and feeling sluggish, hazy or foggy are common complaints. Because these symptoms can make completing a full school day difficult, Kent recommends a shorter school day, opportunities for rest periods, flexible testing situations and other accommodations made as the athlete returns to school. Three South Shore Hospital programs – the Sports Concussion Clinic, the Youth Health Connection and the Reading Partnership – have teamed with Scituate Pediatrics and Scituate High School to develop HeadSmart, a "recovery protocol" that provides four "stages of recovery" to help families, friends, school personnel and teachers assist a student's return to school and sports following a concussion. Recovery can be frustrating, isolating and depressing; understanding and knowledge can help ease the transition.

Every parent on the sidelines should be aware of the signs that a serious injury may have occurred. A head injury from a bump, blow or jolt to the head should be monitored for at least 30 minutes, and immediate medical attention should be sought if symptoms worsen, according to the Centers for Disease Control. Not all concussions involve a loss of consciousness. In fact, most people who have concussions never black out. Some indicators that a child may have a concussion and needs to see a doctor include headaches, listlessness, irritability, changes in sleeping, eating or school performance, loss of balance or unsteady walking.

Play it safe and don't take any chances. If your child experiences head trauma, or you suspect a concussion during practice or in a game, seek medical attention immediately. And don't be too eager to get them back in the game – wait until your child is cleared to return to sports by a doctor.

Sports are an important and healthy part of childhood, but being an athlete is not without risks," Bailes says. "It only takes one poor or uninformed choice for a game to turn from fun to tragedy. Every parent, coach and child should be educated on how to recognize and handle head injuries during sports."

National Radon Action Month

Find out if you're at risk

By Beth Doyle
bdoyle@wickedlocal.com

January is National Radon Action Month, which is focused on raising awareness about the dangers of high radon levels in homes. Radon is the leading cause of lung cancer deaths among nonsmokers in America and claims the lives of about 20,000 Americans each year, according to the United States Environmental Protection Agency. Home testing, awareness of the dangers of radon, and lung cancer prevention are the goals of National Radon Action Month.

A national radon map indicates that Massachusetts is a Zone 2 area, counties that have a predicted average indoor radon screening level between 2 and 4 pCi/L (pico curies per liter); 4.0 pCi/L is the corrective action level set by the EPA. IMAGE COURTESY OF WWW.RADONMONTH.ORG

Radon maps show where the gas is most prevalent in the United States, with Massachusetts rated as a Zone 2 area – counties that have a predicted average indoor radon screening level between 2 and 4 pCi/L (pico curies per liter). Normal levels found

Strategies for women to quit smoking

By Dorothy Foltz-Gray
Spry Magazine

If you want to know how to quit smoking – for good – you may need more than determination and nicotine replacement therapies. For women, kicking the habit may take specific gender-based strategies, according to the researchers behind a 2012 Yale University study that revealed differences in the way women and men respond to nicotine.

Researchers discovered that the brains of men who smoke have a much higher number of nico- tine receptors compared to brains of male nonsmokers, but there was no such difference between female smokers and non-smokers, says lead author Dr. Kelly Cosgrove, assistant professor of psychiatry at Yale University School of Medicine.

The greater number of nicotine receptors in male smokers suggests that men tend to smoke for the nicotine. "But women may smoke to relieve stress and improve their mood," Cosgrove says.

Women with high levels of the female hormone progesterone, which surges during pregnancy and just before menstruation, also reported more nicotine cravings and worse withdrawal symptoms, Cosgrove says: "That suggests hormones may play a role in helping or hurting women" when they're figuring out how to quit.

Understanding such differences may unlock more effective smoking cessation solutions for women. Below are female-friendly tips for kissing cigarettes goodbye:

Set a quit date for just after your period

"Withdrawal symptoms are similar to premenstrual symptoms so that right before a women's period, her nicotine cravings are much worse," says Dr. Robert Klesges, professor of Preventive Medicine at the University of Tennessee Health Sciences Center in Memphis.

Find relaxation substitutes

If smoking has always helped you relax, find other healthy substitutes, Cosgrove says, like meditation or deep breathing. Try this breathing exercise: While sitting or lying down, slowly breathe through your nose, letting your stomach rise. Slowly exhale through your mouth. Repeat for 10 minutes twice a day.

Take up exercise

"Exercise can decrease stress and improve mood," Cosgrove says. According to a 2012 Taiwanese study, researchers found that smokers who exercised were 55 percent more likely to quit smoking and 43 percent less likely to relapse than those who were inactive. Active ex-smokers also increased their life expectancy by 5.6 years.

Seek other social outlets

Women like the social connection of smoking, Cosgrove says. But they can find that link else- where: "Make friends with people who don't smoke or with people who have successfully quit," she says. "If you start going to a gym, you will definitely meet people who don't smoke." New hobbies like knitting are another way to meet people and occupy cigarette-free hands.

Pump up nicotine replacement

Women should use both a nicotine patch and nicotine gum when they get cravings, Klesges suggests: "The two together are much more effective than either alone. And the gum gives you something to do besides smoking."

Try non-nicotine-based meds

Antidepressants like Zyban and Wellbutrin may be worth a try, Cosgrove says. "They release feel- good chemicals in the brain – dopamine, norepinephrine and serotonin – so that theoretically you won't need cigarettes as a mood booster."

Focus on beauty

"Smoking causes wrinkles because of the lip action, and because it ages skin," says Dr. Len Horvitz, a pulmonary specialist at Lenox Hill Hospital in New York City. Nicotine causes blood vessels to narrow, impairing blood flow and the delivery of oxygen and nutrients to skin. Cigarettes' chemicals also damage collagen and elastin, the skin fibers that help keep faces smooth.

Understand the gender effect

"Smoking makes it harder to get pregnant and can make women go into early menopause," Cosgrove says. "It can also make osteoporosis" – a bone-weakening condition – "worse, and its effect on heart health is greater in women."

Check out sites for women

Women.smokefree.gov, a site created by a branch of the National Cancer Institute, offers information on how to quit smoking and how smoking affects pregnancy, relationships and weight gain. Great Start (www.legacyforhealth.org) is a program of the American Legacy Foundation, providing a quit line that offers free counseling and educational information to pregnant smokers.

Do some navel gazing

Since women may smoke for reasons other than the nicotine high, explore why you smoke and how you feel when you quit, Cosgrove says: "For instance, if you feel fat, unhappy or depressed, those things need to be addressed, perhaps through individual therapy."

NUTRITION

Resolve to eat healthier

Make changes that will improve your health and your bottom line

It's the beginning of the New Year, and resolutions abound for many. Losing weight, exercising more frequently and eating more healthfully are common goals. What if you could do all of the above and save a few dollars at the same time? This January, consider the following strategies from TOPS Club Inc. (Take Off Pounds Sensibly), the nonprofit weight-loss support organization, to create flavorful, nutritious meals that won't hurt your wallet.

Eat in more and out less

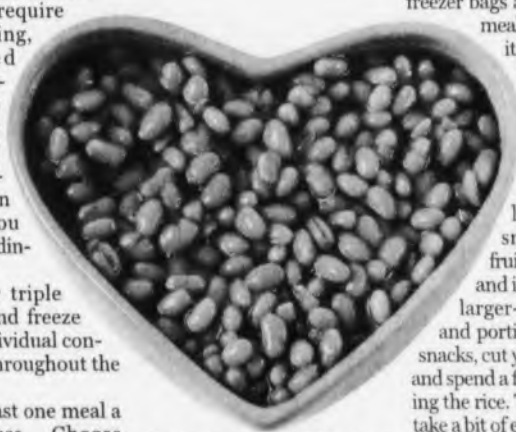
While they require more planning, home-cooked meals are an excellent way to minimize your grocery bill, and they are typically healthier than the options you may find when dining out.

• Double or triple your recipes and freeze leftovers in individual containers to eat throughout the week.

• Make at least one meal a week meatless. Choose recipes that utilize beans (canned or dried) and grains, which add a boost of nutrition.

Plan ahead

A meal planning chart or simple shopping list for the week are great tools for the budget-minded, health-conscious consumer. Knowing what you already have in the pantry and what you intend to make ahead of time reduces impulse spending, saves time and improves the nutritional value of your meal.



• Take part of one day a week to plan the upcoming week's menu. Search "meal planning charts" online for a variety of templates and convenient shopping tools.

• Include meals that will "stretch" more expensive food items, like stews, casseroles and stir-fries.

• In addition to reviewing weekly store circulars in advance for sales, check the back of your grocery receipt for additional coupons. Also check online for coupons, simply by searching for the products that you use and visiting the manufacturers' websites.

Shop smart

In addition to shopping at grocery stores, consider local markets, dollar stores and shopping online, if available in your neighborhood. For the best deals at the market, look for reduced produce or end-of-the-day specials.

Many online grocery services offer discounted or free shipping if you spend a minimum amount, and you'll be more inclined to stick to your list and avoid splurging on unnecessary purchases.

Some other suggestions include:

• Shop only once a week. This makes it easier to avoid unnecessary purchases and encourages you to buy only what you need for the weekly menu.

• Have a snack before you visit the grocery store. Shopping on an empty stomach can lead to impulse buying.

• Shop alone, to prevent family members' impulse selections from ending up in the shopping cart.

• "Shop the perimeter" of the store, remembering that the least healthy and most overpriced packaged foods are concentrated in the middle aisles.

• Look high and low (literally) on store shelves to find generic items from store brands, which are often less expensive than, but identical to, name-brand items, which are placed at eye level on shelves.

• Buying "economy" or "family size" containers is sometimes a better buy – if you truly eat all of the food in the package. If it spoils and has to be thrown away, it may just be a waste of money. Select large packages of meat, poultry and fish, and place them in separate freezer bags at home for each meal. Non-perishable items like canned food, cereal, soup and nuts are a good choice.

• Avoid purchasing "convenience" foods, like single-serving snacks, pre-cut fruits and vegetables, and instant rice. Buy a larger-sized container and portion out your own snacks, cut your own produce and spend a few minutes cooking the rice. These efforts may take a bit of extra time up front but will ultimately save you dollars.

• If fresh fruits and vegetables are cost-prohibitive, try the frozen or canned versions made with "100 percent juice" and "low sodium," respectively. Frozen produce is often flash-frozen at the source, locking in nutrients. Rinse canned vegetables before cooking to further reduce the sodium content.

in outside air measure 0.4 pCi/L; the average indoor radon level is 1.3 pCi/L; at 2.7 pCi/L, lung cancer risk rises 16 percent; and 4.0 pCi/L is the corrective action level set by the EPA. Areas where radon levels are highest require more frequent testing and more preventative measures be taken.

Radon is a radioactive gas that comes from the natural decay of uranium that is found in nearly all soils. It typically moves up through the ground to the air above and into your home through cracks and holes in the foundation. You can't see, smell or taste radon, but it could be present at a dangerous level in your home.

U-238 (uranium) has a very long half-life so it has been around a long time and is common in rock and soil, according to the National Radon Action Month Web site, www.radonmonth.org. It decays to radium, which decays to radon, whose gas can enter your home. The process continues as radon gas decays to produce other radioactive elements, which, when attached to dust particles and inhaled, may lodge in the lungs. The radioactive decay elements then emit alpha particles in energy bursts that may affect the cells in the lung, which may lead to lung cancer.

Since radon is found in the soil, air and water supplies, it is important to look for ways to increase clean air inside the home and test local water wells.

With modern radon resistant building materials available, early awareness of potentially high radon levels can eliminate the health risks associated with the gas.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health includes a Radiation Control Program, where you can get specific information on how to get your home tested and receive help interpreting the results of the test. Visit www.mass.gov/dph/rcp for details.

For additional information on radon, its health effects and a "Consumer's Guide to Radon Reduction: How to Fix your home," visit www.epa.gov/radon.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JAN. 28, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're eager to take on that new opportunity opening up as January gives way to February. Now all you need to do is resist quitting too early. Do your best to stay with it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Doff a bit of that careful, conservative outlook and let your brave Bovine self take a chance on meeting that new challenge. You could be surprised at how well you do.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might not want to return to the more serious tasks facing you. But you know it's what you must do. Cheer up. Something more pleasant soon will occupy your time.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) As you dutifully tidy up your end-of-the-month tasks, your fun self emerges to urge you to do something special: A trip (or a cruise, maybe?) could be just what you need.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your achievements are admirable as you close out the month with a roar. Now you can treat yourself to some well-earned time off for fun with family or friends. (Or both!)

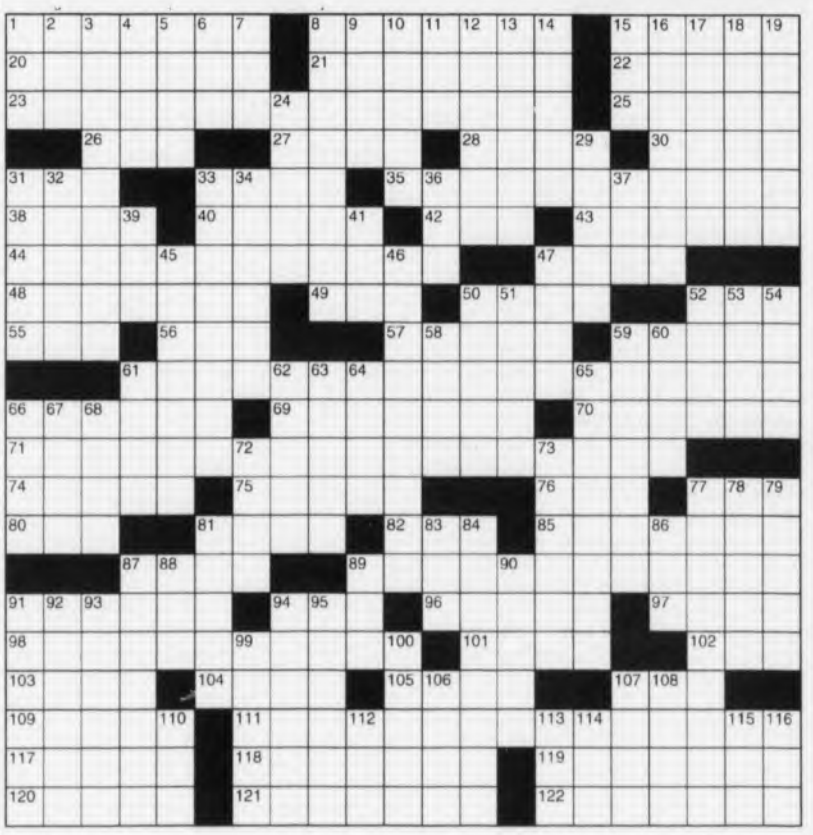
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be sure you know the facts before you assume someone is holding back on your project. Try to open your mind before you give someone a piece of it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might feel comfortable in your familiar surroundings, but it might be time to venture into something new. There's a challenge out there that's just right for you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your love of things that are new gets a big boost as you encounter a situation that opens up new and exciting vistas. How far you go with it depends on you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) That recent workplace shift might not seem to be paying off as you expected. But be patient. There are changes coming that could make a big difference.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While few can match the Goat's fiscal wizardry, you still need to be wary in your dealings. There might be a problem you should know about sooner rather than later.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Easy does it when it comes to love and all the other good things in life. Don't try to force them to develop on your schedule. Best to let it happen naturally.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A surprise decision by someone you trust causes some stormy moments. But a frank discussion explains everything, and helps save a cherished relationship.

BORN THIS WEEK: Sometimes you forget to take care of yourself, because you're so busy caring for others. But you wouldn't have it any other way.

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Stephen L. Ward

COHASSET – Stephen L. Ward, 67, of Cohasset, died peacefully at home on January 12th after a seven month battle with colon cancer.

Stephen grew up in Scituate and graduated, in 1964 in the first graduating class of South Shore Vo-Tech High School. He then went on to be a mechanic in the U.S. Army. For the last forty years, Stephen was the owner of Cohasset Diesel & Gas Repair.

Stephen is survived by his wife of nearly forty-six years, Judy (Young) Ward and two daughters, Lisa W. Ryan and her husband John of Scituate and Leanne W. Kearney and her husband Paul of Hanover and a sister; Susan (Sue) V. Hart and her husband Dennis of Norwell. He had four grandchildren that he loved dearly; Madeline Ryan, Parker Ryan, Nicholas Ryan and Ronan Kearney. He was the son of the late George M. Ward and Virginia (Chipman) Ward of Scituate.

Stephen loved his work and enjoyed the many people he met during the past four decades in business. He was considered the local expert on all things related to repairing and rebuilding engines on boats, trucks and heavy equipment. He was famous for his grizzly greetings, always owning only red Ford trucks, having a beard like Santa Claus and always carrying a screw driver in his back pocket. His work was his passion, but he also enjoyed a good weekend afternoon on the boat in Cohasset or Scituate Harbor or the North River with friends and family. He also loved collecting antique watch fobs, watching NASCAR races and tinkering with his layout of model trains. Stephen had many lifelong friends, whom he and Judy enjoyed skiing, traveling and boating with. His family would like to thank his friends who traveled from near and far to spend his last days with him.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Stephen's name may be made to the Harbor Methodist Church, 55 First Parish Rd., Scituate.

A memorial gathering of relatives and friends was held on Tuesday, January 15th from 4-8PM at the Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, 382 First Parish Rd, Scituate. A memorial Celebration of Life service was held on Wednesday, Jan. 16th at 11 AM in Harbor United Methodist Church, 55 First Parish Rd, Scituate. Kindergartener Coleman Kearney pays close attention to Sandy Kiefer while she talks about the cello at her program.

Sandy Kiefer plays the cello while telling a story to Mrs. Welch's kindergarten class at the Osgood School during her program, "The Talking Cello," on Wednesday, Jan. 9.

Ella Murphy is amazed by the different sounds a cello can make.

Music magic

Kindergarten students at the Joseph Osgood School enjoyed a musical performance by the talented Sandy Kiefer and her Talking Cello. During this special presentation, students explored the construction of the cello, and then were delighted to hear the cello's ability to create a variety of different sounds. Throughout the performance, Sandy demonstrated how music and words connect by telling a story using the cello's special sound and musical effects. The program culminated with the students creating their own story as a group, which Sandy then performed on the cello. The program was generously funded by the Cohasset PSO.

Staff photos by Robin Chan

Medical marijuana centers here?

Planning Board addresses the new law

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Planning Board tackled a controversial topic during their Wednesday, Jan 23 meeting — what to do about medical marijuana dispensaries in Cohasset. Municipalities across the state have been addressing this issue since the legalization of medical marijuana passed in last November's election.

According to officials, 63 percent of Cohasset voters were in favor of the ballot question (Question 3) on allowing people with certain health conditions to get prescriptions for medical marijuana, eliminating state criminal penalties for medical use. Those who meet the criteria will be able to obtain marijuana from state-regulated distribution centers, or dispensaries; or, in the case of hardship, grow a 60-day supply at home.

The planners discussed several options concerning the use of medical marijuana in town, including proposing a ban to Town Meeting, creating a special zoning district, or the "do nothing" approach. The board also considered placing a moratorium on making any decisions on the issue for a year while waiting to see what the state Department of Public Health (DPH) dictates. The DPH has until June 1 to issue regulations on medical marijuana.

After weighing several options, the planners voted unanimously to come up with language for a moratorium to propose at the Annual Town Meeting (April 22). Board of Health Agent/Administrator Felix Zemel explained the options in detail, along with Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. Deputy Police Chief William Quigley and Detective

Math Done Right! at local schools

On Thursday, Jan. 17, students at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools got to experience Greg Tang's World of Math. Students of all ages were challenged and engaged as they followed the fast-paced presentation on mental math. Greg challenged the students and teachers to "think smart" about math concepts. The "Math Done Right Program" — co-funded through a grant by the Cohasset PSO and the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) — consisted of assemblies for all kindergarten through fifth-grade students and a full day of professional development on grade-level strategies to more effectively teach math concepts.

"The assemblies re-enforced fundamental concepts such as the power of "10." Greg demonstrated to students and teachers alike that math is easy if you learn to break apart numbers in smart ways", said Kathy Brooks, Deer Hill and Osgood Math Specialist.

Greg Tang is working to develop a more intuitive approach to teaching math, one that combines problem solving and arithmetic and integrates math with language and art. He is the author of eight books, including Math Fables for ages 3 to 6 and Math Potatoes for ages 8 to 13. Many of the concepts he introduced at the student assemblies will continue to be utilized by the teachers as they integrated Greg Tang's math strategies and math games such as Kakooma into the curriculum.

For more information and a link to Greg Tang's on-line math games visit: gregtang-math.com.

WHAT IS GOING ON HERE?

Gas station under construction

What and where
Stop & Shop is building a fuel facility at the former Sunoco site across from Cohasset Plaza at 391 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Work should be completed by spring.

More
Plans are to install four gasoline pumps with eight pumping positions covered by a canopy. The site will also include a kiosk with a restroom and a vending machine. There will be an attendant on sight. Stop & Shop will be adding landscaping throughout the site. Points awarded to customers at Stop & Shop can be used for discounts on gas purchases.

Traffic pattern:
The existing curb cut on upper King Street would be used as an exit-only from the station. Plans are to have one entrance and one exit onto Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Those wishing to make a left-hand turn onto Route 3A northbound from the facility would exit onto King Street and then make a left at the lights. The right-turn-only exit onto Route 3A would be angled in such a way as to discourage a motorist from trying to turn left and head north. There will also be signage indicating no left-hand turns.

COMMUNITY CABLE

Studio sets its budget

Talks partnership with schools

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's own community cable TV studio has had a busy year. Since its official launch last March, the station, 143tv, has showcased the popular "Our Town" talk show featuring interviews with notable residents, as well as filmed major events, from sports games to the High School "Mr. Skipper" competition, all over town.

As the new year is well under way, the town's Cable Advisory Committee recently set their current fiscal year budget; the Board of Selectmen approved the budget last week. The committee, which oversees the cable studio's corporation, Cohasset Community TV, is required to produce an annual budget for selectmen's approval.

With a total income of nearly $120,000 from cable fees and DVD sales, and expenses, ranging from equipment to payroll, studio rental (the studio is housed in the Middle-High School library), web hosting and Verizon Cable access, totaling at over $112,000, the cable company raked in a little over $6,000 in 2012. The company does have savings accounts, with over $102,000 in total current assets as of Dec. 31, 2012. With fixed assets, the amount of total assets is nearly $275,000.

For FY 2013, the cable company expects to spend just under $85,000 for operating expenses and nearly $24,000 in capital expenditures, including new studio lighting and camera field accessories. The studio expects to bring in around $123,000 in revenue.

While the cable studio is a community resource, it is its own corporation. The studio costs are paid for by

Alison DeMers

ONLY IN PRINT

Name: Alison DeMers.

Occupation: Young Adult/Reference Librarian.

Best day of your life: I've had a lot of great days, hopefully the best one hasn't happened yet!

Best (or worst) vacation: Best vacation was my trip to Orlando with my mom and sister last May to go to the Wizarding World of Harry Potter. We had so much fun!

Favorite season: Spring.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving.

Favorite junk food (or meal): I could live on pancakes, peanut butter, and apple pie.

Best book (or magazine): Asking a librarian to choose a favorite book?? Too hard. I love anything with a little magic and/or a strong female protagonist.

Best movie (or actor): Favorite movie is probably "The Sound of Music."

Best TV show: "Buffy the Vampire Slayer," definitely. Current favorites include "Scandal," "The Vampire Diaries," and "Dexter."

Best music, group, or artist: Classic rock and 90s pop are my favorites; I love Simon and Garfunkel and boy bands.

Pet peeve: I'm a grammar nerd, so incorrect use of apostrophes drives me insane.

Fun fact: I love to knit and crochet so I'm a little obsessed with yarn.

Goal: Try new things! I like my comfort zone too much.

Person you'd most like to meet: J.K Rowling.

Best part of Cohasset: My mom grew up here, my grandfather lived here his whole life, and my aunt just moved back into my grandparents' house. There's a lot of family history for me here which I really love.

POLICE CHIEF UPDATE

DeLuca's contract ends

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset Police Chief Mark DeLuca's employment contract with the town expired at midnight on Thursday, Jan. 24.

DeLuca had been suspended with pay since May 25, during which the chief has received $2500 per week. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski placed the chief on paid leave after Cohasset's police union filed 11 allegations of misconduct, including forgery and physical abuse, against the chief. DeLuca told the media this past fall that the accusations against him were all false.

The embattled chief could have had a hearing on the allegations but opted out, agreeing instead to allow his contract to run out. DeLuca came to Cohasset from Duxbury after his contract there was not renewed in 2009. He had been chief in Duxbury for 10 years.

There, he was accused of favoritism and intimidating fellow police officers and town officials. DeLuca was hired in Cohasset and later filed suit against the town of Duxbury, stating that his contract was not renewed because he was "supporting the organization of a management union," according to reports.

The allegations from Cohasset's police union have not been shared publicly, except for four general descriptions that Acting Town Manager Michael Milonoski wrote in his suspension letter to DeLuca: "Using your position as chief to secure benefits for which you and others were not entitled to; forging important documents; physical abuse; abusing your authority during an internal affairs investigation."

DeLuca's yearly salary was $136,000. The town is also paying for 25 unused vacation days.

DeLuca started his law enforcement career 30 years ago in the Metro Dade Police Department in Florida before becoming a Boston cop in 1987. He became the Duxbury Police Chief in 1999.

DeLuca was selected for the Cohasset post from a pool of 80 applicants. DeLuca replaced former Police Chief James Hussey. Deluca was hired at a salary of $111,000.

As for finding a replacement for DeLuca, Milanoski said recently that he plans to "keep everything status quo until the end of the fiscal year."

Deputy Chief William Quigley has served as acting police chief; Fire Chief Robert Silvia is overseeing the entire public safety department's administration and finances while Quigley and Assistant Fire Chief John Dockray are handling day-to-day affairs.

Quigley said Wednesday that things are running smoothly.

"Currently everything at the department is very even-keeled," the deputy chief said. "Our police officers are working hard and doing a fantastic job."

DeLuca could not be reached for comment by press time.

Video should help ID men using debit card

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The manager of a local bank notified the daughter of an elderly resident, who has power of attorney for her mother, that there had been a total of 65 failed attempts to use her mother's debit card at Pilgrim Bank, Hingham Institution for Savings, Bank of America and Rockland Trust, all in Cohasset. Police said the failed attempts turned up on the Pilgrim Bank's audit sheets that show the exact time and locations of the attempted transactions. The woman's debit card was at home, so it appears the attempts were made with a duplicate card.

Pilgrim Bank is working with police detectives. Police are pulling the video footage at the four banks. They were able to view the footage at Pilgrim Bank right away, which showed two white males attempting to use the ATM.

Geese hunting

Police said the Cohasset Golf Club has a depredation permit that allows them to remove resident Canada geese from the property. Hunting is also in season now. Goose hunters have been at the golf club shooting the geese, police said. Several callers notified police last Friday and Saturday (Jan. 18 and Jan. 19) after they heard gunshots. Police said hunters must be at least 150 feet from the road and 500 feet from a dwelling. Police said the golf club has been very responsible and is operating under a federal permit to remove the geese that have stopped migrating.

MVA/summons

A 17-year-old Rockland boy is being summonsed to court on Cohasset charges of leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage, unlicensed operation (the boy is a junior operator), and failure to stay in marked lanes. Cohasset police responded to a tip from Rockland police at 4:20 a.m. that they believed the teen had been involved in an accident in Cohasset.

Cohasset police located an unoccupied 2002 Ford Taurus in the area of 685 Jerusalem Road next to a stonewall. Police said the impact of the car hitting the wall, broke the wall through. Police said, when contacted, the teen reported he had come to Cohasset to "relax and reflect" but did not remember what caused the accident. He then called a friend to pick him up. Police said the accident caused $7,000 in damage to the stonewall.

Road rage

Two 20-year-old men from Hingham reported to police that around 9 p.m. on Sunday (Jan. 21), they were driving from West Corner on Jerusalem Road toward Wadleigh Park when a gray or silver Honda Civic started tailgating them. The Honda attempted to pass and then did pass them but then the driver of the Honda soon jammed on the brakes. The Hingham men then passed the Honda but the Honda pulled up next to them at the stop sign at Wadleigh Park. The men reported the driver of the Honda, who had gray hair and appeared to be about 50 years old, started yelling at them, pulled a badge out of his pocket and threatened to take their licenses away. No plate was provided. Police notified other area police departments to see if there have been reports of similar incidents.

Expired plates

Police remind motorists, especially those with commercial plates, to check and be sure that their registration is up to date. The registration on all commercial plates expired on Dec. 31. Police have seen an increase in people being pulled over lately with an expired registration. A vehicle was towed from Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Beechwood Street last week after being pulled over for the expired registration, police said.

School visit

Last week Officer Patrick Reardon with K-9 Erik and Sergeant Jeffrey Treanor visited teacher Jack Buckley's "Introduction to Criminal Justice" class that is part of the Social Studies curriculum at the high school. The students got to meet Erik in the parking lot, pet him and play ball with him. Sergeant Treanor, who is the police department's safety officer, regularly visits the class where he instructs the students on police procedures, changes in the law and on case law.

Raccoon

Police received two calls last week about a raccoon that appeared to be sick and was acting strangely. An officer responded to the Bow Street area where the raccoon, which was not on private property, was put down. The animal control officer disposed of the animal, police said.

Parking lot

Police responded to a parking lot accident at 12:56 p.m. on Wednesday (Jan. 16) at Shaw's Plaza near Buttonwood Books. Police said a 2013 Ford sedan, operated by a 66-year-old Scituate woman backed into an unoccupied 2007 Mini Cooper, owed by a Cohasset resident. There was minor damage, police said.

Egged

Police have taken two reports in recent weeks of vehicles being egged. A Jerusalem Road resident called police last Wednesday to report his Toyota Highlander had been egged and he wanted the incident logged.

Summonsed

A 58-year-old Hingham woman who was driving a 2002 black Audi SUV was stopped last Thursday (Jan. 17) on Ripley Road after she was speeding on Sohier Street in the school zone by Deer Hill School. Police said she was traveling 40 in a 20 mph zone. Further investigation revealed her license had expired in November. She is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and speeding, police said.

Vandalism

An Elm Street woman reported on Saturday that someone had cut a strand of her Christmas lights that were along her fence. Police investigated and determined the strand had clearly been cut. At this point, there is not a lot to go on but the incident has been logged.

Winter parking ban is in effect

Winter parking regulations are in effect through April 1.

MARIJUANA

Gregory Lennon, who also took part in the discussion.

Planning Board chair Stuart Ivimey said that he did not believe the ballot initiative actually required the use of medical marijuana in towns.

"I see nothing in the legislation that says Cohasset must accept it as permitted use," said Ivimey.

He posed that question in an email to Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, who responded that he was waiting to see an opinion from the state Attorney General's office.

Ivimey also stated that he does not believe the new legislation decriminalizes the sale and use of marijuana.

"A person running a distribution site or dispensary is running an illegal shop and breaking the law," he said. "It's a violation of federal law to dispense and distribute marijuana... We do not permit illegal activity to occur under Cohasset zoning regulations."

Some Massachusetts towns, including Wakefield and Reading, are looking into an outright ban on medical marijuana dispensaries through a Town Meeting vote. However, Zemel explained that courts could consider that a violation of an applicant's due process rights and overrule a ban. He said that the town would also be restricting a commercial enterprise, which could lead to lawsuits.

The board also pondered the allowance of home gardens for those who have a hardship and cannot travel to the nearest distribution center. In the first year of the new legislation, the state will certify only 35 of these centers – which will be non-profit medical marijuana treatment centers – with at least one center in each county, but no more than five in any one county. There is the possibility that the center closest to Cohasset might be too far away for someone with a debilitating disease.

These patients can register to grow a 60-day supply of marijuana at home, but can only cultivate and store it in an enclosed, locked facility. So how much is a 60-day supply? The legislation defines it as whatever amount of the substance a qualifying patient would be expected to need over 60 days.

"I see nothing in the legislation that says Cohasset must accept it as permitted use."
Stuart Ivimey, Planning Board

The police officers explained that this amount could vary, but Detective Lennon said that this would probably be around eight ounces.

The group discussed limiting the distribution centers by designating an overlay district, the way many communities restrict adult entertainment. This would allow the Planning Board to set specific conditions that must be met for a particular business to be sited within the district. The board could impose several restrictions, from traffic to parking and signs.

The neighboring town of Scituate has issued a moratorium similar to the one Cohasset's Planning Board would like to recommend. They decided to give the document to Town Counsel to review.

In the meantime, the planners acknowledged that while decisions were not going to be made overnight, it was an important issue to start addressing now since a majority of Cohasseters supported medical marijuana with their votes last fall.

"In effect, two-thirds of voters in Cohasset voted in favor of this," said Planning Board member Charles Samuelson. "We have to make a decision of some kind... how and if we want to proceed and restrict that."

Member David Drinan said that he felt that many voters probably did not know what voting "yes" would entail — and what towns like Cohasset would be in for.

"It's highly likely that people thought intellectually that they were not in opposition to a person with cataracts having medical marijuana," said Drinan. "They didn't think how this would be regulated in my town."

Deputy Chief Quigley said that the Mass. Chiefs Association is reviewing the matter closely. "There are a lot of moving parts," the deputy chief said. "We have to let this shake out a little. Waiting a year is practical; we don't want to rush this. This is state law; I might not like it, other people might not like it, but that's the way people voted."

The Planning Board chairman agreed.

"What Town Counsel recommends, probably the best course of action, is that Cohasset place a moratorium on permitting of these facilities for one year. That gives us adequate time to study the problems and the issues," said Ivimey.

Question 3 highlights: what the new legislation allows

- Who qualifies: Only those with debilitating medical conditions may apply for medical marijuana prescriptions. These include cancer, glaucoma, HIV, AIDS, hepatitis C, ALS, Crohn's disease, Parkinson's disease, and multiple sclerosis.
- Dispensaries: During the first year of the new law, the state will certify up to 35 non-profit medical marijuana treatment centers; at least one in each county; no more than five in any one county.
- Home gardens: Those with hardships may qualify to cultivate marijuana in a private locked and enclosed facility; they will be allowed to grow a 60-day supply at a time, which is identified as how much marijuana the patient is "reasonably expected to need" for medical use.

BUDGET SEASON

School board reviews fiscal 2014 numbers

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The school committee recently took its first look at the Fiscal Year 2014 budget.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro explained, "Each year we start from zero and take a look at what we need for next year. We try to present the same quality of programs we have in place now and add onto that."

The proposed budget is $16,509,152, which is an increase of 4.05 percent, or $643, 090 over fiscal year 2013, which ends June 30.

DeGennaro explained that this is not a level-funded budget, meaning there are increases from last year's budget, including contractual obligations, fixed costs and new positions. It also includes contractual salary increases for teachers, secretaries, ESPs, custodians and administrators. FY '14 will be year two of most contracts. The budget also includes obligations for department chair stipends.

Assumptions that impacted the proposed budget include:

- A 10 percent ($66,180) decrease in grant offsets,
- Four half-time positions at the Middle School due to a projected increase in student enrollment, which is estimated to cost $110,963;
- A new first grade position at the Osgood elementary school;
- A new computer technology/video production teaching position at the high school, which will cost approximately $55,402;
- Two additional Special Education team chair positions to the tune of $120,978;
- A new elementary math curriculum, EnVision Math;
- A Circuit Breaker offset of $386,012, assuming a 70 percent reimbursement to help defray Special Education out-of-district tuition costs;
- And continuing a Primary Learning Center at Osgood and the middle school at the Intermediate Learning Center.

The school board did not take any votes on the proposed budget; the presentation was merely preliminary. The school committee's public hearing on the budget is scheduled for March 20, during which the budget will be voted on.

Coming soon: New school weather station

Cohasset Middle-High School Athletic Director Ron Ford has arranged for a new weather station to be installed at the school. There will be a lighting alarm horn on the roof and a high-definition camera, which will overlook Alumni Field. This will alert folks on all four school campuses and playing fields of any lightning or severe weather in the area.

Several local organizations contributed to the cost of the WeatherBug: the Cohasset Education Foundation, the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Cohasset Soccer Club and the Cohasset Lacrosse Club, who all together donated over $25,000 for the project.

This is something the Athletic Director believes will benefit not only the schools and sports teams, but the community as a whole.

"We needed a lightning detection system, but needed something more that the school and the community could use," Ford said.

The installation has been planned for late January or early February, and should be fully operational by March.

Check back in the Mariner for updates on this issue.

a surcharge on viewers' cable bills.

Pat Martin, CCTV director and the Cable Advisory chair, explained how that works. "The money that supports the cable station, as well as the channel, is not taxpayer dollars; it's a small franchise charge attached to the Verizon or Comcast bill, overseen by a private nonprofit [CCTV] and approved by the board of selectmen."

The TV station exists not for profit, but community service. While the largest budget is payroll, it is used to pay one full-time staff person who functions as a "Jack-of-all-trades." Program Director Donald Roine, who earned around $47,000 last year and will make just under $55,000 this fiscal year, regularly puts in 16-hour workdays, according to selectmen chair and Cable Advisory treasurer Paul Carlson.

"I'm a one-man band," Roine joked.

Roine was hired last year just before the studio opened in the Middle-High school. Last year, securing a location and designing the space was the cable company's biggest initiative. Then it was hiring the program director and bringing community volunteers onboard to create content. After six months of rolling out programs, 143tv then turned its focus to improving the viewing experience with improved audio quality (many have complained about the sound – or lack thereof – during filmed board meetings while trying to watch them at home).

School involvement

The station regularly works with community members to film events and create content. In the past year, the station has filmed programs with the Historical Society, the library's "Author Talks" series, as well as school events like post-prom and the popular "Mr. Skipper" competition.

Future goals include filming meetings live using remote studio equipment, rather than just filming in locations that are currently set up for broadcast, such as the selectmen's office or school committee meeting room. The cable company plans to film the spring Annual Town Meeting, whether it is held in the Middle-High School gymnasium or auditorium (a location has yet to be set for the April 22 meeting).

A new program this year is "CSPN," a sports show run by high school students Matthew MacCormack and Anthony Nahill (look for a feature on the show in a future Mariner). The cable company has been looking for ways to partner with the schools, since the station is housed in the middle-high school library.

The matter was discussed at a recent school committee, during which Martin suggested the $6,500 the company pays rent for the studio space be used as a stipend for an audio visual faculty advisor. The school committee seemed to like that idea, but has not yet voted on the matter; they are currently in the middle of trying to implement a new technology plan, and some of that could involve new staff, such as a technology instructor who could teach computer and video production and possibly get involved in the studio.

When Martin asked the school committee if the middle-high school has a technology or communications club, Superintendent Barbara Cataldo responded, not yet, but "it's always something to consider. I think it's a great idea."

Hello, Cohasset. How is everyone doing and are you staying warm this week? Brrrr, is what I have been saying and yes, I was very disappointed with the lack of snow the other day so now with this really cold weather, I can say I am looking ahead a bit to spring! The part of me that is not wanting Spring to be on our doorsteps is actually going to be talked about in the column this week, the Senior Prom (my youngest Prom? Yup, need I say more?) I think I will stop wishing for winter to end actually....sigh. Let's start the column with the news of a brand new little guy born in 2013!

Writers for school paper are wanted

WHITNEY MALONE

If you're interested, e-mail your ideas to spinnaker143@gmail.com or see seniors and editors-in-chief Bobby Nahill, Andrew Barrett, and Matt Gregory...

Calling all middle school writers! Having been unable to include an In the Middle section in the last issue, The Spinnaker is searching for middle school students to contribute their own work to the high school newspaper. The Spinnaker varies widely in discourse, from news editorials, to poetry writing, and even to a What's Hot and What's Not feature (e.g. What's Hot? One Direction. What's Not? Every other pop teen boy band). If you're interested, e-mail your ideas to spinnaker143@gmail.com or see seniors and editors-in-chief Bobby Nahill, Andrew Barrett, and Matt Gregory by next week!

Previously conflicting with the Harvard Model U.N. trip next Thursday and through the weekend, the last Peer Leaders workshop has been moved to Monday, February 4th. This means that Peer Leaders will present their rehearsed activities to the middle school students on Friday, the 8th.

Earlier this week, a lack of demand seemed to slim the chance of the Semi-Formal's occurrence, but after selling more that 120 tickets at lunch Wednesday, the Winter Wonderland dance will proceed tonight at Town Hall! The senior class is especially excited for the event, which, due to cancellations last year, is both our first and last high school Semi-Formal.

Also at lunch Wednesday (and also a first and last for us seniors), students' cap and gown sizes were taken for Graduation in June. As expected, the event was both exciting and intimidating as our futures beyond high school are becoming more real. Nevertheless, the end of the term Monday will relieve our distress over first semester grades that will be seen by colleges, and everyone can look forward to new second semester classes beginning Tuesday!

Whitney Malone is a senior at CHS; her column runs monthly during the school year.

Recommended for families with children ages 6 and older.

"Full Moon Stroll" All ages are welcome to come take a stroll on the paths of Holly Hill Farm by the light of the full moon on Saturday January 26 at 7 pm. There is much to see and hear, as we head out on a well-lit trail to note the winter stirrings. Dress for the weather and meet at the main barn at 7 pm. Join us for a cup of hot cocoa after the walk.

"Feed the Birds" This is a special opportunity for children ages 7 - 12 to learn about the birds, wild animals and nearby creatures who call the 130+ acres of Holly Hill Farm their home on Tuesday January 29 from 3:45 – 4:45 pm. Come trek with us as we head to some nearby spots to leave some homemade snacks for our friends in nature. Dress for the weather and meet at the main barn at 3:45

"Baby Spinach" for children ages 3 - 5, on Wednesdays continues through February 13. Morning and afternoon sessions are available. Visit the barnyard animals, explore the farm's fields and trails in winter and see what the farm looks like in winter. Each session includes an outdoor adventure and a snack.

This group of hikers will venture far and wide, outdoors for the hour, to see what they can find in the woods, out on the trails, visit the ice pond, see the fields and meadows in all its Winter splendor. Tuesday afternoons from 3:45 – 4:45 through February 12.

"Winter Care for Animals" for children ages 8 - 12. Help tend to the animals and their needs in winter. Food, water and care are still essential for the animals as we learn about what our barnyard animals need and how they adapt to the cold season. Each week we will visit with the animals living here at the farm, collect eggs and make sure all the animals are safely in their shelters. Thursday afternoons from 3:45 – 4:45 through February 14.

SERVICE PROJECT

Scout sends care packages overseas

Troop 28 certifies another Eagle Scout

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset Eagle Scout Andrew Leighton stands next to the 24 care packages he's about to ship to American troops in Afghanistan in July. Leighton became one of Troop 28's latest scouts to reach the rank of Eagle in December. COURTESY PHOTOS

If there's one word that describes Andrew Leighton, it's "multi-tasker."

"I like to get stuff done," he said. His Eagle Scout project required plenty of juggling, working with his fellow scouts and several adults to coordinate a donation project to troops in Afghanistan.

The BC High senior, 17, recently ascended the rank of Eagle Scout in Cohasset's Troop 28, one of several Cohasset Boy Scouts who received that honor in the past year.

The rank of Eagle Scout is the highest a Boy Scout can achieve. To reach Eagle Scout status, the scout must complete 21 merit badges; the area Boy Scout Council must approve an Eagle project and the workbook detailing the scout's project. The Eagle Scout Project Workbook contains all the scout's records, letters of recommendations, plus pictures and details of the project itself.

All requirements must be completed by the time the scout reaches 18. Roughly 5 percent of boys who enter scouting go on to become Eagle Scouts.

Leighton is one of those ambitious few. Having joined the Boy Scouts back in 2003, when he was in third grade, Leighton said that he decided six years ago just what his Eagle Scout project would be— shipping care packages to American troops stationed in Afghanistan.

"After sixth grade, I had a whole plan for my project," he explained. "I knew what I was going to do, and there was no way anyone was going to tell me 'no.'"

While Leighton had a vision, putting thought into action proved to be a challenge; the scout admitted that he had no idea how to get started. He sought counsel from the father of his friend and fellow Scout (who also became an Eagle last year), Jack Thomae. Thomae's father, Marty, directed Leighton to Ann-Marie Goff, who works with the American Legion in town and regularly sends care packages to troops.

"She brought me her list of stuff she puts in her packages. I took that and adjusted it," said Leighton. "She gave me three names; from those three, I came up with 12."

The scout planned to send each individual serviceman and woman two different care packages.

"One package would have food, snacks and all that fun stuff; the other, toiletries and first aid stuff," Leighton explained.

Before compiling items for the packages, the scout had to first seek approval for his project from the local Boy Scout Council. During his presentation, Leighton said that a council member told him, "There's no way I could say 'no' to this project."

Which is good, since Leighton said he wouldn't take "no" for an answer.

After getting the council's stamp of approval, Leighton had to come up with a way to fundraise, since sending out 24 care packages in total, all the way to the Middle East, would quickly add up.

The scout sent out letters to family, friends and fellow troop members asking for donations. But the biggest funding source turned out to be a carwash Leighton organized with his friends. The carwash was held on Father's Day weekend in front of Good Sport on Route 3A. The warm weather ensured that the event was "extremely successful," said Leighton.

Once Leighton had secured enough funds – the project's total cost was $1200 – it was time to put the packages together. For the arduous task of shopping, the scout enlisted his mother, Susan.

"We went to the Dollar Tree in Hingham and compiled things, from cans of tuna fish to journals and pens and pencils, whatever I thought would be good to put in the package," said Leighton.

Most of the items going into the packages were fairly straightforward, expect for one unexpected inclusion: Silly String. Leighton found out that the military uses Silly String (aerosol string) to identify trip wires for IEDs (improvised explosive devices).

"So if I didn't learn leadership [from the project]," said the Eagle Scout, "I learned how to identify an IED."

With the help of his father, Joseph, Leighton shipped the 24 boxes to Kandahar, Afghanistan on July 21— the same day the scout also got his driver's license.

Multi-tasker, indeed.

"As soon as those packages were behind the desk at the post office, I breathed a sigh of relief," he said.

Leighton was sworn in as an Eagle Scout during a December ceremony, along with his friends Jack Thomae and Robert Hillman. Both scouts also helped Leighton pull off his project.

"Jack Thomae and I were out until 12:45 one night hanging up signs for the car wash," said Leighton. "The day before, which was my birthday, Robbie Hillman and I were up all night making the signs — that was a two-day process."

Leighton also credits his parents for the role they played in helping him complete the project, along with "a lot of support from school friends and other people in the scouts."

The Eagle Scout said that one of the biggest challenges he faced while planning and executing his service project was having enough patience to see it through.

"Patience was the big thing. I've never been a very patient person; I like things to be done immediately and done my way," Leighton explained.

Taking leadership of the project was another necessary challenge.

"Having to lead other people in doing a task that was, in a non-selfish way, all about me, because it was my project and had to be done in a specific way, was difficult," the scout said. "I had to make sure it was all done smoothly."

These are good skills for anyone looking toward their future educational and career goals to cultivate, but especially for someone who plans to become a teacher. Leighton applied early decision to Emmanuel College in Boston, where he will study religious education. He hopes to become a high school teacher.

The Mariner will continue catching up with Troop 28's Eagle Scouts this year. Stay tuned!

Andrew Leighton and his dad, Joseph, get ready to ship care packages to American troops.

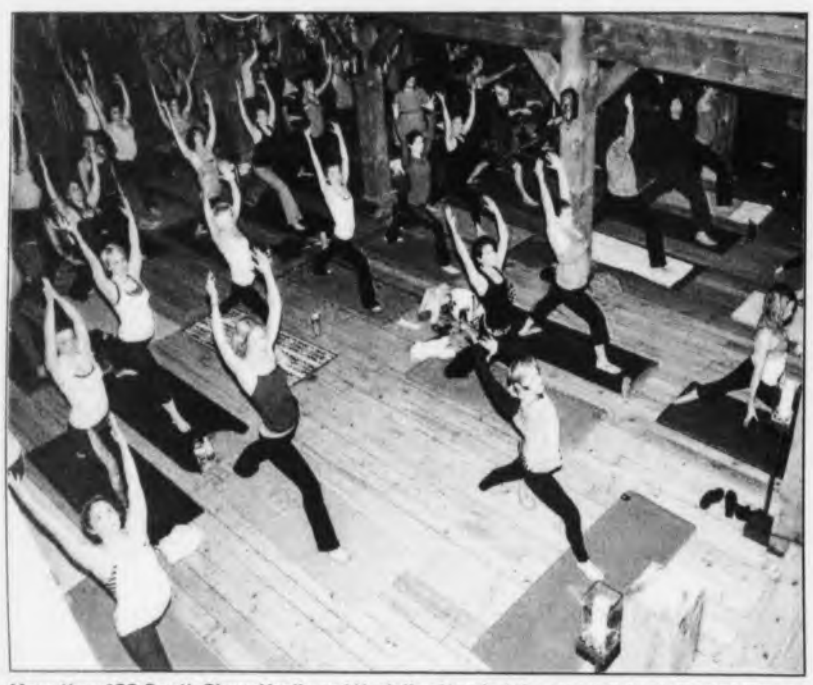
'Breath In' event a success

Lululemon of Hingham hosted the "Breath In" event at the Red Lion in Cohasset on Jan. 13. It was a complimentary event attended by more than 120 South Shore Yogi's and Yogini's.



The event started with the introduction of Sara Gardner from Yoga Reaches Out, a non-profit organization whose mission is to bring the yoga community together to raise funds for organizations that impact the health, education and well being of children.

It was then followed by an inspirational talk on Dharma (Our purpose in life) given by Coby Kowzloski, life coach, yoga teacher, surfer and dancer to name a few of her many talents. A 70-minute yoga class taught by Kellie Lynch from Balance Studio in Cohasset followed the talk

In addition to Kellie, 10 of her experienced instructors were on hand to help with adjustments and modifications to help the students get the most out of the class experience. Lulu then hosted a champagne and hors d'oeuvres reception and presented both Kellie and Coby beautifully framed pictures of the Tree of Yoga. Donations were accepted by Yoga Reaches Out from anyone wishing to help.

'Avenue Q' makes local debut at CDC

Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) will present the Tony Award-winning musical, "Avenue Q," from March 8 through March 23 at the historic Town Hall Theater. Marking a first time appearance on the South Shore, "Avenue Q" features puppetry training by Kevin Noonchester of Avenue Q Puppet Camp in Los Angeles. Noonchester, the brainchild behind the training fundamentals of this unique program is a veteran of "Avenue Q" and member of "Puppet Up," puppet improv comedy troupe behind Henson Alternative's critically acclaimed "Stuffed and Unstrung." Kevin took the stage as Princeton/Rod & Nicky/Trekkie in the Las Vegas production of "Avenue Q" starring original Broadway cast members Rick Lyon and John Tartaglia. Kevin also understudied every male role. Other puppetry credits include Marlin in Finding Nemo: the Musical, the Alpaca puppeteer in Matthew Modine Saves the Alpacas at the Geffen Playhouse starring Matthew Modine, among other puppetry commercials for Jitterbug cell phones and Sony PSP.

"Avenue Q's" outstanding cast of CDC veterans and newcomers alike hails from across the Boston area, all drawn to this show not often produced by community theater venues. Winner of the 2004 Tony "Triple Crown" for Best Musical, Best Book and Best Original Score, "Avenue Q" is a laugh-out-loud musical focusing on a group of unique 20-somethings making their way in the big city, seeking their purpose in life, who find themselves living on Avenue Q, a fictional outer borough of New York City. "Avenue Q" tells the timeless story of a recent college grad named Princeton who moves into a shabby New York apartment all the way out on Avenue Q. There, he meets Kate (the girl next door), Rod (the Republican), Trekkie (the Internet sexpert), Lucy (not the girl next door), and other colorful types who help Princeton finally discover his purpose in life. Adults love "Avenue Q," but may seem a little, er... "fuzzy" on whether it's appropriate for kids. "Avenue Q" is great for teenagers because it's about real life. It may not be appropriate for young children because "Avenue Q" addresses issues like sex, drinking, and surfing the web. It's hard to say what exact age is right to see "Avenue Q" - parents should use their discretion based on the maturity level of their children. Our thought is 15 years and up. But we promise you this - if you DO bring your teenagers to "Avenue Q," they'll think you're really cool.

Some special guests stopped by Cohasset Dramatic Club's rehearsal of "Avenue Q" this week. We hear they're staying around for a while. If you'd like to find out more about what's going on over at the Town Hall Theater this March, check it out at:cohassetdramaticclub.org/currentshow.html

Performances are March 8 - 23, and tickets are available now at: brownpapertickets.com/event/304451

Performances are Fridays and Saturdays, March 8 to 23 and Thursday, March 21 at 7:30 p.m. as well as Sundays, March 10 and 17, at 2 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Avenue. Tickets are $20 general admission and can be purchased online at www.brownpapertickets.com /event/304451, at Paperscapes, Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books CJC Hwy, Cohasset or via reservation at 617-922-0280, also the number for group sales. COHASSET REC

SAT prep course offered at low cost

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

"With our typical class of 8-10 students, this is an incredible deal; it is private tutoring at a Recreation Department price."
Ted Carroll, Director of Cohasset Recreation.

Since 2009 Bob Beatty, a certified Princeton Review teacher, has been helping South Shore students prepare for the math portion of the SAT Math test. Beatty offers a 10-hour, 7-session Math Review Course that is based on the SAT content. The course covers content with a focus on learning the best strategy for test taking based upon the format and makeup of the test. Beatty has also taught this class in Scituate and Hanover.

"With our typical class of 8-10 students, this is an incredible deal; it is private tutoring at a Recreation Department price," says Ted Carroll, Director of Cohasset Recreation. "Traditionally, a class like this might cost anywhere from $500-700 per session. We feel great about being able to offer it at such a low cost."

The course will offer techniques on how to score higher: including techniques like not doing all the problems, and when to guess or skip a problem, and learning how many problems can be left blank while still getting a score of 600.

According to Beatty, any student can buy the SAT Mathbook at a major bookstore or go on-line at Princeton Review to get some help. But he stresses that it's the strategy he teaches that sets this course apart from just studying the material.

"I don't teach out of a book like a lot of people do," says Beatty, who currently teaches High School Math at Braintree's Archbishop Williams High School. "There are tricks and strategy to taking the test and that's what I teach the kids. We also have a lot of fun, I know that attention spans are short so I try to break up the math with a little bit of laughter thrown in."

Beatty says the Cohasset students he has taught over the past 5 years have all been highly motivated to succeed and that has made it a pleasure to teach the class. As part of the preparation the students are given homework and questions and concerns are reviewed at the following class.

Beatty's name may be familiar to some, a Scituate resident, he also taught High School Math at Scituate High School and served as Coach of the Girl's Tennis Team; the Ski Team; Freshman Basketball and the Golf Team.

Topics of all the Algebra, Algebra II and Geometry will be covered, as well as new sections of the test which include functions, sets and sequences. All material will be supplied. Class takes place at the Recreation Center. Register on-line at cohassetrec.ocom

- Dates: Wednesdays 2/6, 2/13, 2/27, 3/6, 3/13, 3/20, 3/27. (No Class 2/20)
- Times: 6:30 - 8 p.m.
- Fee: $150 includes all materials

OUR VIEW

Regional savings?

The SSRECC (South Shore Regional Emergency Communications Center), which is housed in Hingham but provides centralized dispatch services for Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Norwell is back in the news.

Hingham Selectman Bruce Rabuffo has called a full rundown of costs and related issues in light of the fact that the dispatch services budget in Hingham was expected to go down significantly once the regional dispatch center was up and running.

But during a recent budget discussion in Hingham, the selectmen there learned that the cost for Hingham dispatch services with the new center has gone up.

"We owe the public an explanation of what was said initially, here's the difference, and why," Rabuffo said. "I think we can learn a lesson from all this."

Hingham has budgeted to spend nearly $74,000 more for dispatch services next fiscal year than the town did in fiscal 2011, the last full budget year before the center came online.

Hingham also plans to collect feedback from Hingham police officers and firefighter/paramedics about the new system.

We hope that Cohasset follows suit. Regionalization can be a good thing. Public safety always comes first and if the new center improves public safety over what the towns experienced before with their individual dispatch centers then that is a good thing.

However, expected savings were also part of the deal and a big reason why Cohasset signed on under former Town Manager Bill Griffin.

In our view, there is no reason why the SSRECC should not result in substantial savings for the four communities. If it is not, then it's important the service be examined to find out why and what the issues may be. If savings are based on other towns joining the facility, which is equipped to handle twice the current call volume, – then what if that does not occur?

APPLICATIONS DUE FEB. 15

CWDF seeks applicants for Service Dog Grant

The 2013 grant recipient will be selected before the end of February and announced at the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation's annual fundraiser, which will take place Saturday, March 9, at Atlantica.

Cohasset Working Dog Foundation announced that it is now accepting applications for its first Cohasset Service Dog Grant. The grant will help pay for the purchase and training of a personal service dog for a Cohasset resident. A trained service dog can enable a child or adult with visual or hearing impairments, seizure disorders (epilepsy, cardiac seizures), mobility impairments or Autism Spectrum Disorder among others to enjoy a more independent, safe and enjoyable life.

The purchase, raising and training of a service dog often costs upward of $20,000, putting a personal service dog out of reach for many. The mission of the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation is to assist Cohasset residents in covering a significant portion of the financial commitment, matching the recipient with the most appropriate provider/training agency, assisting in additional fundraising activities and providing support as needed to ensure a successful partnership.

Grant applicants should have the ability to provide daily care for a service dog or live with an adult who will be responsible for its care. Food, grooming and regular veterinary care will also be the responsibility of the recipient or his/her family.

Applications will be accepted through Feb. 15. The 2013 grant recipient will be selected before the end of February and announced at the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation's annual fundraiser, which will take place Saturday, March 9, at Atlantica.

The Cohasset Working Dog Foundation was founded in 2011 to support the service of working dogs in the community, including Cohasset Police K-9, Erik, and personal service dogs for community residents.

Application requests can be made by providing name and mailing address via email to Info@cohassetworkingdog.org or by mail to The Cohasset Working Dog Foundation, P.O. Box 45, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, call Trish Morse at 781-383-1622 or email info@cohassetworkingdog.org.

COMMENTARY

One million moms have a dream

ELISA CASTIGLIONI

Since 12.14.2012, I cannot stop thinking of the Newtown families and all the families that had suffered the violent loss of a child. I pray for them everyday. But this is no longer enough.

Since 12.14.2012, my life has changed. I watch my daughter smiling and my heart aches. I think about all the parents deprived of the joy of watching their children smiling. And the children's smile is what gives sense to the life of a parent.

There are no words to express how grateful I am to the principal, teachers, office staff, and volunteers of the Osgood School, my child's school. I am grateful for the smile they give to my daughter every single day. No matter what. For the care I read in their eyes. For the warmth I hear in their voice when they greet her. (By the way, thank you also to the lady that everyday stands at the entrance of the Deer Hill School and helps the children to cross the road or reminds the cars to slow down.)

Since 12.14.2012, I cannot stop thinking of the Newtown families and all the families that had suffered the violent loss of a child. I pray for them everyday. But this is no longer enough. Words are no longer useful. It is time that we, moms and dads, demand action.

We demand that assault weapons designed to kill as many people (and at this point children) as possible will be banned from our communities.

How can our police officers defend us against nutty guys armed with military weapons?

There are no doors, no windows, no security system, no ID control procedure that will ever stop those evil (yes, evil) individuals. Unless we disarm them.

How can our teachers teach good values to our children when they need to constantly look out of the window to see if any suspicious lunatics is after them?

They are not soldiers. They are caregivers. They are dreamers. They are educators. They are the ones who can help us build a happier and safer society. One of them is teaching math to the next President of the United States, or lively letters to a future Supreme Court Judge, or spelling to a future amazing mom.

How can we accept that our children need to be "trained" to face a similar horror? Apparently the students of Cohasset Middle High School will be trained not to stay put in case of a disconnected, crazy person shows up at school to shoot at them. They will be told that they have to throw something in the air to distract the perpetrator. They will be told to run. They will be told that such tragedy can happen again. Again?

And how about our sweet and silly 6-year-olds? They still believe that unicorns and fairies exist. What are we going to tell them? Are we going to destroy their world, their unique vision of life and let them be slave of fear? If we do so, there is no hope for this society. Happy children become happy adults. The kind of people that you want around. The kind of people that would never gun down a child.

I cannot stop thinking of the Newtown families and I don't want to.

On Jan. 26 at 11:30, One Million Moms for Gun Control is marching to demand to:

a. Ban assault weapons and ammunition magazines of more 10 rounds;

b. Require background check for all gun purchasers;

c. Report the sale of large quantities of ammunition to the ATF;

d. Limit the scope of concealed weapons to state level.

I will be there, even if it is on Saturday. (I know. There are so many things to do on Saturday and the children have soccer. I get it. But you know what? Just for one time daddy can drive the kids to the soccer practice or they can come along to the march and learn to stand up for their rights. Because the march is all about the children's right. They have the right to be safe at school, movie theatre, mall, playground, library.)

On Dec. 14, I drove my daughter to school. Then I stopped at the Sandy Beach to take a walk. It was a great day. Blue sky, blue ocean. It was 9.30 a.m. I am a sea-glass enthusiast. I found six amazing pieces of sea glass. Blue, white, light green. All smooth and shiny. I felt so happy. The sun caressed my face and I thought I was so blessed to live in such a beautiful town and to have such a happy family.

I treasure those six pieces of sea glass as family memories. They are on my desk and I watch them everyday. They are a reminder of how fragile happiness can be.

The march will be on Saturday, Jan. 26, at 11:30 am at the State House. (24 Beacon St., Boston)

Elisa Castiglioni lives at 520 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset.

Rally for gun control on Jan. 26

A rally for gun control will take place at the State House, 24 Beacon St., Boston, at 11:30 a.m., on Saturday, Jan. 26. Join mothers, and concerned citizens across New England, as people rally locally to demand common sense solutions to gun violence in America. Thousands of mothers will rally simultaneously on the Beltway in Washington, D.C.

Falkland Islands: Whose claim is legitimate?

MARY KENNEDY

In Stanley, a tidy English village of backyard gardens, sheep grazing on the distant hillsides, we would head straight for the cozy Upland Goose Hotel where we munched on fish and chips.

January 12, 2013: Headline in the British newspaper The Telegraph: "Defence Chiefs prepare new plans to defend Falkland Islands."

Treeless, rocky, windswept, barren; 8,000 miles from Britain; home to some 3,000 mostly British citizens (many of them descendants of English sheep herders who arrived during the 1800s); also home to 500,000 sheep and a plethora of penguins. Naturalist Charles Darwin spent time here in 1834 before sailing off to the Galapagos. The penguins pleased him, but about the landscape he wrote "desolate and wretched." Who would fight a war over this remote archipelago of 778 islands, which, admittedly, does attract about 80,000 cruise ship visitors yearly en route to the Antarctic? Answer: Argentina, second largest country in South America, and Britain, upon whose empire at one time the sun never set.

Whose claim is legitimate? Answer: debatable, having to do with centuries of European exploration and claiming of lands by divine right of (fill in the blank). The first colony, founded by the French, soon passed to Spain, was then abandoned and re-settled by Argentina in 1820, and shortly thereafter, abandoned again. In 1833 Britain claimed the territory, built the capital city, Port Stanley, and established the colonial government that still exists today.

Fast forward to 1982 when Argentine dictator General Leopoldo Galtieri decided that Great Britain had neither the strength nor will to defend Las Malvinas, and that it was high time to reclaim Argentinian property (and thereby also bolster his own sagging popularity in the polls). Big mistake.

April, 1982: Led by an Argentine army captain, 1,700 men arrived in the tiny village of Darwin. Reports are that residents were startled but cordial. In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher addressed Parliament: "The people of the Falkland Islands are few in number, but they have the right to live in peace...and to determine their own allegiance."

July, 1982: British bombers struck, killing 11 Argentine soldiers. The war lasted 74 days and cost the lives of 649 Argentines, 255 Brits, and 3 Falkland Islanders. Galtieri resigned one year later, and the islands continued on as a British crown colony. Since then, billboards all over Argentine highways continue to proclaim "Las Malvinas belong to us!" As to what the Falkland Islanders think: In a recent poll, 90 percent of the residents identified themselves as either Falkland Islanders or British.

January 2013. The war of words is heating up again: Argentine President Kristina Kirchner, in an emotional open letter, has demanded the return of the islands to Argentina. Prime Minister David Cameron vows that Britain will "do everything to protect the interests of the islanders."

Ironically, this time it's Argentina's economic problems that make another invasion unlikely. Might Kirchner be pushing this issue of national pride to offset her own sinking popularity?

On March 10 Falkland Islanders will celebrate their annual pub holiday, known as Happy Maggie Day, to honor the prime minister who "put them first." The next day, they will vote their decision "to retain their current political status as an overseas territory of the United Kingdom." The vote is expected to be a resounding 100 percent "Yes."

During the 1990s, working as a Tour Director, I visited the Falkland Islands on voyages from Buenos Aires to Santiago, Chile. In Stanley, a tidy English village of backyard gardens, sheep grazing on the distant hillsides, we would head straight for the cozy Upland Goose Hotel where we munched on fish and chips. On sale in sidewalk shops we found faded yellow land mine warning signs. We asked several islanders about the "Argentinian invasion." Most shook their heads, still puzzled. One bookstore manager remembered, "The Captain marched ashore announcing in Spanish that he'd come to liberate his fellow Argentinians. None of us understood what he was saying."

And yet another perspective: Argentinian novelist and poet Jorge Luis Borges once said the Argentina-Britain dispute was "like two bald men squabbling over a comb."

FOR THE RECORD

A look inside the Inner Circle

GREGORY MATHIS

To keep pace with the ever changing, fast-paced World Wide Web, the company rolled News Cube/Web Cube into its Inner Circle program, which began in earnest the first quarter of 2011.

A lot of the new content and concepts you've seen in the newspaper and online over the past couple of years began with company-wide initiatives labeled News Cube and Web Cube.

News Cube was a strategy to get our newsrooms thinking beyond the typical stories we were producing each week as well as making reader involvement a part of the content plan instead of a recommendation.

What came out of the news side of the cube was public service journalism, community partner journalism and reader callouts (seeking photos on various topics for both print and the web). Through alternative format storytelling, public service journalism and community partner journalism, it forced us to think differently about what was going on in the community and gave us templates designed to set that content apart from the regular newspaper items. Reader callouts have produced photographs and stories from readers that have contributed to our Your News page in print and myriad photo galleries online.

Web Cube had us focused on producing content to keep our websites looking updated throughout the course of the day and week, which was a transition for our newsrooms focused on producing weekly newspapers. Reader involvement online directed us to blogs and social media as we found our way on the web.

As News Cube and Web Cube strategies started to take hold in the newsroom, we became more comfortable with the requirements and more confident in the results we could achieve from the initiatives.

To keep pace with the ever changing, fast-paced World Wide Web, the company rolled News Cube/Web Cube into its Inner Circle program, which began in earnest the first quarter of 2011. Inner Circle is based on those earlier programs, but added a level of accountability that was missing from the earlier programs.

Accountability is important when dealing with so many newsrooms, publications and websites spread out throughout the country. In Massachusetts alone, GateHouse Media has six daily newspapers, 108 weeklies, eight regional websites and more than 160 hyperlocal community websites.

Getting everyone on the same page is nearly impossible, but the Inner Circle initiative has gone a long way in coming up with strategies and suggestions on how to improve our products.

In 2012, we spent time and resources developing our presence on Facebook and tapping into that social media audience. We ended the year on a good note after struggling through the first part of the year trying to find our Facebook voice. The other big strategy was shooting and posting more local video. While we're still trying to find our video niche – we don't have the equipment to rival the television folks and our content doesn't necessarily produce those quirky, funny cat videos that are popular on YouTube – we have made video a component to our online storytelling.

Of course we have new strategies and initiatives for 2013 that I'll be covering in upcoming columns. We're tackling another social media phenomenon – Twitter – this year, with our editorial staff tweeting and contributing to what has proven to be a great news resource beyond the social media aspect. You'll also learn about what we hope to accomplish with our Seen on Scene strategy and how Coming in Print will replace Print Only.

These initiatives are driven by the fact we want to stay as relevant as possible and continue to connect with our communities in different ways. As always, your suggestions and feedback are welcome.

Trees are focus for local artist

World's End, other locations provide inspiration

Sandra Allen of Hingham stands in front of her piece, Aegis, which is a pine tree that is found in front of Hingham High School. It is a 44-by-44inch piece that will be showing at Carroll and Sons Gallery in the South End in March. For more about the exhibit, visit: www.carrollandsons.net STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Nexus was inspired by trees in World's End and is from her early work on trees.

We're all familiar with the adage "You can't see the forest for the trees." But for Hingham artist Sandra Allen, it's crucial not to miss the tree for the forest. Her drawings impel the viewer to pay attention to individual trees, what each tree has to say — and then read enough into each one to create our own forest.

She accomplishes this feat by removing the forest around her trees. There is a bare background. We did not know how a tree lives, under what conditions of temperature, crowding, or water. Allen renders only the form of the tree, sometimes the trunk and branches, sometimes just the trunk, and sometimes a close-up on a section of trunk. These drawings are bare even of leaves. Because there's no background, there is infinite freedom to interpret.

She creates these powerful images with a graphite pencil, in exquisite detail. Every burl, every groove of corky bark, every bump, and every scar from injury stands out, makes you believe you're touching it. In this detailed bark and in the stark forms of the trees, there is stoicism, grandeur, pain, loneliness, love, endurance, and much more. "The dichotomy of making a thing of beauty but having an element of unattractiveness really interests me," Allen said. "It makes you think about it."

Allen has been drawing trees since 1998, but she didn't start out drawing them this way. She walked through the woods, mostly World's End, and, " ... started drawing loosely, expressively, the way I was trained to do. That was the way that was fashionable." Allen has a master's of fine arts from Yale.

She discovered, however, that the leaves and background took away from what had drawn her to an individual tree. "The leaves were just filler," she said. "They made the drawings into landscapes." When she eliminated the leaves and background to focus on the tree itself, she realized she had discovered what she really wanted to express. The first drawing in this vein she labeled "Quiescence", and it remains one of her favorites. In the second, "Solidarity", she decided to do the same thing, but on a much larger scale. It's ten feet tall. Another one of her drawings, "Warrior", stands proudly in the DeCordova Museum at 37 feet. Both the trees in "Quiescence" and "Solidarity" are Hingham trees.

The drawings in her new show at Carroll and Sons Gallery, starting on March 1st, further articulates the importance of detail. In this case, she has created nine 44-by-44 inch studies of bark from tree trunk sections. "I wanted to focus in," Allen said, "see what I can do when I limit it. I want to show a change from my last show, where I did more full-scale, brachiated trees."

In Allen's meticulous rendering, the details of these new drawings do more than impress for their technical skill, they evoke a multitude of other worlds, of stories that want to be told, of feelings that need to be experienced and savored. In one, "Aegis", a study in the bark of a pine tree outside Hingham High School, you can imagine a hundred wee folk winking at you, plotting their next prank. Another drawing shows a whorl in a beech trunk where, perhaps, a branch got cut off and the bark healed itself over time. The focus on that whorl, the articulation of its upward endpoint, suggests the tree would contemplate uprooting itself and flying away. This drawing illuminates the core of the tension one feels about Allen's trees — the viewer knows that tree exists somewhere, fixed in place, even while the drawing of it permits the imagination to roam.

In the upcoming show Allen has also expanded her repertoire of the kinds of trees she's drawn, although she doesn't have any sort of quota for the kinds or varieties of trees she wants to draw. When she is out walking, she looks for what captures her eye. "Once I find a tree where there's something there, I go back to it and photograph it in different light," she said. Sometimes she takes hundreds of photos. When she gets back into her studio, she responds to what she sees in the photos.

Although Allen has made drawings of many Hingham trees, she's found some of her most interesting subjects in the city. "They sit alone on the sidewalk, so they get lots of light. They're well cared for. They grow really well."

Friends now also tip her off to interesting trees. "A friend told me about a tree in Cambridge, a hawthorn, with thorns this big," she said, splaying her whole hand. "That would be really interesting. But when I got there, all the way to Cambridge, the light was bad. I'll have to go back."

She has ambitions to travel even further for new and different trees that might capture her attention. "We'd love to go to Russia, or Colorado to see the aspens, or a Joshua tree. I'd really like to draw a Joshua tree."

Sandra Allen's upcoming show starts March 1st, 2013, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. All are welcome. The address for Carroll and Sons is 450 Harrison Ave., in Boston's South End. You can fine more information at their website: www.carrollandsons.net

Volume 39 - Report No. 3 January 18, 2012

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the 2012 official list from the state treasurer's office of the "per diem" travel, meals and lodging reimbursements collected by the Legislature's 40 state senators from January 1, 2012 to December 31, 2012. The list reveals that senators collected a total of $58,304.

Under state law, per diems are paid by the state to senators "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These reimbursements are given to senators above and beyond their regular salaries.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a senator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling these per diems to the current amounts. The payments range from $10 per day for senators who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Senators who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often collect the highest total of annual per diems.

Supporters of the per diems say the system is fair and note the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. They note many legislators spend a lot of money on traveling to Boston and some spend the night in Boston following late sessions.

Some opponents argue most private sector and state workers are not paid additional money for commuting. Others say the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous when thousands of workers have lost their jobs and homes, the state is in the midst of a recession, and funding for important programs has been cut.

The 2012 statistics indicate that 16 of the state's 40 senators have received reimbursements ranging from $1,040 to $9,630, while 24 senators have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that senators must meet in order to collect the per diems.

The senator who received the most per diem money in 2012 is Sen. Benjamin Downing (D-Pittsfield) with $9,630. Rounding out the top six and receiving more than $4,000 each were Sens. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst), $7,620; Michael Rodrigues (D-Westport), $6,030; Bruce Tarr (R-Gloucester), $4,472; James Welch (D-Springfield), $4,422; and Daniel Wolf (D-Harwich), $4,380.

SENATORS' 2012 PER DIEMS

The dollar figure next to the senator's name represents the total amount of per diem money the state paid him or her for 2012. The number in parentheses represents the number of days the senator certified he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

$1.9 BILLION TAX HIKE - The big news coming out of Beacon Hill last week was Gov. Deval Patrick's tax package proposal that would raise the income tax from 5.25 percent to 6.25 percent to support education initiatives. Other provisions include reducing the sales tax from 6.25 percent to 4.5 percent and dedicating all of that revenue to a public works fund that will support transportation projects; doubling the personal exemptions; and eliminating a number of itemized deductions.

The governor defended the package as necessary to ensure there is a 21st century education and transportation network for this generation and the ones that follow.

Opponents said this is one of the biggest proposed tax hikes in the state's history and will hurt taxpayers who are already struggling during this recession and time of high unemployment.

PATRICK FILES GUN LEGISLATION - Gov. Patrick also made headlines when he filed legislation making several changes to the state's gun laws. Provisions require courts to transmit all relevant mental health records for inclusion in a national registry that all states access before issuing gun licenses; close an existing loophole in order to require gun purchasers to undergo background checks at gun shows; limit the number of weapon sales by licensed dealers to not more than one per licensed individual a month; create tiered punishments for possessing different weapons on school property. The legislation also gives police the authority to arrest without a warrant in order to quickly defuse a dangerous situation on school property.

Patrick also proposed a 3 percent increase in funding for the Department of Mental Health including doubling the budget for crisis intervention training for law enforcement and other community-based first responders. The governor noted that trained responders can better recognize, de-escalate and intervene with individuals who are in emotional distress or suffering from a mental illness and divert them to treatment they need.

REP. APPLIES FOR NEW JOB ON ELECTION DAY - Rep. David Sullivan (D-Fall River), unopposed for re-election last November, applied for the job as executive director of the Fall River Housing Authority on Election Day as unwitting voters were voting to send him back to Beacon Hill. According to Martha Gallagher, executive office coordinator at the housing authority, Sullivan's application was received at 12:54 p.m. on November 6. Sullivan, currently earning $60,032 as a legislator, was appointed to the authority last week. He will resign soon to begin the housing authority job, which pays $115,000, nearly double his legislative salary.

Local musician releases progressive rock album

World-renowned bassist Colin Edwin (Porcupine Tree, Metallic Taste of Blood, Ex-Wise Heads) and guitarist, composer and Cohasset resident Jon Durant have revealed the cover art and track list for their upcoming progressive instrumental collaboration "Burnt Belief." Timed to coincide with the end of the Mayan calendar (what was supposed to be the "end of the world"), the duo released "Burnt Belief" on Dec. 21, 2012 through Alchemy Records. It will be available on iTunes, CDBaby, Burning Shed and Amazon.

"Burnt Belief" marks the second time that the two musicians have worked together since Edwin contributed bass to Durant's 2011 release "Dance of the Shadow Planets." It was recorded at three studios, two in the U.S. and one in the U.K., with Edwin and Durant exchanging digital files over the Internet. Additional musicians were later brought in, with Jerry Leake ("Cubist," Natraj, Club d'Elf) on percussion and Geoff Leigh (Ex-Wise Heads, Henry Cow, Hatfield and the North) on flute.

"Burnt Belief" marks the second time that the two musicians have worked together since Edwin contributed bass to Durant's 2011 release "Dance of the Shadow Planets."

Perhaps best described as a post-rock concept album, "Burnt Belief" draws from ethnic, ambient and electronic elements to create a cohesive and emotional album, inspired by a fundamental, universal question. The album considers the polarization between religion and science, while highlighting the dissonance between belief and reality. "Burnt Belief" deals with issues of intellect, fundamentalism and fanaticism, set to an ambient and progressive aural landscape.

Blending electronic rhythms and acoustic elements, the musicians wove soundscapes from unique sources — synth, 12-string and cloud guitar textures, melodic fretless bass, prepared piano and Middle Eastern hand percussion — along with searing lead guitars, to tell a series of instrumental stories. "Burnt Belief" takes the listener on an immersive journey, with repeated listens revealing new layers and tones to the depth of the subject.

While the album is intended to be a complete experience, the centerpiece comes with the dual attack of "Balthazar's Key" and "Uncoiled," just over 20 minutes of compelling sounds that, according to Durant, "kick enough booty to make anyone sit up and take notice." The title of the album was inspired by Edwin's reading of social psychologist Leon Festinger's "When Prophecy Fails," an account of a doomsday UFO cult in the 1950s. According to Edwin, "It got me thinking, what are all beliefs really about and where do they come from?" — a question that Durant had also been interested in for some time.

Follow "Burnt Belief" on Facebook at: www.facebook.com/BurntBelief and Twitter @BurntBelief3 for details.

Local grants awarded for Cohasset

Representative Garret Bradley and Sarah Wood Torrey, chair of the Cohasset Cultural Council, have announced the award of 12 grants totaling $4,183 for cultural programs in Cohasset.

Grant recipients include the South Shore Art Center, the Cohasset Recreation Department, and the Cohasset PSO. A complete list of recipients and grant amounts can be found below.

The Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

Decisions about which activities to support are made at the community level by a board of municipally appointed volunteers. The members of the Cohasset Cultural Council are: Douglas Eymer, Selene Eymer, Susan Keene, Elizabeth Morse, Juliana Chittick Tiryaki and Sarah Wood Torrey, Chair.

"It's the local volunteers who really make this system work," said Rep. Bradley. "They make limited resources go as far as possible, and they make the tough decisions about which projects should be supported. Thanks to them, the arts, sciences and humanities are part of people's everyday lives in every community across the state."

Statewide, more than $2.34 million will be distributed by local cultural councils in 2013. Grants will support an enormous range of grass-roots activities: concerts, exhibitions, radio and video productions, field trips for schoolchildren, after-school youth programs, writing workshops, historical preservation efforts, lectures, First Night celebrations, nature and science education programs for families and town festivals. Nearly half of LCC funds support educational activities for young people.

The Cohasset Cultural Council will seek applications again in the fall. Information and forms are available online at mass-culture.org/cohasset. Applications are due in October 2013.

GYMNASTICS

Injuries hamper squad

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

With two of its gymnasts sidelined by injuries, the Norwell/Cohasset gymnastics team had only eight girls in a recent meet against Hanover. But despite the setback, the girls surpassed their goal that night of hitting 116 points. Although they lost to the Indians, the girls vaulted past their goal in the 129.8-120.80 loss.

"The girls really had a good meet even though we lost," Co-Head Coach Ruthann Ardizzoni said.

On the bars, Emma Basso led the way with an 8.0, followed by captain Kelsey McCunney (7.4) and teammate Christina Tedeschi (7.1). Captain Emily Kuhn recorded a personal best on bars with a 6.20.

The vaults saw two Norwell/Cohasset gymnasts hit at least an 8.0 and another come just inches away from hitting that mark.

Basso scored and 8.30, McCunney registered an 8.0, and Carly Oremus earned a 7.90. Norwell/Cohasset trailed by just three points at the halftime break.

The girls were slightly unbalanced on the balance beam. But despite a couple falls, the duo of Basso (7.3) and McCunney (7.0) still turned in solid performances.

The final event of the night, the floor exercise, turned in some impressive numbers for Norwell/Cohasset, led by Basso (8.30), McCunney (8.0), and Tedeschi (7.70).

Norwell/Cohasset took a huge blow when it learned that freshman Olivia Rober is out for the season with a back injury. Elizabeth Coletta is also injured, but on the mend. The coaching staff hopes to have Coletta back by season's end.

"I was very proud of the girls' performance against Hanover," Ardizzoni said. "They surpassed the 116 by 4.8 points, and our next goal will be a 121 for Thursday."

Thursday's meet takes place at 8:30 p.m. at MGC in Pembroke.

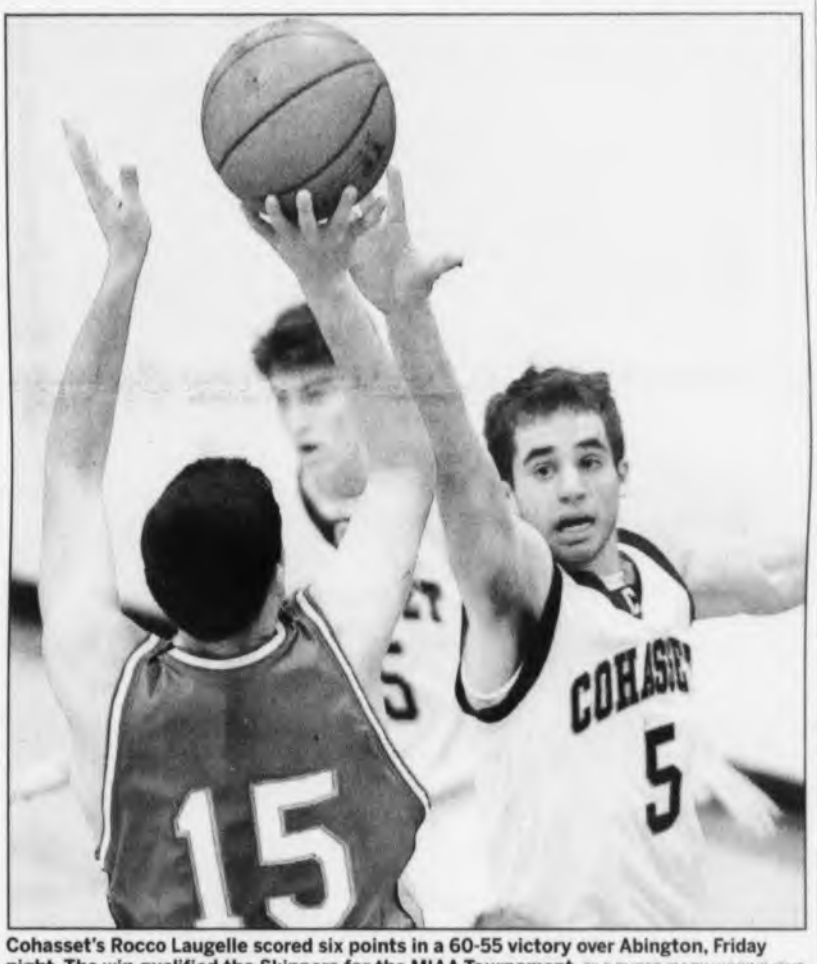
Hoopsters earn way back to MIAA Tournament

By Christian Cunnie
For the Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset Boys Basketball team qualified for the MIAA State tournament on Friday night with a pulsating 60-55 win over the Green Wave of Abington at Abington High School.

Recording its tenth win of the year (10-2, 7-2 SSL) the Skippers defeated the Green Wave for the second time this season.



Previously, Cohassset had beaten Abington 62-53 Dec. 16 at home.

Cohasset now has won its last four consecutive games against the perennial SSL powerhouse and five of the last six after 13 plus years and 27 straight games being on the losing end of the score.

The game was highlighted by a season and career high scoring spree by junior 6-foot guard Rocco Laugelle, who had 21 points shooting 50 percent from the floor while senior co-captains Shane Haggerty and Christian Davis needed 14 and 11 respectively.

Once again, Cohasset sports fans have hit the jackpot in the search for a new coach.

The Skippers have been blessed with outstanding and longtime coaches in basically every sport they offer, and it looks like a not-so-new face in town is ready to step in and continue the tradition.

Cohasset resident Kully Reardon will be taking over the head coaching duties for the girls lacrosse program this spring, and for those who know the sport, it is a definite coup for Cohasset athletes.

YOUTH LACROSSE

Registration open

2013 Cohasset Spring Youth Lacrosse registration is now open

Registration is now open for Cohasset girls and boys in grades 1 through 8 for the spring lacrosse season (www.cohassetlacrosse.com.) This is the 18th year of lacrosse in Cohasset, sponsored by Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, which is the primary organizing body for spring lacrosse instruction, league play and for supporting the woman's and men's Cohasset Varsity Lacrosse program through fund raising and organizing events. The program is run by volunteers and coaches who strive to promote a love for the game with a focus on providing a positive, encouraging experience for every player.

U9 Clinics:

First and second graders participate in the U9 intro-to-lacrosse clinics. Sessions are held weekly on Saturday afternoons on the middle school front field.

The U9 players are coached by parent-coaches and high school volunteers with a focus on fun and encouragement. Basic skills are introduced through fun drills and we include a 2-3 scrimmages with neighboring towns as the season progresses.

Third grade through eighth grade boys and girls:

This year teams are arranged by grade in both the boys and girls program. We continue to work closely with the Cohasset High School coaching staff to ensure we are teaching players the most advanced skills and game concepts. We combine weekday practices with weekend games to ensure a healthy balance of instruction and competition.

Pre-season training begins in March and the regular season runs from early April to June.

We will take full advantage of Alumni field this year with a new feature for eighth grade boys and selected girls teams: the "Friday Night Lights" program.

So what else do you need to know?

Register for the season by following the registration link at www.cohassetlacrosse.com.

Contact Brian Murphy (b.murphy@ubs.com) and Paul Appleton (pappleto@bidmc.harvard.edu) for questions about the boys program and Tom Hansen (tom.hansen@cbre.com) on girls related questions.

Please note the deadline for 2013 registration is Friday, February 1.

Late registrants will be accepted onto a waiting list and late fees will apply.

REARDON

For those who are new to the sport, and players and parents looking to make that all important decision of staying in town or heading to a private school, here's a quick rundown on the new coach.

Last year, Reardon was an assistant coach, working with MaryEllen O'Neil.

O'Neil recently moved to London with her family, and the decision to hire Reardon was easy.

"It's great for us," Cohasset athletic director Ron Ford said. "Our previous coach moved to London, and having Kully on board transitioned well into this season."

The girls had a strong season last year with an 11-5-2 record that included a win in the MIAA Tournament and a second-place finish in the South Shore League.

Reardon said the year as an assistant was a learning experience.

"My first year was a perfect way to see what high school lacrosse is all about," she said. "I could see the athleticism of the girls without going in guns blazing. It was a chance to see what needs to be done for growth as a team.

"The kids are hungry. They want this. A lot of the girls at the high school level do it (play sports) because they have to. These kids want to be here."

Reardon was talking about the combination of colleges wanting more than just academics on a resume, parental influence on occasion and kids who join a team because their friends play.

Reardon has seen it all from a couple of directions, especially the college side.

As a player, Reardon, an attacker, won two national championships in lacrosse at Middlebury College, and a third title in field hockey.

While there, Reardon learned and studied under coach Missy Foote, who coached both sports and has won 376 games in a 32-year career.

"She's why I coach," Reardon said of Foote. "While I was there we won three national championships and she established that."

After her college career ended, Reardon, then known as Kully Hagerman, went to graduate school at Wesleyan, where she was on the coaching staff of both field hockey and lacrosse.

That experience led her to Babson College, where Reardon was head coach for lacrosse and an assistant field hockey coach beginning in 2002.

Reardon stayed at Babson until stepping down after the 2011 season to focus on her family, including husband Tom, a Cohasset native, who's sister went to Cohasset and played under current wrestling coach Torin Sweeney, sons Jack and Finn and a third little one on the way.

While at Babson, Reardon turned the lacrosse program into a perennial national contender, led the program to new heights, including the best four-year record in team history as Babson went 61-13 with four consecutive conference championships and four consecutive trips to the NCAA Tournament Round of 16 from 2007 to 2010.

Along the way, Reardon became the first coach in team history to collect 100 career wins, and she was named NEWMAC Coach of the Year in 2007.

Reardon notched top-20 national rankings in five consecutive seasons, Reardon's teams were 32-0 in NEWMAC play during a stretch dating back to 2007.

Individually, players from her squads won 38 All-Conference awards, 31 All-New England honors, and 10 All-American nods. Before leaving in 2011, Reardon's Beavers featured the last four NEWMAC Player of the Year winners and the last six NEWMAC Rookie of the Year honorees.

Not to be outdone, Reardon also served as head coach of the field hockey team for two seasons, leading the squad to a 19-6 mark and the program's first NCAA tournament berth in 2005. She was named NEWMAC Coach of the Year that fall.

Being a mom is something that will factor into the way Reardon coaches.

"I had kids when I was coaching at Babson," Reardon said. "It changed my approach. I think now I'm maybe a little more concerned about them (players) as individuals. What motivates internally as a mother is more prevalent."

With Cohasset, Reardon has set goals that go beyond the field.

"The first thing I want to do is create a culture of pride," she said. "I want them to be proud to play on this team. I want the girls to grow confident and be great role models, to learn life lessons. Bottom line, I want them to have a great experience."

Of course, part of that experience is helping her players with the skills and tools to take it to the next level.

Recent events, including players like senior captain Hope Kissick's signing at Div. 1 Florida back up the thought, and a few of her thoughts about why some families choose private schools.

"We have had kids recruited to Div. 1 schools," she said. "One reason is that (in many public schools) coaches are only around for a year or two. There isn't an ability to give a whole lot of coaching. They's not as invested. Other (private) schools, most coaches are lifers. They teach there and coach there. They are invested.

"It's also the economy. When the economy is up, kid leave. For some it's a family tradition. When the economy is down, some come back. Still, if the high school program is top-notch, they'll stay. When you have a strong lacrosse program, there are life lessons being learned three hours a day. There's no other time in the day to get those skills. They can take those skills, knowledge, motivation and work ethic to recruiting camps."

When it comes to the investment and stability in coaching, Cohasset is in a unique position among public schools, not to mention that it annually ranked as a top academic school

If you look at the coaching staff, you see a dedicated group of coaches who have been at Cohasset for years, with a good number of them also teachers.

Football coach Pete Afanasiw took his team to the playoffs a few years back, and also won a pair of Div. 4 State Championships with the baseball team.

Basketball coaches John LeVangie and Bo Ruggiero need no introduction.

Ruggiero is already in the Mass. Coaches Hall of Fame, and LeVangie has a couple of State Championships with his girls teams.

Wrestling coach Torin Sweeney started his coaching career right out of high school and has been a part of the school and program for years in many capacities including golf, wrestling, softball and football.

GiGi Meehan is a legend on the tennis courts and has no plans to step down.

Deb Beal is also considered among legendary soccer coaches, and is now running the school's new Hanover/Cohasset co-op girls varsity hockey team.

Bob Walsh is a long-timer with lots of success on the ice.

There are more, like Jim Willis, who is head coach of the boy's soccer team and an assistant boys basketball coach.

"Cohasset has a lot to offer as a high school," Ford said. "It is a tremendous school, one of the best academics in the state. We also have a good sports program. Kids go off to great schools. We have four girls, both seniors and juniors looking at great schools. We are unique in the amount of retention of coaches. Most are teachers and are in the building. It really makes my job easier."

With lacrosse, there is a tremendous commitment in the region.

"There are some really big club programs in the area," Reardon said.

For the coming season, Reardon expects good things.

"This season girls have actually been participating in a winter league," she said. "That's huge. The captains have been at it since Oct. They're in the swing of things."

Reardon thinks the early start will help.

"There should be a team unity. Everybody has to be on the same page. Kids should have a sense of feeling lucky to be here."

The team will be led by senior captains Hope Kissick, Kristen Alexander and Kylie Coffman.

"They are key as leaders," Reardon said. "And our junior class is awesome. They'll definitely help with a culture of pride."

On the field, Reardon hopes to bring her style to the game.

"We'll have to be athletic," she said. "If not we can't run up and down the field, we're in trouble. We'll start with fundamentals, catching and throwing. Ideally, we'll have a fast-break game. The upper classmen have wheels."

Another area where Reardon is helping out is at Laxachussets skills clinics at the Cohasset Sports Complex.

"I help coach that with Boston College head coach Acacie Walker," Reardon said. The learning curve there is awesome."

In all, Reardon sees no reason why the team won't be successful.

"We have a tough schedule," she said. "But that's the only way to get better. We scrimmage with BB&N and Wellesley. Those are tough teams. Really, I don't see any reason why we can't win the league. Norwell is always a threat, but we have every piece of the puzzle. We just need to mesh it all together."

not secured until Henry Brown - a 6'3" junior hit four consecutive free throws coupled with Christian Davis' two free throws in the final 1:30 of the game.

The Skippers were down 15-12 in the first period as the Abington defense keyed on high scoring forward Shane Haggerty.

However, both Laugelle (6 points) and 6'3" sophomore Patrick Federle (5 pts - including a big three pointer) kept the Skippers close.

Abington again won the second period mini-battle 10-9 - again holding Shane Haggerty scoreless, but team defense along with Laugelle's 6 points and 3 free throws from Christian Davis kept the score (25-21) within reach at halftime.

The boys came out of halftime firing on all cylinders as their vaunted full court press took its toll.

Scoring the first six points they outscored Abington 23-13 in the period to take a 44-38 third quarter lead on the strength of Shane Haggerty's 9 points, and a balanced attack by Laugelle (4) Davis (5) and 5 by Jr. Joe Buckley including a back breaking three pointer off the end of a fast break to maintained their 6 point lead.

The fourth period was a crowd pleasing period as Cohasset went up by 9 midway during the period with two fast break lay-ups by Shane Haggerty and a putback off an offensive rebound by Rocco Laugelle only to have three consecutive three pointers by Abington tie the game up 55-55.

It was then that the Cohasset defense remained steady, holding Abington scoreless on its last three ball possessions, getting fouled and hitting their free throws to close out the game and win 60-55.

The undersized Skippers battled on both the offensive & defensive backboard against the 6'7" Matt Diver and 6'3" Joe Buckley and 6'3 Brendan Cauley with Cohasset's Joe Buckley keeping the 6'7" Diver off the glass and the team recording 25 rebounds led off the bench by Sophomore Jack Chamberlain's 6 rebounds and Henry Brown with 5 .

The win was the third in a row on the road for Cohasset and the fifth straight in the past two weeks as they defeated Mashpee 64-44 and East Bridgewater 67-41 on Tuesday night. It kept the Skippers within a one game range of league Leading Rockland. Cohasset is home for the next two games beginning Tuesday against Carver and then Norwell on Friday.

Coach Ruggiero was very pleased with the win

"Terrific Team effort yet again tonight, great to have Rocco step up and score like he did especially with the intense pressure they were putting on holding Shane Haggerty down," Ruggiero said.

"Interesting that Shane gets 14 points in a game and it looks like they stopped him. Christian Davis had another solid game both scoring and leading the fast break while our bench – Chamberlain, Brown, Chris Haggerty and freshman Jack Donohue [2 rebounds /1 steal] – made significant contributions to the win. The kids were excited to qualify for the tournament - now on to more wins for this crew."

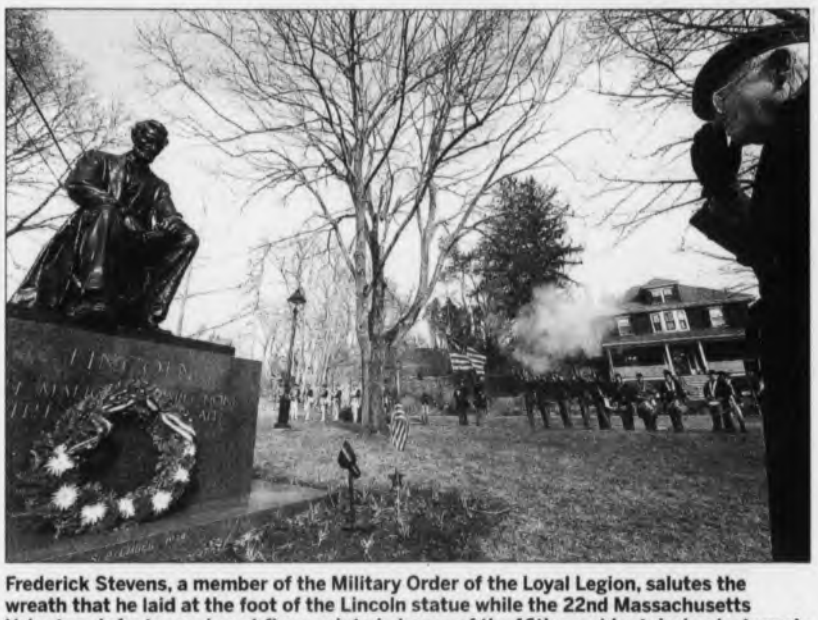
Everyone invited to Lincoln Day celebration

After the service, all guests are invited to join a short parade down Main Street to Fountain Square to lay a commemorative wreath at the foot of the statue of Abraham Lincoln.



Hingham Historical Society invites everyone to attend the 37th annual Lincoln Day celebration on Saturday, Feb. 2, beginning at 11 a.m., at the historic Old Ship Church, 90 Main St.

Free and open to the public, Lincoln Day celebrates the legacy of Hingham's Revolutionary War hero, General Benjamin Lincoln, and President Abraham Lincoln, whose ancestors first settled in Hingham in 1637. The keynote speaker for Lincoln Day this year will be Michael Puzo, Hingham's new Town Moderator.

"Lincoln Day is a tribute to the spirit of community that both Abraham and Benjamin inherited from their Hingham forefathers," said event chairman Bill Salisbury, "both of these great men sacrificed greatly for the preservation of nation and community. They stood on the shoulders of their Hingham ancestors, farmers, tradesmen and laborers whose daily service to their community was taken for granted in Colonial New England." Every able-bodied freeman was expected to do more than simply earn their daily bread. Regardless of their level of education and social status, these men served as a constables and justices of the peace, volunteer firefighters and delegates to the general court, and in a variety of other offices. Their belief in their civic duty helped build and cement the social fabric of Hingham and eventually the nation.

Lincoln Day celebrates the community-building efforts of everyone who has contributed to the "general welfare." The celebration will feature a color guard from the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, and re-enactors from the Massachusetts 22nd and 54th volunteer infantries, as well as representatives of the Society of the Cincinnati, the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, and the military wing of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The principal celebration begins at 11 a.m. at Hingham's historic Old Ship Church, 90 Main St. Early birds are welcome to gather at 10:15 a.m. at the nearby Bell Tower to watch as the Hingham Militia and other military orders fire a salute toward Benjamin Lincoln's tomb in the Hingham Cemetery. Inside the church, the official ceremony will feature familiar patriotic songs accompanied by organist Joan Nahigian, and a selection of historic American music provided by Hingham's own Paul Cappers and the Hingham Singers.

Frederick Stevens, a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, salutes the wreath that he laid at the foot of the Lincoln statue while the 22nd Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry regiment fire a salute in honor of the 16th president during last year's celebration.

After the service, all guests are invited to join a short parade down Main Street to Fountain Square to lay a commemorative wreath at the foot of the statue of Abraham Lincoln.

This part of the ceremony will take place just across the street from Benjamin and Abraham Lincoln's ancestral homes. After a display of proper military salutes, all are invited to warm up at a reception at Old Derby Academy, 34 Main St., where warm beverages and light refreshments will be provided, courtesy of the Hingham Historical Society.

This event is free and open to the public, and is supported by the Hingham Institution for Savings, The Military Order of the Loyal Legion and the Society of Cincinnati. For more information, call the Hingham Historical Society at 781-749-7721.

Math madness

Osgood and Deer Hill students had fun with numbers during Greg Tang's "World of Math" presentation on Thursday, Jan 17. Students of all ages were challenged and engaged as they followed the fast-paced presentation on mental math.

Students and teachers alike were encouraged to "think smart" about math concepts. The "Math Done Right Program was co-funded through a grant by the Cohasset PSO and the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) and consisted of assemblies for all kindergarten through fifth-grade students and a full day of professional development on grade-level strategies to more effectively teach math concepts.

Help your kids avoid the flu

Safety steps from the Red Cross

Health officials are reporting widespread influenza outbreaks in 47 of 50 states, up from just a week ago. One age group hit particularly hard is children, and the American Red Cross has some steps parents can teach their kids to help them avoid getting sick.

Washing hands

Kids have a way of picking up colds and other illnesses. Parents should teach children proper hand washing techniques and how to correctly cover coughs or sneezes. Everyone should wash their hands with soap and warm water.

When using soap and water:

• Wash for at least 20 seconds, covering the entire hand, including fingernails and under jewelry. Younger children can be taught to sing a short song like "Row, Row, Row Your Boat" or the "Happy Birthday" song a few times, which will ensure they wash for at least 20 seconds.

• Rinse and dry thoroughly with a disposable towel.

• Use the towel to turn off the faucet.

Physical activity can improve your senior years

By Mazhar Jakhro, M.D.
Special to GateHouse Media

Physical activity and a healthy diet provide a one-two punch that is key to a healthy life. And this activity should not stop as the years progress. If you have not been physically active before, it's never too late to start. Even just a small amount of exercise or activity will give you better health. Here are some of the ways how physical activity can improve your older years, including tips on how to get and stay active into your senior years.

One of the most common beliefs is that as people get older they will lose strength and energy, but it doesn't have to be that way. The most common characteristics associated with old age including frailty, loss of function, decreased health, difficulty walking long distances, struggling to go up and down stairs and even straining to carry in the groceries, are actually symptoms of not having enough physical activity. Simply put, you must use it or lose it. When people cease physical activity, even just going for a walk around the neighborhood, muscle mass and endurance will decrease and it won't take long for the frailty to set in. According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, spending at least 30 minutes doing moderate activity, such as a brisk walk or raking leaves, on all or most days of the week has remarkable health benefits for older adults

Senior adults should get a minimum of 30 or more minutes of moderate physical activity, like brisk walking, five or more days a week. PHOTO COURTESY OF METRO

Benefits of being physically active

Regular physical activity has beneficial effects on most, if not all, organ systems. When you become, or continue to be, physically active in your older years, you lower your risk of high blood pressure, heart disease, colon cancer, diabetes and obesity. A physically active older adult has a higher level of function and can stay independent for a much longer period of time than an adult who is not active. This is especially true for adults who face problems like arthritis and lung disease.

There have been countless studies done on the benefits of physical activity on people of all ages. Studies have shown that muscle-strengthening exercises may protect against declining bone mass often experienced by postmenopausal women. This is the greatest protection against injuries during a fall.

Recommended activity levels for seniors

The more often a person exercises and the higher the intensity of the exercise, the better the benefits will be, but even moderate exercise will make a big improvement in your quality of life. It is recommended that senior adults get a minimum of 30 or more minutes of moderate physical activity, five or more days a week. The most effective strategy for becoming more active is to incorporate activity into your daily routines, like walking or bicycling rather than driving. Other great activities for adults include washing the car for 60 minutes, raking leaves for 30 minutes or brisk walking or swimming for at least 30 minutes. Sedentary people should start out slowly, and only take part in these activities in 10-minute intervals.

Additional benefits of being physically active when you are older include:
- Lower mortality rates
- Lower risk of diabetes
- Lower risk of colon cancer
- Lower risk of breast cancer
- Lower risk of heart disease
- Lower risk of high blood pressure
- Lower risk of bone loss and fracture
- Improved function in people with arthritis
- Improved mood
- Relief of depression symptoms
- Improved quality of life
- Improved quality of sleep
- Lower risk of falls and other injuries

Boost your health

Consider organic foods or a vegan diet

By Kellie K. Speed
Correspondent

We all know that organic foods are all the rage today but can they actually boost your health and make you feel better?

Organic foods are not only free from synthetic pesticides and artificial fertilizers but have not been subjected to irradiation and biotechnology. If it's an animal product you are eating or drinking, it is free from antibiotics and synthetic growth hormones. Over the years, these products accumulate in the body but organic foods allow us to create healthier environments for our body.

"Eating vegan can boost an individual's health on so many levels," said Micki Appleby, owner of Mama Micki's All Natural Bakery that will be opening in Scituate Harbor in a few weeks. "Eating vegan essentially is eating a plant-based diet; no meat, no dairy (no milk, cheese or butter), no eggs, and for some, no honey. The vegan diet is low in saturated fats and is cholesterol free. It provides a wealth of vitamins, fiber and antioxidants. Eating vegan can assist in decreasing inflammation in the body thus offering relief from inflammatory diseases such as heart disease and arthritis."

Mama Micki's All Natural Bakery uses organic and all natural ingredients in its products.

"We use nothing artificial and only choose non-GMO ingredients for our products," Appleby said. "Everything is made by hand, from scratch (no mixes). We have our traditional line of baked goods, which contains organic eggs and organic butter, as well as our vegan line of baked goods, which uses absolutely no animal products. Our vegan cookies in stores have been certified by Vegan Action.

"When we open the new bakery, we will also be introducing our gluten-free line of baked goods for those who cannot ingest gluten products. We will have a dedicated gluten-free baking area, dedicated mixers, dedicated pans, dedicated ingredient bins and a dedicated pastry case so that these products are kept separate from our wheat products. Since some gluten-free customers are also dairy-free, custom requests can easily be accommodated given our expertise with vegan baking."

Like Appleby, the folks at How on Earth in Mattapoisett also believe eating organic foods is a healthier option.

"People are becoming more aware of where their food is coming from and how it affects their bodies," store manager Sarah Murray said. "Eating organic has really become a lifestyle. There are a lot of health benefits to eating organic and not ingesting chemicals. The quality of food is a lot better, especially with today's geneticaly modified foods. You are not eating real food. You're eating something that was made in a factory. That's not the way food is meant to be."

How on Earth offers a similar yet smaller version of Whole Foods Market focusing on organic products with gluten-free items, organic cereals, Fair Trade chocolate and local grass-fed meats that are raised organically.

"We are a full one-stop shop," Murray said. "You can get everything from your typical groceries here to take-home meals like shepherd's pie, meatloaf, turkey pot pies and soups to go. A lot of people these days are cooking but they don't know how to prepare good meals so we have a lot of prepared foods that you can take home and simply heat up and serve. Organic living can be overwhelming, especially if you have kids, but prepared foods are a way for families to take a step back and see that they can do this."

As you learn about what is actually in our food and the environment in which it is produced, you can then choose what is best for your body and overall health.

"I believe that we need to provide our bodies with the cleanest fuel we possibly can," Appleby said. "This means, to me, no chemicals, no artificial substances, no genetically engineered foods. Health and well being for years into our futures begins with what we ingest each and every day. In doing this, eating clean becomes less a trend and more a lifestyle choice."

If using an alcohol-based hand sanitizer:

- Rub thoroughly over the entire hand, including nail areas and between the fingers.
- Continue to rub until the product dries.

Safety steps

The most important thing parents can do is get children six months of age or older a flu vaccine as recommended by the Centers for Disease Control. Children's caregivers should also get vaccinated. Other steps parents can take include keeping surfaces disinfected and keeping a sick person in a separate room in the household if possible.

If the child becomes ill

If a child gets sick, parents should consult their doctor. They should also make sure their child gets plenty of rest and fluids. If the child is breathing fast or having trouble breathing, has bluish or gray skin color, refuses to drink, is vomiting, is irritable or has trouble staying awake, parents should get the child medical help right away.

Information on what to do if someone has the flu is available on the free Red Cross First Aid mobile app available for iPhone and Android devices. Visit redcross.org/FluTips for more information.

IN CONCERT WITH ATLANTIC SYMPHONY

It's a musical party at the Pops!

NINA WELLFORD

Who says that the symphony has to be stuffy? Atlantic Symphony knows how to have fun, and its upcoming Winter Sizzle Pops! concert brings together all the pieces of a memorable party: Great music, lots of friends, a charismatic host, fabulous food, and the chance to take home some unique experiences.

Each Atlantic Symphony concert has its own character, giving audiences the chance to experience music from many angles. I've written about the thrill of Opening Night, Masterworks Gala and the Season Finale, with symphonic masterpieces by composers like Beethoven, Brahms, and Mozart. In those concerts, ASO's outstanding orchestra breathes new life into classic symphonies and concerti. Our Chamber concerts are more like intimate conversations between musical friends. Discovery is educational, especially for families; the Concerto Competition showcases up and coming musicians. The two Uncorked and On Tap bring you one solo musician focusing on one instrument alone.

The Pops is something else entirely. A concert party, it's a delightful mix of music and fun. The program draws on Broadway (Gershwin's Symphonic Suite from "Porgy and Bess," Bernstein's selections from "West Side Story"), the gorgeous Oboe Concerto by Marcello, and "new tango" works by the Argentinian Astor Piazzolla. Conductor Jin Kim serves as host, spicing things up with his wit and insight. And in an ASO tradition, one lucky high bidder conducts the Pops favorite, Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever." I can tell you, having had this fabulous opportunity a few years ago, it's a highpoint in life.

The party begins early in the lobby. The Manhattan Project, an accomplished acoustic jazz sextet of students from Scituate, plays a mix of jazz standards infused with punk. Guests can purchase a selection of "small plates" from a tapas and dessert bar sponsored by Derby Street Shoppes, Chipotle and Rustic Kitchen, and enjoy a glass of wine. And, you can try your hand at playing the xylophone – the full-sized one! Plus, there will be a small number of wonderful experiences to bid on in a one-shot silent auction, including a sail on a 53-foot yacht, a week in the North Country, and a gorgeous wooden double kayak. All to benefit the ASO.

So, add some sizzle to this cold winter with hot music and cool fun at the Atlantic Symphony Pops! It's a unique experience – once a season – not to be missed.

Saturday, Feb. 2, at Thayer Academy's Center for the Arts, 745 Washington St., Braintree. Pre-concert party begins at 6 p.m. Concert at 7:30 p.m. Seating is reserved, so friends may sit together. $40 adults; $35 seniors; $10 students. For more information, see www.atlanticsymphony.org.

Nina Wellford, a Hingham resident, serves as interim Managing Director of Atlantic Symphony Orchestra.

GIMME SHELTER

A little guy with big personality

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Junior is a funny little guy, about 7 years old, who will bring you many smiles as you get to know him. COURTESY PHOTO

Junior just wants to be loved and petted and oh boy, when he's getting all that attention, the purring starts and putters on like a little motor.

He's adorable, small, loving, handsome and wow, what beautiful eyes! Junior is a special little boy. Just before the last snowstorm, a kind person found Junior and took him in from the cold. Well, he got comfortable there but it was clear that he needed a forever home. Junior's next stop was here at Hull Seaside and hopefully his travels are almost done. His is a journey that needs a happy ending for sure.

Junior is a funny little guy, about 7 years old, who will bring you many smiles as you get to know him. He even has his own little smile! When you enter the room and start talking to him, he will chat right back to you with his cute little meow. If he is curled up in his favorite hut, he will roll on his side and literally slither and roll out to see you with his paws curling around his head until he is fully up and out. Junior just wants to be loved and petted and oh boy, when he's getting all that attention, the purring starts and putters on like a little motor.

Once upon a time, he must have had a caring and loving home. Being separated from his family has made it tough for him but what a little trooper he is. It is like Junior has moved right on, ready for the next chapter in his life book with a great attitude and sweet, peaceful personality that some lucky person will get to share. There is no doubt that he deserves the best.

In the shelter, we see so many cases of wonderful animals who, through no fault of their own, find themselves having to adjust to a very different life. It isn't easy and we try very hard to make them comfy and as happy as they can be, knowing that there is fear, mistrust and anxiety in the process. Learning to trust new caregivers is not easy but is such a reward for us when it happens.

Right now we have so many beautiful cats who are ready for their forever homes. Junior is one who is really amazing and he just needs a best friend and loving family to make his world complete again. If you are considering adding a new member to your family and home, please consider this deserving cat. He is a real cutie and needs that special home where he can play, pounce, and then curl up and relax, which comes so naturally to him.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Junior and our other available cats. Visit us during Open Hours on Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. or Saturday from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. Our phone number is 781-925-3121 and you can visit our website. www.hsar.org and view other available pets in our shelter who are featured on Petfinder.com.

While we may be unhappy with the outcome of our recent championship game, our spirits are high seeing all of the donated cans and bottles that have been sent our way. Thank you to all of you who have continued to support us with collecting and dropping them off for us. It is a great help to every animal here. Donations of wet kitten food are always needed, and dye free, hairball control and indoor formula dry foods for our adult felines is always appreciated.

If you are interested in helping our shelter by volunteering or fundraising at your business or club, please contact us. We are a 501(c) (3) non-profit and depend on donations, grants and the generosity of those who give their time and effort helping us to continue providing safe shelter for animals in need throughout the South Shore.

Special thanks this week to all of the merchants in Hull, Hingham and Cohasset who have our "Hull Seaside donation houses" displayed in their stores and businesses. Your customers have been so generous and have helped in many ways. We are grateful for your willingness to support us in our mission.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF FEB. 4, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might feel bolder as each new success falls into place. But caution is still advised through the end of the week. Until then, a step-by-step approach is best.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That cooperation you request could come at too high a price. Since few can beat the Bovine at being clever and resourceful, why not see what you can do on your own?

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Aspects favor a quieter time spent getting closer to the people who are especially important to you. There's always much more to learn and appreciate about each other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The concerned Crab will act to resolve workplace misunderstandings before they get out of hand and cause more-serious problems. Co-workers rally to support your efforts.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) What the Big Cat might see as a disturbing act of disloyalty might just be a failure of communication on both sides. Take time for mediation rather than confrontation.

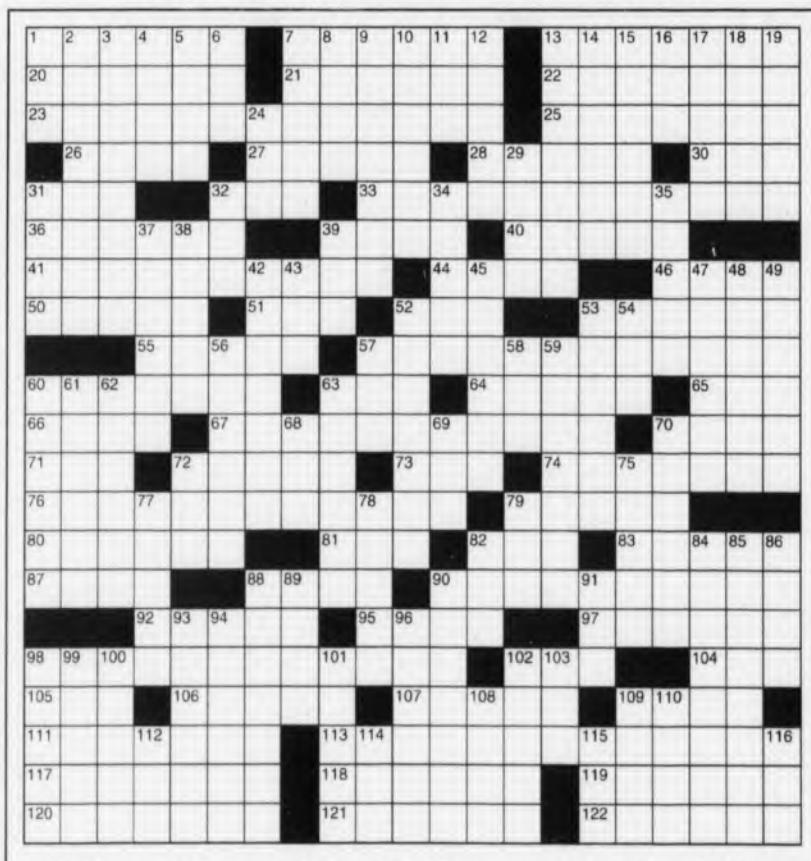
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be more patient with those who seem unwilling to accept your version of what's right. The fact is, there's a lot more to learn on all sides of this issue.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It should be easier to assess the facts you'll need to make an important decision. But don't commit if you still have doubts. There could be more you need to know.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your excitement level remains high as you continue working on that new project. Expect some setbacks. But on the whole, all will move pretty much on schedule.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It might be wise to be more prudent with expenses right now. But your financial situation should soon clear up, and you could be back shopping, happily as ever.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might prefer sticking with your current schedule. But some newly emerging information could persuade you to consider a change. Keep an open mind.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might want to reject a suggested change. But it could be wise to go with the flow, at least for a while. You can always return to your first plan if you like.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're bolstered by both the practical and poetic sides of your nature as you maneuver through some unsettled emotional situations. Things ease up by week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: People reach out to your generosity and wisdom, and consider you a trusted and treasured friend.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ROCKIN' OUT

Making music in Cohasset

Jon Durant works out of his home studio

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Down at the end of Surrey Drive lives a musician who is making a type of music you won't hear by turning on your radio.

Jon Durant, a guitarist and producer with his own record label, decided long ago that he would create the type of music he is passionate about and enjoys listening to the most — progressive rock.

"It's hard to describe what I do," Durant said of his unique music during a visit in his home studio. "The fact is, it really is different. Everybody asks, 'What kind of music do you play?' It's a difficult thing [to explain] all the music that has influenced me over the years... All the music I liked didn't fit inside the boundaries."

A subgenre of classic rock and roll, progressive rock – "prog rock," for short – originated in England in the late 1960s and early '70s and evolved from more radio-friendly fare, fusing traditional rock with an eclectic range of influences, from classical to jazz to "world" music.

Staples of the genre include atypical melodies, harmonies and song structure, often ignoring the more universal pentatonic scale and "verse-chorus"

Info leak, question of ethics

BOS won't file second complaint against Gjesteby

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Tuesday, after a late night debate over an ethics complaint against one of their own, the Selectmen voted to take no further action on a separate – but related – matter of leaked information.

Two weeks ago, the Board of Selectmen filed a complaint with the State Ethics Commission against fellow selectman Martha Gjesteby after she forwarded an email from Town Counsel that reportedly contained privileged information.

Gjesteby then filed an Open Meeting Law (OML) complaint with the Town Clerk's office on Tuesday, Jan. 15, stating that the Board of Selectmen did not follow state law or protocol during an executive session on Dec. 18, 2012. Included with Gjesteby's complaint were executive session minutes that had not yet been voted on or approved for public release by the selectmen.

This week, the board considered turning Gjesteby into the State Ethics Commission for allowing the confidential information to become part of the public record, which is what happens as soon as the Town Clerk accepts documents. Because of this, a Boston Globe reporter was able to obtain a copy of the executive session minutes.

Town Hall study

Committee named to look at historic structure

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Plans to renovate "old" Town Hall are being reviewed by a selectmen-appointed committee. The Town Hall Study Committee was originally formed six years ago to advise on plans and budget for a Town Hall redesign, rehabilitation and renovation project. The committee is charged with making recommendations to the selectmen and/or Community Preservation Committee (CPC), and possibly Town Meeting.

The newly organized committee will consider the work completed by the 2007 Town Hall study committee as well as an upcoming architectural study, which was approved by the December 2012 Special Town Meeting. The architectural study is being conducted this winter.

The group is expected to give the selectmen their preliminary recommendation on March 26 and report to the Capital Budget Committee and CPC the prior week. The committee will also hold at least one public hearing prior to presenting to the selectmen.

The committee will consist of up to 11 Cohasset residents and meet at least 12 times per year. A chair will be chosen, along with a clerk to record the meeting minutes. The board will sunset at the 2014 Annual Town Meeting, unless the selectmen choose to extend it.

The committee has nine members so far and is seeking two more. Those who are interested should send a letter to the Board of Selectmen's office in Town Hall: 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset or

Meeting postponed one week

The Cohasset SEPAC is moving their monthly Tuesday night presentation from Feb. 5th to Feb. 12th. This is a change from the PSO school calendar. The presentation will still be held at the Paul Pratt Library at 7pm. The topic will be Executive Function and Social skills presented by Pamela Ely.

Ely will be sharing her approach to developing Executive Functioning skills for all our students (organizing, time awareness, pre-writing skills). She is currently working with the Cohasset District in observing out students' needs and training the staff through professional development as well as in individual classroom with on the spot teaching opportunities. Executive Function and Social skills are critical not only for students, but for parents and executives as well. POLICE BEAT

Footprints, tire tracks in snow lead to house

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Tracks in the snow from an attempted housebreak led police to a home off Atlantic Avenue where they arrested a 24-year-old man for unlawful possession of ammunition.

It all started with a 53-year-old man, who was in town staying with his elderly mother, went to the police station at 1:40 a.m. on Saturday (Jan. 26) after having chased a man down the street after looking out his window and seeing a young man coming up the driveway. The Cohasset man then felt cold air rushing up the stairs and went down to confront the burglar who ran out the door. The man chased the burglar down the driveway; the burglar got into a car and drove off. The Cohasset man got into his car but lost sight of the other car and drove to the police station.

Police found footprints in the newly fallen snow by the house and followed the tire tracks to a location on Atlantic Avenue where they also found footprints that were consistent with those at the house that was burgled. Detectives arrived and additional officers were called to preserve the evidence. Police spoke with the parents at the Atlantic Avenue address about the footprints but they refused to let the detectives search the house.

Police obtained a search warrant and searched the house but did not find the shoes in questions. However they did find a large amount of ammunition (200 rounds) in the son's room and he was placed under arrest for unlawful possession of ammunition.

The burglary is still under investigation.

Money taken

At 6:57 a.m., last Thursday (Jan. 24), a 57-year-old Cohasset man reported that when he and his family awoke at about 6 a.m., they found that a $20 bill was missing from the kitchen table. The son then discovered $20 was missing from his wallet and the wife had $40 missing from her pocketbook that was hanging on a chair. Further investigation revealed that $400 from the husband's wallet was gone. The wallet was in his briefcase. The thefts took place while the family was asleep on the second floor; their wallets were all on the first floor. Police said detectives are investigating; there were no signs of forced entry as the house was unlocked.

Arrest

A 37-year-old Scituate woman was arrested on Thursday (Jan. 24) around 9:38 p.m. after a traffic stop for speeding. Police said an officer on patrol saw a gray 2011 Hyundai Accent headed south on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) by Beechwood Street traveling 50 in a 35 mph zone. The officer pulled the car over and further investigation revealed the woman's license had been suspended for failure to pay a speeding ticket and there was a default warrant for her arrest out of Hingham District Court for shoplifting. She was placed under arrest on the warrant and cited for speeding and operating after license suspension. The car was towed. The woman's two daughters, ages 7 and 5, who were in the car, were taken to the station where they were later picked up by a family member. Police said the girls watched TV in the squad room while waiting for the ride.

Police explained that an arrest warrant is an order from the court and they do not have discretion in not making the arrest.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Use extra caution when approaching snowplows or sanding trucks. Stay well behind them. They may make frequent stops and wide turns. Avoid passing them, even on four-lane roads. They can track up snow and spray onto your windshield, making it difficult to see and the sand can damage your paint. Also, the road ahead may not have been treated yet so it's safer behind them. Freak accident

At 9:11 a.m. on Thursday (Jan. 24), police responded to a minor accident on Elm Street involving two motorists backing out of driveways. Police said they both backed up at the same time on opposite sides of the street and collided in the middle of the street, causing about $1,000 in damage to each vehicle.

One of the vehicles involved was a 2002 Buick sedan, operated by at 48-year-old Hull woman, the other was a 2005 Chevrolet pickup truck, operated by a 22-year-old Weymouth man.

Police said neither driver saw the other; there were no injuries and neither vehicle was towed. The drivers were not cited.

Erratic operation

Police responded to a call from a motorist at 2:26 p.m. on Thursday (Jan. 24) that a 2004 Jeep Wrangler was all over the road on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police observed operation of the Jeep before it pulled into the medical building parking lot off Crocker Lane. The 40-year-old Quincy man, who was driving, was not impaired. He was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes. Police suspect he may have been texting while driving.

Argument

Police responded to a disturbance at 4:04 a.m. on Sunday (Jan. 27) on King Street (Route 3A) near the entrance to Sunrise Assisted Living. The officer observed a Saab 9000 pulled to the side of the road with two people standing outside, a Marshfield man and woman, both 24 years old. The man explained they had been having an argument that started at a friend's house in Hingham. He pulled over because arguing and driving at the same time was not safe. Police said there was no physical abuse, the couple calmed down, and went on their way.

Loading zone

Police continue to ticket vehicles parked in the newly designated loading zone on Ripley Road across from Pat's Barbershop. No parking is allowed there from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Mondays and Fridays. The loading zone provides a spot for trucks to park that are supplying the different restaurants in the village. The area is well marked and lined but people continue to park there, police said.

Wires down

A part of Lamberts Lane near the Cohasset Golf Club had to be blocked off last Friday (Jan. 25) around 2 p.m. after a live wire was reported down and on fire. National Grid was called and the school department was notified to reroute the school bus. The roadway was closed for about 25 minutes, police said.

Car running

A concerned caller notified police on Friday (Jan. 25) at 5:18 p.m. that there was a car in the Stop & Shop parking lot that was running and had several children inside with no adult around. Police responded and found that the oldest child was 11. They spoke with the parent and determined the children were in no danger although this was not a good practice, police said.

Deer struck

At 4:58 p.m. on Thursday (Jan. 24), a caller reported that a deer had been hit by a car on Forest Avenue. Police said the doe was located at the end of a driveway on Forest Avenue by Cedar Acres Drive. The vehicle that hit the deer did not stop. Police said an officer with the Environmental Police heard the dispatch while coming through Cohasset and disposed of the deer.

Raccoon

The Animal Control Officer assisted a homeowner last Saturday (Jan. 26) at around 9:11 p.m. after she called reporting an animal (which turned out to be a raccoon) was running around in her attic.

Winter parking ban in effect

Winter parking regulations are in effect through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. is allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators are subject to a fine of $25.

License renewals

In a necessary effort to manage their cost, the Registry of Motor Vehicles may not notify drivers by mail of pending license or registration expiration. Police ask that you be diligent in regard to paying attention to expiration dates on your license and registration.

Should you discover either has expired simply go onto the Registry's website: massdot.state.ma.us/rmv/ and you may renew either with a credit card. You will receive a confirmation number immediately while you await the mailing of your renewal.

Feel free to contact the Cohasset Police Department if you need assistance.

NEWS UPDATE

Trouble with Fox Run

Concern raised over conservation project

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Jenkins, who also sits on the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) said that over the weekend, he was told that "some difficulties have arisen with the neighbors adjacent to the property."

Selectman Leland Jenkins raised a complaint during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting over property on Fox Run, which the May 2012 Annual Town Meeting voted to set aside as open space.

The Cohasset Conservation Land Trust is purchasing the land, two parcels off Forest Avenue known as the "Bread and Cheese" swamp, for $250,000.

Last year's Town Meeting voted to approve a total of $100,000 in Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds to pay for a conservation restriction on the land: $50,000 from the CPA's Open Space Sub Account and another $50,000 in undesignated CPA monies.

CPA funds come from a 1.5 percent surcharge on Cohasset property taxes with some level of state match.

Jenkins, who also sits on the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) said that over the weekend, he was told that "some difficulties have arisen with the neighbors adjacent to the property."

The selectman explained that a survey was done of the property and that the public access of the conservation land would encroach on neighbors' lawns and driveways. Jenkins said he was disappointed to find this out.

"Having attended the presentations made by the Conservation Trust at the CPC meetings, before this board and at Town Meeting, we were assured time and again that there would be no negative impact or disruption to the residents on this private way," Jenkins read from a prepared statement.

The selectman said he wanted to discuss the matter further, but since he brought it up during the selectmen's comment period, it would need to be addressed fully at a future selectmen meeting.

Jenkins also thinks that a public hearing should be held on the matter and that, in the meantime, the selectmen should put a hold on the CPC funds until a meeting has been held and an agreement is reached with all the parties involved in "opening this residential land up to public use."

The issue will likely be discussed at the next selectmen meeting, scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 5. CPC chair Russ Bonetti said that he plans to attend, and he believes members from the Conservation Trust will be there as well. The CPC chair said he was surprised a CPC matter came up during Tuesday's selectmen meeting, as he had not been notified beforehand.

Bonetti also said that, at the moment, none of the CPC funds set aside to purchase the property has been spent for the project.

"We haven't done anything with the funds," he said Wednesday. "They haven't been dispersed. All of the money is sitting there."

The CPC will hold its first meeting of 2013 on Monday, Feb. 11.

For more on this issue, see an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Roebuck steps down from Conservation Commission

Patrick Kennedy appointed to post

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Longtime Conservation Commissioner Veneta Roebuck has decided to resign her post, sending a letter of resignation on Dec. 21, 2012.

Roebuck wrote in her letter that while she has been honored to serve on the Conservation Commission for many years, she must resign to attend to family matters.

"Vee," as she is affectionately called, has logged 28 years with the Con Com. She was honored as the Cohasset Mariner "Citizen of the Year" in March 2012. She told the Mariner last year that it was 1985 when the Con Com first came on her radar. She was mowing the front lawn of her Beechwood Street home when then commissioner and neighbor Merle Brown came over and asked if she would be interested in serving on the board.

Roebuck asked Brown, "Tell me what the Conservation Commission is?" He filled her in, and she said, "Sure."

Now, Roebuck said that the decision to leave the Con Com has been a long time coming, but she stuck around throughout the years because she enjoyed serving so much.

"I wouldn't have been there if I didn't enjoy it," she said in a phone call Wednesday. "This town is unique... and I appreciate all the effort [commissioners] have given to this town... It's been good fun."

Roebuck has a birthday this week — she will turn 80 on Feb. 2.

New member

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, a former associate member of the Con Com, reported that the Con Com chairman, Jack Creighton, called from Florida and said that he would like to name the Con Com office after Roebuck.

Milanoski called her a respected individual and pillar of the community. "Her efforts will be sorely missed."

The town manager is responsible for appointing Con Com members, and the Board of Selectmen must ratify his recommendation with a vote.

The Con Com currently has two associate members, and associate Patrick Kennedy, an environmental lawyer, submitted a letter of interest to become a full-time member. The Con Com will then seek to fill the vacated associate (non-voting) position.

The selectmen voted 4-0 on Tuesday to appoint Kennedy. Selectman Diane Kennedy abstained from the vote; Patrick Kennedy is her husband.

Roebuck said of Kennedy's appointment, "That's good for the board," adding that she has listened to Kennedy speak up during Con Com meetings over the past several months, since he became an associate member last summer.

Vee said that while she thinks having an environmental lawyer will be an asset to the board, the commission functions well because its members have all different types of backgrounds. "There's always been a variety of people," said Roebuck. "That's what makes it work."

ETHICS

document puzzled some of the board members and the public.

"How did this reporter know this document was there?" asked Leonora Jenkins, Water Commissioner, who was in the audience Tuesday night. "It seems out of the ordinary for the Boston Globe to pinpoint Cohasset on this minor detail."

When Gjesteby learned on Wed., Jan. 16 that the Globe had obtained a copy of her complaint, she said that she went back to Town Hall the following day and asked for the minutes ("Tab B" of her complaint form) back, but Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre could not agree to let the document, which was now public, be destroyed.

"When you file something, it's record here," St. Pierre explained in a phone call Thursday. While a public document could not be taken back, it could be amended at an attorney's request.

Late Tuesday night, the selectmen discussed whether to file a second ethics complaint in two weeks against their fellow board member. They felt that if the executive minutes had to be included in the complaint, information unrelated to the complaint should have been blacked out or redacted, or the document should have been placed in a folder labeled "confidential."

Gjesteby's attorney, Brandon Moss of the Quincy firm Murphy, Hesse, Toomey and Lehane, stated that his client did not violate any state ethics statute by filing her complaint the way she did. Moss gave the selectmen copies of the Open Meeting Law and said that the law does not require sealing confidential documents.

Moss also said that his client made an effort to segregate the executive session minutes by tabbing them separately from the rest of her complaint form; she also went to Town Hall in her walker (Gjesteby, 83, broke her hip last month) to attempt to keep the document from being released to the public. The lawyer indicated that it was the Town Clerk's responsibility to know that the document contained sensitive information.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski took issue with this, feeling that St. Pierre was being "attacked" for simply doing her job.

"I'm troubled," Milanoski said of Moss's comments. "He's trying to surmise that the town clerk did something wrong. She's a very dedicated public servant and one of the most honest people I know... She is above reproach."

Gjesteby said in a phone call Wednesday that she agrees with the town manager on this. "I'm not angry at all with the town clerk — I think she does a wonderful job."

Despite being assured by the attorney of Gjesteby's efforts to conceal the confidential information, and the fact that she filed a proper OML complaint in accordance with state law, the selectmen still vacillated on whether or not to file another ethics complaint against her.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said he was troubled by what seemed like "no effort to protect privileged information... It seems to me that we've got to be obligated to protect town assets."

Kennedy said that while she was disappointed in the breach of information, she did not want to take any further action against Gjesteby and felt that one ethics complaint was enough.

"As upset as I am, we have got to stop, work together, and do what's best for the town," said Kennedy.

While selectman Fred Koed said he agreed with Kennedy, selectman Leland Jenkins said he felt the state ethics board should decide.

A majority of the board sided with Kennedy, voting 3-1 to take no further action on the matter (Jenkins was the dissenting vote while Gjesteby abstained).

Original ethics complaint

On Tuesday, Jan. 8, the Board of Selectmen voted to file a complaint against Gjesteby after learning that she had forwarded an email from Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, dated Dec. 8, 2012, to citizen Ronnie McMorris, a former selectman. While the contents of the email have not been disclosed publicly, the selectmen have stated that it contained privileged attorney-client information.

During their Jan. 8 meeting, the selectmen voted to submit the matter of the "email leak" to the state ethics board. Selectman Diane Kennedy said at the time that she did not feel "qualified" to rule on the matter; a majority of the board agreed with her.

At that same meeting, Gjesteby said that she planned to counter-file against her fellow board members, claiming an OML violation during their Dec. 18 meeting, the night the "email leak" was first discussed among the board. The selectmen met in executive at the close of public session during that meeting, and while the agenda stated that employee contracts would be discussed during the session, it did not specify which contract.

It was during this executive session that Gjesteby was chided for forwarding Town Counsel's email. Adrienne McCarthy, Doane Street, commented during this Tuesday's selectmen meeting that she feels Gjesteby was "blindsided" by the rest of her board. McCarthy said that this was when she believes all the trouble started brewing between the board members.

"I'm personally mortified by how this all went down," said McCarthy. She agreed with Kennedy's statement that the infighting among the selectmen "has to stop."

Response to OML complaint

The selectmen also approved a Jan. 30 letter that will be sent to the Attorney General's Office, Division of Public Government, responding to Gjesteby's complaint against them. In the letter, selectman chair Carlson outlines an action plan to ensure that meetings are properly posted and that the agendas will be less ambiguous from now on.

"Future meeting notices will be more specific, when possible," Carlson said Tuesday. The selectmen voted 4-0 to approve sending the response letter to the AG's office (Gjesteby abstained from voting).

Timeline of events

Dec. 8, 2012: Selectman Martha Gjesteby forwards an email from Town Counsel Paul DeRensis to citizen and former selectman Ronnie McMorris

Dec. 18, 2012: In an executive session after the public Board of Selectmen's meeting, the selectmen discuss Gjesteby's email forwarding as a breach of attorney-client privileged information.

Jan. 8, 2013: A majority of the selectmen vote to turn Gjesteby in to the State Ethics Commission. Gjesteby announces that she plans to file her own complaint against the rest of the selectmen, stating that she believes they violated the state Open Meeting Law (OML) during the Dec. 18 executive session by not properly disclosing what was going to be discussed in an executive on the meeting's agenda.

Jan. 15, 2013: Gjesteby files her OML complaint with the Town Clerk's office at approximately 6:30 p.m., just before the start of that night's selectmen's meeting. The complaint form includes the Dec. 18 executive session minutes, which were tabbed separately from the rest of the complaint. The minutes had not yet been voted on by the selectmen or approved for public release. However, by filing them with the Town Clerk, they became part of the public record.

Jan. 16, 2013: A Boston Globe reporter calls the Town Clerk and asks for a copy of the complaint form, including the executive session minutes. Gjesteby calls Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre that night to ask for the minutes back.

Jan. 17, 2013: Gjesteby goes to Town Hall that morning and asks to take the minutes back; St. Pierre tells Gjesteby that she cannot allow public documents to be destroyed.

Jan. 29, 2013: The selectmen approve a letter to the Attorney General's office responding to Gjesteby's OML against them, outlining actions they plan to take to avoid future OML violations. The selectmen also vote against filing a second complaint against Gjesteby for her second alleged breach of confidential information (first, the forwarded email; second, the release of unapproved executive session minutes). Gjesteby's attorney states that he and his client filed the OML complaint form properly, since the OML does not require confidential information to be sealed in an envelope or redacted, and the executive session minutes were flagged separately from the rest of the complaint.

Solar RFP update provided

The Cohasset Alternative Energy Committee's request for proposals (RFP) to develop solar energy arrays on town sites closed on Wed., Jan. 30. The committee received three bids for the landfill and Middle-High School roof, and a bid to develop a solar energy array on a private site in Cohasset.

Tanya Bodell, co-chair of the committee, said, "The Alternative Energy Committee is very pleased with the response to the RFP. The multi-disciplined team of the evaluation committee will now review the proposals and make a recommendation based on the stated evaluation criteria to the official procurement officer."

The evaluation committee consists of two AEC members, members from the School Committee's alt-energy subcommittee, Planning Board, Advisory and Capital Budget committees, along with the town's Director of Project Management and Planning, Brian Joyce.

The evaluation committee will strive to make a recommendation on which bids to consider to the official procurement officer (Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski) by the end of February.

Little Harbor Sewer Project

The Board of Selectmen voted recently to accept an Advance in Lieu of Borrowing for $330,000 for the Little Harbor Sewer Project. The sewer department will use the funds to finance the remaining costs of the project.

The town is waiting on taking out a new loan with the Mass. Water Pollution Abatement Trust (MWPAT) in order to pay its outstanding bond anticipation note (BAN); the water department is paying for 73 percent of that BAN, which is due in June, according to Finance Director Mary Gallagher.

The town is essentially borrowing the amount from itself; this is better than paying interest, said Mary Gallagher. The finance director explained that this is the method preferred by the state Dept. of Revenue.

"We're going to bond in June anyway; this will hold us over," she said.

Power outages

Yesterday during the windstorm, Cohasset police had to call in additional officers at about 5am to deal with multiple calls for fallen trees and downed wires. Additionally, midnight officers were held over to work the day shift and block roads. As of 8am the following areas were without power:

- Cushing Road
- Norfolk Road
- Norfolk Lane
- Bancroft Road
- Bancroft Lane
- Hill Street
- Short Street
- Area of 152 King Street
- Area of 100 Beechwood Street.

The intersection of Cushing Road and Norfolk Road was blocked by a fallen tree and there were primary power lines down. The area of 100 Beechwood Street (near Hammond Avenue) was also blocked by downed trees and wires.

AROUND TOWN

Welcome to new arrival, Brooke Matthews!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Happy February!

Hello Cohasset and happy February! I don't know about any of you but after the winter we have been having, from warm and cold, ice rain and snow and now, crazy winds etc, I am at a loss for what the big ole groundhog may see. At this point, an early spring sounds just fine to me! Good luck Pete!

Brooke Matthews came into the world on January 9, 2013 at 6:26 a.m. COURTESY PHOTO

A girl!

Well, as we all know, this saying is a sweet one and so true for parents of little girls as this very proud couple is saying.

Brian and Jennifer Matthews, along with big sister Emily, proudly announce the birth of Brooke Katherine Matthews. (Jennifer is the daughter of Cohasset's Barbara Meehan). Brooke came into the world on January 9, 2013 at 6:26 a.m.; she weighed in at 6 pounds 4 ounces and measured 18 inches. "Thank Heaven for Little Girls is right and in this household, the "girl-power" has taken over and Dad is thrilled! Congratulations to you all.

Rice U.

Some other proud families in town have some news to share as well about their "grown-up" girls."

Greta Shwachman has been named to the President's Honor Roll for the fall 2012 semester at Rice University in Houston, Texas. The President's Honor Roll recognizes an undergraduate's outstanding academic achievement. The minimum qualifying GPA for the fall semester is 3.858. Greta is presently studying nutrition at Rice and is planning a junior year abroad in Chile and Copenhagen. Once again, her parent's couldn't be prouder, congratulations Greta!

Boston College

Kaye Slamp of Cohasset was named to the dean's list at Boston College during the 2012 fall semester. Great news, Kaye!

U. of Conn.

Hats off to the University of Connecticut Cohasset students Eloise Catherine Lucas and Erika Priess Orner , who attained the dean's list for the fall 2012 semester.

To make the dean's list, students must be taking at least 12 credits, finish the semester with a grade-point average that is among the top 25 percent of students enrolled in their school or college and have no grade below a C.

Seton Hall

Congratulations go out to Alyssa Mullin who has graduated from The Whitehead School of Diplomacy at Seton Hall University in New Jersey with a B.S. in Diplomacy and International Relations, and a minor in French. While earning her degree she completed a program of study at the Sorbonne, in Paris, and most recently completed an internship at the U. N, in New York. The whole family wish Alyssa all the best as she begins her professional career!

True Grit

Cohasset Elder Affairs will offer this month's Brown Bag Lunch and Movie on February 11 at 12 p.m., at 3 North Main St. Enjoy for the remake of the John Wayne Classic, "True Grit," starring Jeff Bridges, Matt Damon and Josh Brolin. Bring your own lunch. Popcorn and soft drinks will be offered. No reservations required, but transportation is available. Call 781-383-9112 if you need a ride.

Hockey boosters

The Cohasset High School Ice Hockey Boosters are hosting the 7th Annual Black 'n' Blues Winter Classic held at Atlantica on Friday, Feb. 8th from 7pm to midnight. Come enjoy the sounds of Ron'Bosse and Trina Aitken. They will also have silent and live auction items. With out your support, the tremendous support of our local and not so local businesses, this annual fundraiser would not be possible. The monies that are raised are used to support the JV Team, coaches' salaries, purchase equipment, ice time and fund the annual Dennis Walsh Scholarship Award each year. So come and enjoy a night out. Tickets are $25/person or $40/couple. To reserve your tickets, call Karin Doonan (781) 956-7894. Hors d'oeuvres will be served /cash bar.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

New semester off and running

WHITNEY MALONE

With the start of the new semester, this week was rather hectic at CHS, especially in the guidance office, as many students switched in and out of classes and made final alterations to their schedules.

Monday, Peer Leaders met in Ms. Gordon's class after school to prepare for the last workshop, which will be presented to the middle school students next Friday. Being the first class open to the Peer Leader program for all four years of high school, we seniors were awarded certificates of achievement for our hard work and dedication. On the other hand, I'd like to thank Ms. Gordon for being such an organized and dedicated advisor for those of us in the program (and for the cookies and other treats provided to us after every workshop!).

Tuesday, students attending the experimental field learning trip to Costa Rica in April met at lunch to discuss fundraising. A fundraiser that we hope will be especially successful is the in-school sale of coffee to students in the morning. Starting Monday, coffee will be sold in the senior lounge, outside the gymnasium doors, to students and teachers. Bring your money to support the Costa Rica trip and to get that much-needed energy boost before first period!

Thursday, a meeting was held after school for students interested in participating in the Mr. Skipper pageant in March. For those of you who have never attended, Mr. Skipper is a male beauty pageant in which participants attempt to charm the judges with their special talents, dress, and answers to philosophical questions with the aim to win the title of Mr. Skipper. The senior class and its advisors organize the pageant, which helps fund the Senior Prom in May.

In correction of the school calendar, report cards will be distributed next week, not today. While report cards may put a damper on next week for some students, everyone can look forward to an early-release day Wednesday!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Social networking presentation planned

A Cohasset PSO-sponsored presentation with parenting expert Joani Geltman will take place from 7 to 9 p.m., on Thursday, Feb. 7, in the auditorium at Cohasset High School.

Geltman will speak to many of the concerns parents have about their children's use of social media. Today's teens and "tweens" are connected to one another and to the world via digital technology more than any previous generation. While adolescents may be more digitally savvy than their parents, their lack of maturity and life experience can quickly get them into trouble with these new social venues. For this reason it is critical that parents talk with their children of all ages about social media and monitor their online use to help them navigate this new social world. In this presentation participants will:

- Receive an overview of social media and how young people are using it;
- Learn practical tips for talking to adolescents about their use and your limits of social media; and
- Create a strategy for monitoring kids' online social media use.

Those planning to attend are asked not to bring children, as this is an adult presentation with adult content. The event is funded by Cohasset PSO and admission is free. Any interested parent or guardian is welcome. People do not need to be a parent of a Cohasset Public School student to attend.

GIMME SHELTER

You will love Nicky's smile

PAULA J FATERSIK

Just one look and you can't miss Nicky's "whisker smile". What a character and what a star! This young man is a Maine Coon mix with short, soft fur that feels like velvet. He is only 2 years old and still enjoys toys and playing.

Nicky is a lovable boy and has a loud meow that he will share with you when he is ready for petting and love. One thing we have learned here is that he does enjoy belly rubs too. He is just enchanting. When Nicky wants you, he will make it known with a big meow. Once he is getting that affection and attention, his rhythmic purr will come tumbling right out.

One thing we have learned here is that he does enjoy belly rubs too. He is just enchanting.

When Nicky arrived at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, he was accompanied by his brother, who has just been chosen for a forever home. We are hoping that Nicky will be going right on out to a loving home too! It will be best for him to be in a home where there are no dogs as that would not be a peaceful setting for him.

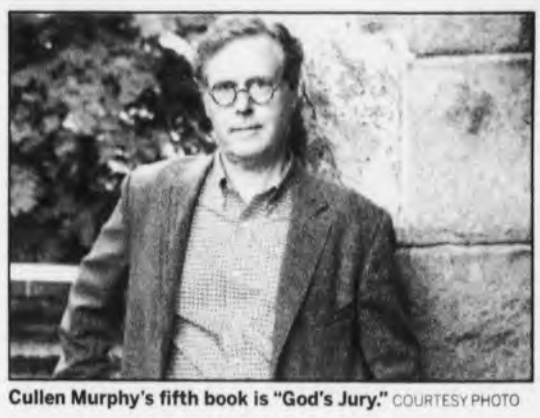
At the moment, Nicky is carrying a few extra pounds that he gained when he was waiting to come to us, but that is because he has not had regular play and activity. He is just so ready to join a family or person who can love him, entertain him and enjoy his friendship. What a great companion Nicky will be for one lucky family.

There are a few other Maine Coon and Maine Coon mix cats at the shelter and they too are just waiting for the right opportunity to have the good life in a forever home. Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Nicky and other available cats. Visit during Open Hours on Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. or Saturday from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. Our phone number is 781-925-3121. You can visit our website, www.hsar.org, to view other available pets in our shelter who are featured on Petfinder.com.

Thank you to all of the wonderful people who dropped off donations this past weekend. We have great support from so many people in Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and surrounding towns and are grateful for all of your help.

Surprisingly, kittens continue to find their way to us, even during winter months, and wet kitten food is always needed as well as dry. Your help and caring is so appreciated and we are always happy to see There are times when our kittens need fostering in loving homes and if you have the time and room to care for new babies, please contact the shelter for information and an application.

Our volunteers are our lifeline and a big thank you goes out to all who are willing to share their time and effort in helping to keep our shelter clean and healthy for the kittens and cats who live here. It is a true act of giving and your dedication and spirit are very special and so appreciated. There is always the need for more help and if you love cats and kittens, and are interested in helping HSAR, please stop by and pick up an application, or call Nancy, our volunteer coordinator, at 781-925-3638 for more information.



We are busy planning our next Gimme Shelter fundraiser so please watch for details here, on our website and on our Facebook page. If you or your business would like to help out with a raffle item or gift certificate, please contact us. All of the money from our fundraisers helps us to provide safe and comfortable accommodations for deserving pets who are waiting here for their forever homes.

SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS

The Inquisition lives on

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

His premise is that the Inquisition never really ended — it just passed on from the church into the hands of political and social institutions.

"God's Jury" is Cullen Murphy's fifth book — a smart, at times witty, and impeccably researched walk through the Inquisition and its legacies, from its official kick-off in 1231 to today. Murphy will speak about "God's Jury" at "Sunday AuthorTalks" on Feb. 10 at 4 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Although Murphy's book is a vivid and gripping history of the Inquisition, his purpose is larger than scholarly research. His premise is that the Inquisition never really ended — it just passed on from the church into the hands of political and social institutions. He examines the thinking that gave rise to phenomena such as Nazism, McCarthyism, and US Japanese internment camps, and reminds us of what well meaning, educated human beings are capable of when driven by moral certainty. Drawing several analogies between history and today, Murphy says that although the Inquisition conducted its last execution in 1826, the human impulse that sustained it for 700 years remains with us even now, and notes Guantanamo as a primary example.

For readers who love traveling through dark streets of time in Rome, Spain, and France, Murphy provides a fascinating travelogue, steeped in intrigue and chilling detail with walk-ons by a cast of unforgettable characters. He states, "The advent of the Inquisition offers a lens. Through it lies the world we inhabit now, one in which privacy and freedom of conscience are pitted against forces that would contain them."

For two decades Cullen Murphy was managing editor of The Atlantic Monthly; since 2006 he has been editor at large of Vanity Fair. He has written several best-selling books including Are We Rome?, The World According to Eve, Just Curious, and Rubbish!, and for 25 years he wrote the comic strip Prince Valiant.

A wine and cheese reception will follow Murphy's talk where his book will be available for purchase and signing. Admission is free but seating is limited. To ensure a spot, reserve a seat online at cohassetlibrary.org or phone the library at 383-1348 ext 1 or pick up a ticket at the library's circulation desk.

Note: The date for Sunday AuthorTalk's March speaker, Andrew Bacevich, has been changed from March 3 to Feb. 24.

"Sunday AuthorTalks" is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and the Cook Estate. Bruce Sinclaire, owner of A Taste for Wine and Spirits, donates the wines for post-talk receptions. For more information on authors scheduled for the remainder of the year, pick up a brochure at the library or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Senior center survey results released

The results for a community-wide survey on a potential senior center were published last month. The survey was conducted electronically by the Gerontology Institute out of UMass Boston. Each Cohasset resident over the age of 18 received a postcard in the mail with log-on instructions to complete the survey.

The survey tested residents' appetite for a possible senior center, a project that is being worked on with a partnership between the Cohasset Social Service League and Council on Elder Affairs. The Elder Affairs program lacks its own building, using a few rooms in the town Community Center. Programs are held in the center and at other locations around town, including churches.

The study asked three main questions:

- What are the demographic characteristics of Cohasset with respect to aging and the older population?
- What features and services do community members value in Cohasset, and what programs would be most valued in a senior center?
- What are the features of other communities' senior centers and their associated expenses?

According to the survey results, there is a high level of support for senior residents in Cohasset (over 20 percent of the current population is aged 60 or over). However, a large number of respondents indicated limited awareness of the Elder Affairs program and its offerings.

For more information and a detailed breakdown of the survey, see an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Friends of Holly Hill Farm events

Come to Holly Hill Farm on Friday, Feb. 8, for a nighttime walk, "Starry, Starry Night at Holly Hill Farm." Dress warmly and bring the whole family for a walk to see the night sky, hear the winter sounds and embrace the chill in the air. Meet at the main barn at 7 p.m. and stay for hot chocolate after the walk. Cost: $3 for FHHF members ($9 max per family); $5 for non-members ($15 max per family). Holly Hill Farm is at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. For more information, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org or call 781-383-6565.

Friends of Holly Hill Farm will show the documentary "Genetic Roulette" at 7 p.m., on Monday, Feb. 4, at Cohasset Public Library, 35 Ripley Road. "Genetic Roulette" presents evidence that genetically engineered foods are a major contributor to rising disease rates in the United States population, especially among children. Gastrointestinal disorders, allergies, inflammatory diseases and infertility are just some of the problems implicated in humans, pets, livestock and lab animals that eat genetically modified soybeans and corn. This sometimes-shocking film may change one's diet, help protect families and accelerate the consumer tipping point against genetically modified organisms. Admission is free but donations to support the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center at Holly Hill Farm will be gladly accepted. For more information about Holly Hill Farm, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

Registration is now open and residents are encouraged to register right away to claim a spot and secure the chance for great prizes and a great long-sleeve T-shirt. The 10K race begins at 1 p.m. at the Common. The Fran Coffey Memorial Walk, which takes place on the same day, begins at 10 a.m. at Sandy Beach parking lot. The Walk follows the road race route, however it begins and ends at the beach.

The $30 registration fee will increase to $35 on March 17th, so avoid the fee and ensure the fun. E-mail roadracebythesea@gmail.com if you're interested in sponsoring or volunteering. 100% of the net proceeds from this community event go directly to charities supported by the Rotary Club. DURANT composition used in pop music. Complex time signatures are also common, along with abrupt changes in key or tempo.

Progressive musicians like Durant also tend to construct concept albums that revolve around a theme. An early example of this in rock music is "Pet Sounds" by the Beach Boys, an album that pioneered the use of overdubbing and other musical technology. Progressive rock makes use of modern technology and led to a spin-off style called "space rock."

Albums recorded by Durant, such as "Dance of the Shadow Planets" and his newest, "Burnt Belief," seem to serve as soundtracks for future societies in outer space. It's fitting, then, that one of Durant's CDs, "Silent Extinction Beyond the Zero," has actually been to space — taken there by his close friend, NASA astronaut (and fellow Cohasset native) Steve Bowen.

The music that Durant composes, plays, and records is instrumental and sounds like it could easily serve as a sci-fi film score. The "outer space" theme is even more apparent when learning that the title of "Burnt Belief" was derived from social psychologist Leon Festinger's "When Prophecy Fails," an account of a doomsday UFO cult in the 1950s.

Collaboration

Durant collaborated with fellow musician Colin Edwin, a world-renowned bassist and guitarist who's played in the bands Porcupine Tree, Metallic Taste of Blood, and Ex-Wise Heads. Durant explained that he and Edwin both found themselves fascinated by "strange belief systems," such as doomsday cults.

"It's just mind-boggling," Durant said of these groups.

Since the study that inspired the rockers' album reviewed a cult that believed the world would end on Dec. 21, 1955, Edwin and Durant decided to time the "Burnt Belief" release date with the last purported "end of the world"— Dec. 21, 2012.

Obviously, the world did not come crashing to a halt that day, and Durant and friends are free to keep on rocking.

"Burnt Belief" blends synthesizers, 12-string acoustic guitar, electric guitar played in Durant's signature "cloud guitar" style – using effects, like reverb, that make the notes "hang" in the air – with piano and Middle Eastern hand percussion. It all makes for quite the musical journey. The musician/composer explained just how he got there.

"It goes back to when I was a young kid," he said of his early interest in progressive rock. "In 1972 I heard 'Roundabout' by Yes, when it first came out. It was one of those life-changing moments... I thought, these are my people, what I want to be. That was it."

Durant started playing guitar at age 12 and took piano lessons in high school. While he was musically talented, he had no desire to pursue a professional career in mainstream music.

"I could not do that," he said. Durant stuck to his guns and continued to go against the grain, musically speaking. "I realized it was not a good way to make a living," he said of playing progressive rock professionally. "It's not the sort of thing that sells a lot of records."

Durant earned a marketing degree and did the next best thing — worked in the music business, doing artist relations for Lexicon Music. He stayed in the business for several years before striking out on his own and starting his label, Alchemy Records, in 1997.

By then he had already recorded a few of his own albums, including his debut in 1994. Durant decided to start recording after getting requests from people who heard him playing guitar at various tradeshows and music industry events.

"I was always writing, playing and recording" on his own, Durant said. He decided to get in the studio after "a bunch of musicians I respect and admire said, 'You've got to do something.'"

Durant has collaborated with some famous friends over the years, including progressive rocker Tony Levin, bassist for Peter Gabriel and the band King Crimson, one of the earliest harbingers of progressive rock.

"Burnt Belief" is Durant's eighth record, and the first one he wrote with another musician. Sheet music litters Durant's basement studio, revealing that the he is quite the prolific composer.

Durant, born and raised in Cohasset, lives in town with his wife, April, and sons Matt, 19, and Harrison, 16. Since Matt is currently attending college in Portland, Ore., the family often splits their time between the two states. Durant recently bought a home in Portland and says that he loves spending time out there. Since he thinks his youngest son will likely go to college out there, Durant called his new home a "launching pad" for his family's future.

Portland happens to be an area where unique music, like progressive rock, is appreciated —and popular. Durant said that people often ask him if he plays gigs in the Boston area, but it's not part of his repertoire.

"There's no venue around here where this music would make sense," he explained. Progressive rock, known for 10-minute guitar solos and similar fanfare, doesn't exactly sell out large stadiums the way classic rock bands did in a departed era.

Durant gets his music out there through online downloads and exposure from like-minded radio shows. He and Edwin were recently interviewed on a program called "Echoes," a new age show that airs on stations around the country. For an instrumental progressive rock album, Durant reports that "Burnt Belief" is getting a lot of attention.

"There's a station outside Pittsburgh where we're number one," he said. The album is also sold out on Amazon.com.

"Burnt Belief" is available to purchase on other online retailers, including CD Baby and iTunes. It is not sold in brick and mortar stores, although Durant said interested folks can contact him to order a copy, or check out the social networking accounts set up for the album: search "Burnt Belief" on Facebook or follow @BurntBelief3 on Twitter.

One of the album's tracks, "Semazen," has a music video that can be viewed on YouTube. Durant, also a photographer, filmed the video himself.

What's next?

What's next for the local rocker? Gearing up to take "Burnt Belief" on the road. Durant said that he and Edwin are working with agents to put a tour together. The two have also started a new collaboration with a group of Ukrainian singers called Astarta, blending the group's folk vocals with funk guitar and bass rhythms and jazz chords.

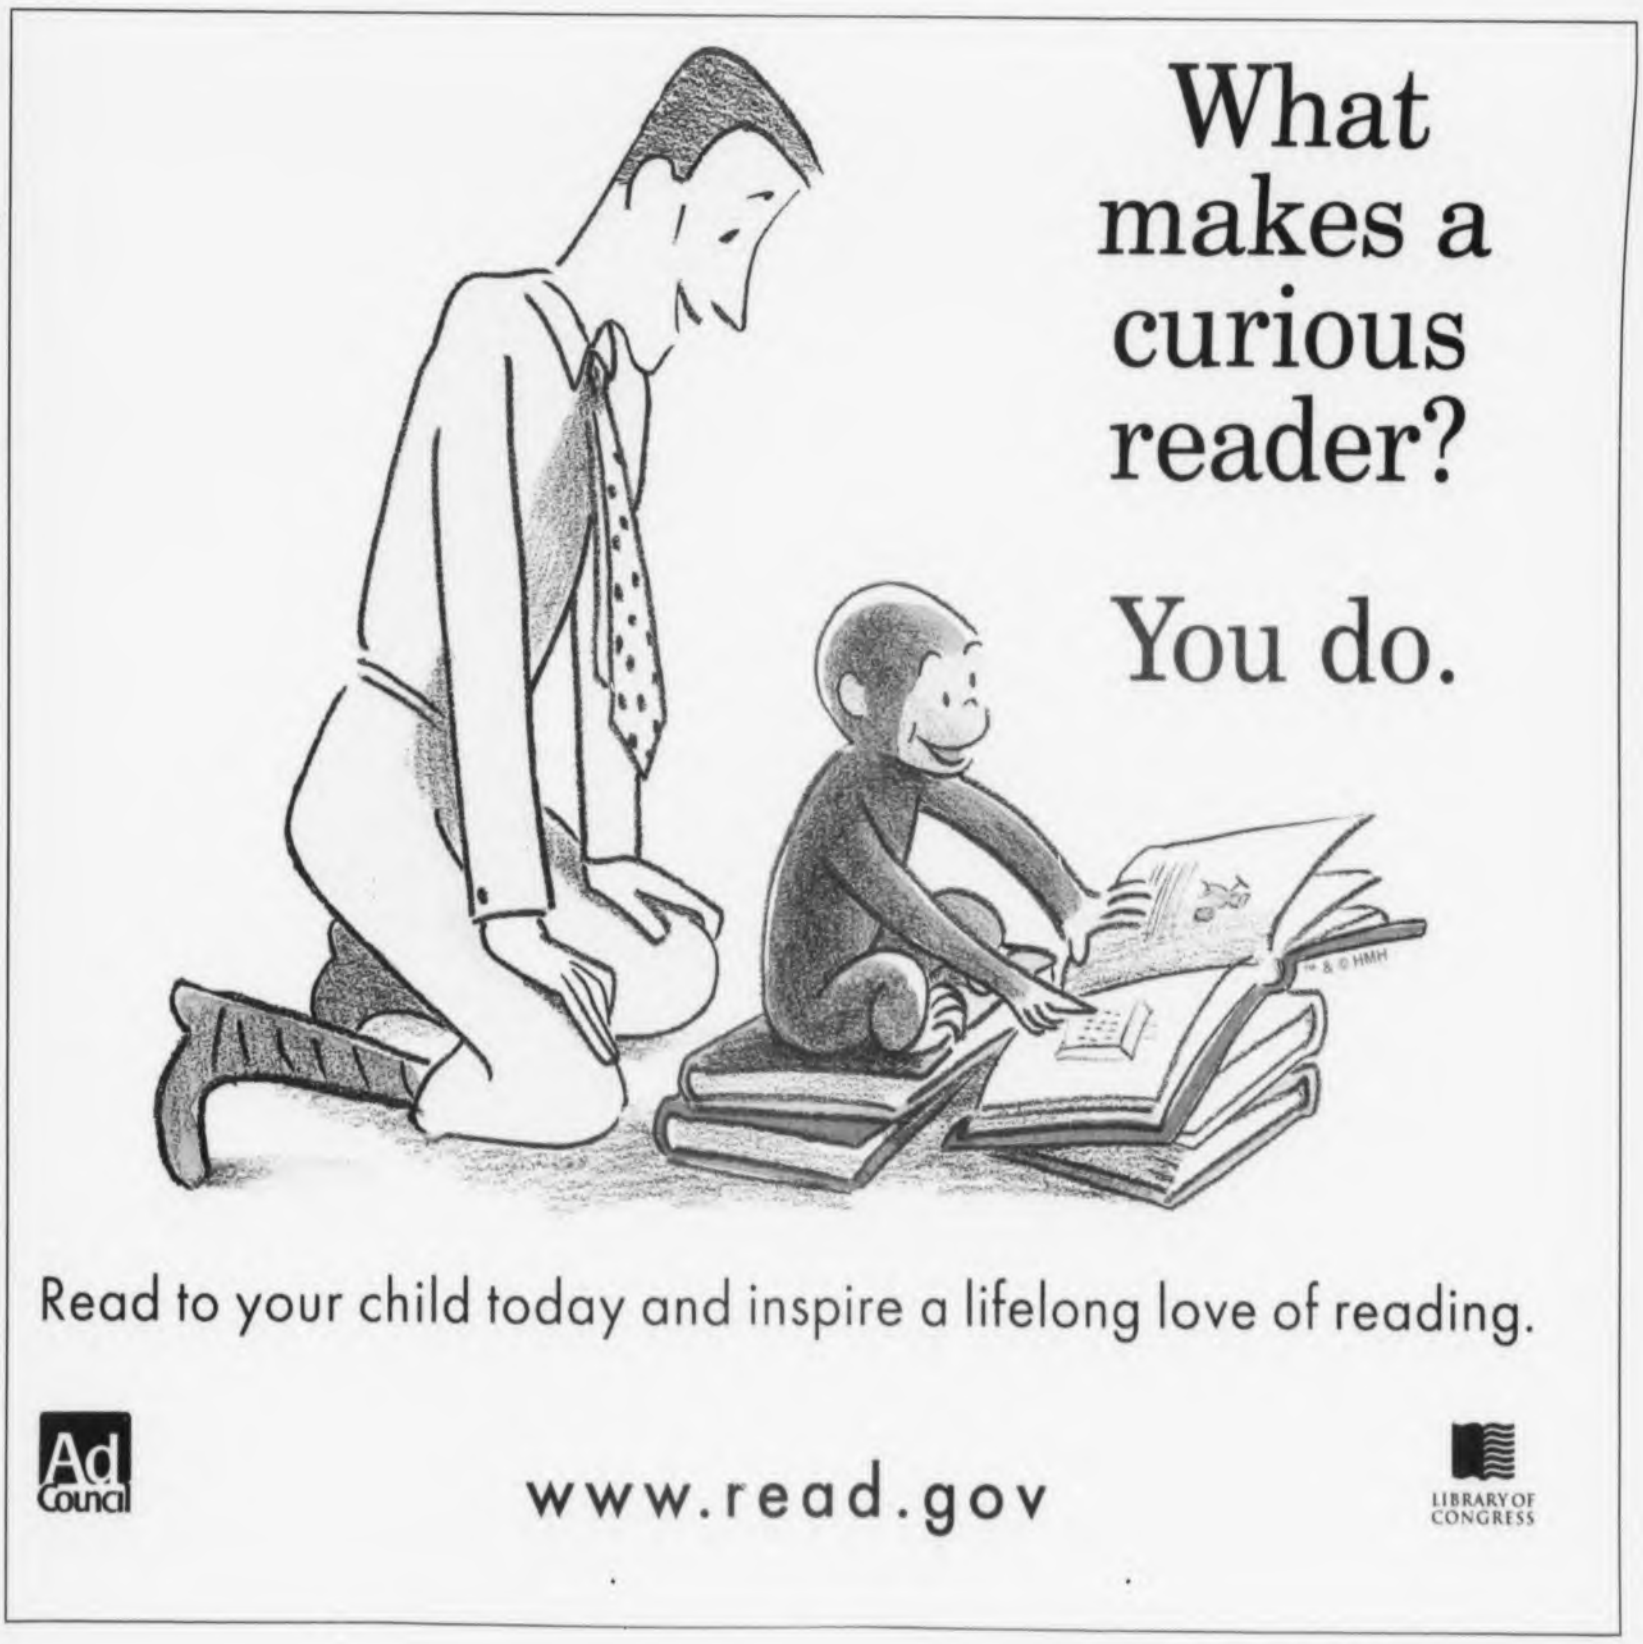
"It's a nice thing for us," Durant said of the new collaboration. "This has got a fairly wide reach [in Europe] and a couple of major labels are expressing interest."

Durant explained that while progressive and "ethnic" music is more popular overseas than in America, he believes prog rock is experiencing a resurgence with younger generations.

He said that Sigur Rós, a prog rock band from Iceland, recently sold out Boston University's Agganis Arena.

"People need to give kids more credit," Durant said of modern youths' taste in music. "The kids were loving it."

What about his two young sons? When it comes to Dad's "different" kind of music — do they dig it?



In a word: Yes. In fact, the band Yes – the same one that got Durant fired up as kid in the '70s – is his son Matt's favorite band; he also likes early Genesis, the band that launched one of Durant's favorite artists, Peter Gabriel. Durant's younger son, Harrison, is into modern prog rock, like Sigur Rós, and '70s folk artist Nick Drake. Harrison also plays music with his father.

To other young musicians, Durant has a word of advice: "Stay true to what you believe in. Don't make music with a marketing plan in mind; if you want to produce something of lasting value, stick to what you believe in."

For Durant, it's a "Belief" he lives by.

"People sometimes ask me, do you listen to your records?" he said, adding that, yes, he does. "It's music that I'm into."

The musician, composer and producer is also a photographer and took photos of fire hydrants for the "Burnt Belief" album art. For more information on Jon Durant, visit jondurant.com.

OUR VIEW

Open government

The Open Meeting Law is one of the tools that the public has to ensure transparency in town government.

The OML, which is now overseen by the Attorney General's Office, is actually pretty clear. Governmental meetings, with a few limited exceptions, should be open, and agendas should be detailed, clear and posted with enough notice.

The state Public Records Law, which is overseen by the Secretary of State's Office, is supposed to guarantee that all documents and materials, regardless of physical forms or characteristics (including emails) — that are generated or received by government — are available to the public with a few exceptions.

In the newspaper business, we are keenly aware of these two laws and have – and will likely do so in the future – filed complaints with the Attorney General on Open Meeting violations, and appeals with the Secretary of State over public records requests.

With an ethics complaint filed about releasing a document to a non-board member and an Open Meeting Law complaint about an executive session – both generated by selectmen on their own members – it is a good time to revisit these laws.

Selectmen and other boards need to be aware that virtually, by being an elected or appointed official — that includes sitting behind a big desk before meeting attendees — is in itself intimidating. Also, requesting a public record is something that many people would feel uneasy about seeking because even Town Hall can be daunting to someone who is unfamiliar with the Halls of Government.

We think it is time for another tutorial on these laws for our town officials. In the past a representative from the Norfolk Co. District Attorney's Office provided Town Hall with an excellent educational seminar on the OML that we also covered.

We want town officials to be self-regulating in these matters. That means when they are in executive session, they stick only to the matters allowed under the exemptions to the OML. If a board member veers off track – other members should call him or her out on it.

If there is a question on whether something should be public, government should always lean toward the public's right to know – not lean toward the thought that it is better to keep the matter secret, just in case.

It is also important to remember that if matters are not explained clearly, in layman's terms, and documents are not available at meetings for audience members to peruse – then that is, in our view, a clear violation of the OML. If there is no understanding, there is no openness.

As the election season approaches, we intend to quiz candidates on openness and transparency, so the public can hold them accountable going forward.

Would you vote the same way as you did in November on legalizing medical marijuana in Massachusetts?

Here is the full text of the online response options (results shown in the poll graphic represent the results so far):

- Not sure. I did not realize there would be dispensaries in our towns
- Yes, those who need medical marijuana should get it legally
- No. I reacted emotionally; the law has unintended consequences
- I did not vote on Nov. 6
- I voted no then and would do so today

Take the plunge for Special Olympics!

March Madness starts early, on Saturday, Feb. 23, this year. It's the 15th Polar Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts. Those looking for a great event to take part in, or to watch and cheer on the Plungers, this is it. There will be a costume parade at 11:15 a.m., followed by the mad dash of the 500+ plungers into the cold surf at noon at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Beach.

Last year, close to 1,000 plungers jumped into the Atlantic Ocean, about half at Nantasket. They raised $360,000 for SOMA (8 percent of the annual budget). As athletes or their families are not charged to participate, these funds are important in providing year-round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for the 13,000 athletes statewide. They range in age from 2 (Young Athletes Program) to 100 (yes, our centenarian still competes).

As athletes or their families are not charged to participate, these funds are important in providing year-round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for the 13,000 athletes statewide.

In addition to sports training and competition, these donations support Special Olympics' worldwide Healthy Athletes Program, founded in Massachusetts in 1994, providing free screening in medical and dental issues for athletes. Of 803 athletes screened in 2012, many were referred for treatment. In 2011, one was sent directly to the hospital after finding he'd recently had a heart attack (he's now alive and competing). Joint-ventures with UMass Medical School and Regis College train medical students, residents, nurses and doctors in working with people with Intellectual Disabilities, which will lead to quality healthcare for a host of others with ID in the future.

Jay Nothnagle, plunging for his 13th time, is a 15-sport athlete, and captain of the South Shore Mariners Team, which will include Cohasset plungers Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Geoff Chamberlain, Phil Faulkner, Steve Myers, Jeff Nothnagle (past board chairman), Graham, Nick and Charlotte Sida, and Doug Yeager, plus many from other South Shore towns. The funds they raise come back to the local Mariners program, which has 100 athletes from age 6 through 74 from seven area towns.

So come on down to Nantasket Beach on Feb. 23, and support the athletes with a pledge. People can do this with a check to their favorite plunger (payable to Special Olympics), or online at www.SpecialOlympics-MA.org/sponsorPlunger, a secure site. Those who are interested in taking part in the plunge can register at that same site.

COMMENTARY

Massachusetts is making history. Again.

ELISA CASTIGLIONI

Rep. David Linskey filed a bill aimed to close loopholes in the existing state laws, requiring mental health background checks. He is pictured here (wearing the camel coat in the background at right) during Saturday's gun control rally. PHOTO/STEFANO SALIMBENI

Present at the rally were quite a few families from Cohasset, Hingham, and Scituate who came despite the freezing weather. As they said, "There is nothing more important than taking action to protect our children."

Did you know that the Boston State House and the Congress are flooded with letters and emails from the gun lobby demanding no control on weapons and yelling no background check? Did yon know that the most requested weapon at gun shows is the one used on 12.14.2012 to kill the Newtown angels?

That is what Representative David Linsky said to the crowd of hundreds of moms, dads, grandparents, and kids from the Greater Boston Area who gathered in front of the State House on Jan. 26 during the rally organized by One Million Moms for Gun Control.

Rep. Linsky filed a bill aimed to close loopholes in the existing state laws, requiring mental health background checks. Yet as he said, he needs our help to make it happen. He needs us, The People, to write to our elected officials demanding gun control. "Write every other day." He said, as the gun lobby is very, very loud.

Mayor Menino, the co-chair of the national group Mayors Against Illegal Guns and a supporter of One million Moms for Gun Control, sent an official statement to be read at the rally. "Every day in America, 33 people are murdered with guns. In 2012, Boston police took 500 illegal guns off the streets and out of our neighborhoods. Sixty percent of the crime guns used in our city come from other states. We need to demand a federal solution to this problem. In Massachusetts, we are fortunate to have strong leadership in Washington. Just this week, I recognized every single member of our Massachusetts federal delegation for signing onto HR 137. This legislation requires background checks for every gun sale in America. Last year, more than 6.6 million guns were sold without a background check. This private sale loophole is dangerous, irresponsible, and we see the consequences of gun violence in our neighborhoods.

He invited us to, "Call your aunt in Florida; call your college roommate in Texas; call your old neighbor who moved to Vermont. Tell them we need them to stand with us and demand a plan from their members of Congress. As an elected official, I can tell you firsthand, that those calls from constituents matter."

Congressman Ed Markey reminded us that all the great American revolutions from the Independence to the Civil Rights Movement started here in Massachusetts. "Let's make history, again!"

"Every three days a classroom is gunned down." John Roselnthal said. "Shame on us, if we let this happen again." He is the charismatic founder of Stop Handgun Violence, a non-profit organization committed to the prevention of gun violence through education, public awareness, effective law enforcement.

The citizens heard three heart-breaking personal stories of gun violence and a poem written in memory of the Sandy Hook Angels. The speakers and the organizers asked them to write to five friends and get them involved in demanding gun control. (But why just five and not 26 like the Sandy Hook angels or 33 like the number of Americans killed everyday with guns?)

Present at the rally were quite a few families from Cohasset, Hingham, and Scituate who came despite the freezing weather. As they said, "There is nothing more important than taking action to protect our children."

No more Sandy Hook. No more Columbine. No more Aurora. No more child murdered on his way to the church. No more empty desks. The crowd asked with frozen tears in their eyes. Today is the day, they chanted.

Email, call, or write your State Representative and State Senator and ask them to support Representative Linsky's Bill, House Docket 2678, An Act to Reduce Gun Violence and Protect the Citizens of the Commonwealth*. Visit www.wheredoivotema.com to easily retrieve the contact information for your State Representatives and State Senators.

Let's lead the next revolution and make this country the land of free. Free from violence and self-inflicted pain.

A teacher from Connecticut, who was marching in Washington DC during the Silent March held on the very same day, posted a signboard on Facebook saying that the only arms that she wants to use in her classroom are the ones she uses to hug her students.

Hug your children and then get writing. Our words will make this place a better world. It will be our legacy.

By Elisa Castiglioni

12.14.2012

Twenty empty houses. Empty and silent as only a house orphan of its children can be. (Have you ever heard the utter silence of a house suddenly without its children? Maybe they had gone outside to play in the yard. We take a breath and relax. Not the house. It is in pain. Its silence yells solitude. It creaks and squeaks. It's asking us: "Where did they go? I miss their little, fast, warm feet that were tickling my floor. I miss their shrill voices that were scratching my walls.")

Today is the day.

Twenty empty backpacks.

No more crumbs, leaves, or little treasures stored in them. (To find certain precious treasures you must be no older than seven years old. At this age you are blind to the rest of the world.)

Today is the day.

Twenty empty mothers. Twenty empty fathers, as only a parent orphan of his child can be. (Widow, orphan. There is no term to define the status of a parent who lost her child. There is no word to express such pain. Not even in the dictionary.)

Today is the day.

Today the gun shops and gun shows of America are packed with people buying weapons.

Today, when the dumpsters of America should have been packed with assault weapons tossed in disgust by mothers, fathers, brothers, and sisters. By neighbors. By everyone. By you.

Today is the day.

When you are a child, you decide very little of your life. What to wear, what to eat, where to go is decided for you by your parents.

But you have your future.

That is all yours.

When you grow up, you will be free to eat pizza every night.

You will be free to watch tv until your eyeballs fall on the floor.

You will be free to ride your bike everyday.

When you grow up, you will be free to become a ballerina, a doctor, a sailor, a taco factory manager, a pilot, a mom. A teacher.

You will be free to choose.

Twenty children had no choice. They work as angels.

Today is the day.

I am ready to march!

LBJ and a few other things

To be completely honest with you, I didn't realize there even was an upcoming election for Selectman, but there is and it's on May 11.

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Well here I am, a few months into this thing and overall, I'd have to say it's going pretty well – at least I think so. When I first started, I was told to expect a few emails after each article and sure enough that's been the case. Virtually all of the notes have been quite positive and while not official, it appears that Cohasset has many more Mary Ann fans than Ginger fans.

The biggest surprise has come over the past few weeks; numerous people have asked me if I was planning on running for Selectman. Apparently there is the perception that a few articles in the Mariner are a stepping stone to Town Hall. I have to admit I was stunned when I was first asked, but by the fourth time, I was both flattered and a bit amused.

To be completely honest with you, I didn't realize there even was an upcoming election for Selectman, but there is and it's on May 11. It also appears that in order to run, a candidate must submit papers between Feb. 19 and March 29 (looking smart thanks to the Cohasset Mariner online archives).

But back to the question of whether or not I am running for Selectman. To paraphrase former President Lyndon Baines Johnson, "I shall not seek, and I will not accept, the nomination for Selectman." Honestly, I barely have the attention span to sit through dinner, never mind sitting through the intricacies of a Selectman's meeting. Combine that with the workload at the office and the bottom line is I have no intention of trading in my "view from the porch" for a "view from Town Hall."

The inquiries got me thinking though, what qualities would I be looking for in a candidate. An interesting question, but before I ponder this, I must tip my hat to those who have both the patience and the ability to tackle the intricacies that goes with the job.

I think the ideal candidate should be a fresh face to the election process, someone without a train car of baggage or preconceived notions. Someone who is most likely actively involved in other parts of our community whether it be the CEF, PSO, sports or other activities. This person realizes that they could apply their skills to help the entire community and has the desire to do so.

My ideal candidate has a family in the school system and wants to be part of the community for years to come. This person should strongly value and respect the incredible job the town employees do – from Town Hall, to the DPW, to the schools, to our civil protectors, they all deserve a Selectman who has their backs.

Ideally, this candidate would not require legal counsel at meetings nor waste time arguing back and forth on the blogosphere. This person won't want to haggle about the past, rather this person will understand that in order to better the town for all generations, it's vital to look forward and be able to envision the big picture.

Finally, my ideal candidate is intelligent, personable, patient and will inspire people to go to the polls and vote. While not an easy endeavor, I believe Cohasset has a large group of qualified citizens who would be outstanding candidates and I'm eager to support their run. As I mentioned in my first article, the town will only benefit from hearing more from the Silent Majority.

Now, on to a few other thoughts:

Thank you Elisa Castiglioni; your commentary last week inspired my family to go in to Boston last weekend and show our support for the families of Newtown. We learned that it's vital for all of us to take three minutes and call Representative Lynch 617-428-2000 and tell his office we want him to support efforts for reasonable gun control.

Groundhog's Day is Saturday; it's one of my wife's favorite holidays as it remains relativity uncorrupted by Hallmark and the candy industry. It's also a great excuse to mention Ned Ryerson – rise and shine campers.

To close, a warm Happy Birthday to my daughter, Tyler, who turned 10 on Wednesday. It hit me that I no longer have a child that's still in single digits. I have to admit, the thought has left me a tad verklempt.

Thanks for reading and let's hope the Groundhog doesn't see its shadow.

FOR THE RECORD

We're looking for followers

Twitter's relevance also surfaced during Superstorm Sandy, even though the impact was less dramatic in our region than areas of New York and New Jersey.

GREGORY MATHIS

I sent my first "tweets" back in August 2010.

I remember signing up for a Twitter account and coming up with a less than creative handle, @gregorymathis. It was several days later before I sent out those first tweets as I was still trying to figure out what to say and how to say it. Twitter has its own language.

It's taken awhile for me to understand what Twitter is all about. It wasn't apparent to me how this was supposed to work as a social media. It didn't feel very social and there didn't seem to be much interaction. I'd type less than 140 characters and send it out into a black hole.

Who was out there following me? Did anyone care what I had to say through my tweets?

I spent much of 2011 following others and trying to get a sense of how others were using Twitter, then as our company became more active in the Twitter-sphere, we started to use it more to promote our online content.

We still use it to get our followers to click on a link that redirects them back to the website, but there's much more to Twitter than that.

It's amazing what can be said in 140 characters.

The power of Twitter became evident to me during the 2012 presidential race, from the debates to Election Day. As Governor Romney and President Obama waged a war of words during their televised debates, credible news sources were reacting in real time on Twitter either verifying what the candidate was saying was true, pointing out the misleading statements or the outright lies. The instant fact checking added a new dimension to the process.

Twitter's relevance also surfaced during Superstorm Sandy, even though the impact was less dramatic in our region than areas of New York and New Jersey.

But local police/fire/emergency management agencies, MEMA, Gov. Patrick's office, Mass DOT, and others were tweeting everything from trees and wires being down, roads closed due to flooding or aforementioned trees and wires, the number of people without power at any given time, school closings and other closings around town. It was helpful getting the information directly from the sources as it was happening. The chances of ever getting someone on the phone during a weather event for that type of information is highly unlikely even under the best of circumstances. It allowed us to keep our readers updated throughout the storm with real-time information.

As I mentioned in my last column, Twitter is now a requirement for our newsrooms. We have accounts associated with our newspapers, and our reporters will have their own professional accounts. Most of those accounts have been set up and we're looking for people to follow them.

We'll continue to use Twitter to share our stories. But we'll also use it to seek out information and gather information. We'll be following people, organizations and town departments to help us stay in touch with what's going on in the community. We'll be asking our followers for story ideas and sources and we'll interact and try to keep discussions going on various hashtag trends.

Now we just need you to start following.

Crunching numbers: Audit, budget reports

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The town hired a new auditing firm, Powers and Sullivan, last spring; the firm recently completed its audit of the fiscal year ending on June 30, 2012.

Audits and budgets were major discussion topics at board meetings this week, including the Board of Selectmen, School Committee and Budget Planning Group. An auditors' report has informed the town's budget processes, enabling employees and officials to better forecast for the future.

According to the audit, it appears Cohasset finances are in good shape. However, BPG and SC members hashed out a plan to deal with a huge outstanding liability the town has to fund municipal employees' Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB), a nationwide problem that all cities and towns are forced to tackle.

These and other budgetary concerns, including legal costs and public safety overtime, were discussed in detail at meetings this week.

Audit

While the phrase "You're being audited" can be a nerve-wracking one, it seems that the town of Cohasset fared well during its audit of Fiscal Year 2012.

The town hired a new auditing firm, Powers and Sullivan, last spring; the firm recently completed its audit of the fiscal year ending on June 30, 2012. The firm completed the town's first-ever Comprehensive Annual Financial Report (CAFR), which "provides a clear picture of [Cohasset's] government as a single, unified entity, while retaining certain traditional financial information previously provided."

The state Department of Revenue (DOR) is also in the midst of conducting a Management Review, the findings of which will be reported sometime in February.

James Powers, CPA and partner at Powers and Sullivan, had a positive message to share with officials during the audit presentation at Tuesday's Selectmen meeting. He reported that his firm has given the town of Cohasset the highest rating possible for an audit: an unqualified opinion, which means that the auditor has no reservations against the entity it reviewed, and that the entity's financial reports give an accurate snapshot of the town's actual financial condition.

Powers also praised the finance department employees for their hard work, and experienced "great cooperation overall" with Town Hall staff. In being able to prepare a CAFR, Powers said of Cohasset's finances, "I think you're in good shape right now."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said it was important for the town to gain the auditor's seal of approval.

"The level of confidence has been restored" in the town's financial state, Milanoski explained. The auditor also "believes the current finance team has the skills" they need to do a stellar job.

The audit also highlighted material deficiencies in the past that the town needed to fix, including the revelation that past members of the finance team made transactions to cover illegal deficits year after year.

Another deficiency was in the finance department itself, which has had a high turnover in personnel over the last few years (Finance Director Mary Gallagher was hired last winter while Treasurer/Collector Jane Lepardo started in the summer). The audit revealed that in the past, the department lacked staff members and management with the proper training to do their jobs.

Milanoski explained, "Some of the members of the finance team didn't have the level of competency to fulfill their assigned functions. It's partly the town's fault for not investing in personnel and infrastructure to help them. We had antiquated software systems and computers; these are all standard management items that should have been included years ago, a decade ago, and they weren't there. The structure was set up to fail, and it failed."

There were also problems with the Water and Sewer Enterprise Funds concerning illegal deficits that were being covered up by transactions in the finance office. These findings were also detailed in finance consultant Eric Kinsherf's report on the closeout of the Little Harbor sewer project last year.

"We were not getting accurate accountability of where the projects were," said Milanoski. "No one was assigned to projects. From the town side, who was responsible for paying the bills?"

While fingers have been pointed in the past, the town manager said, "It's not appropriate to blame the water or sewer departments for these issues; a majority of the issues were on the town side back then."

These past issues should no longer be a problem down the road, said Milanoski. "These sweeping changes to the financial operations of water and sewer have already begun. They've mitigated the deficiencies so they're not going to happen again."

Powers and Sullivan has deemed the current finance department more than capable, but that doesn't mean that the firm doesn't have some recommendations for the future. Basically, it's up to Town Hall to reorganize and restructure to function in the most effective, efficient manner.

"One of the highlights that came out of the audit is the recommendation that duties and responsibilities of all positions currently assigned need to be aligned and reevaluated," said the acting town manager, who has already pitched a reorganization plan to the selectmen and Advisory Committee in recent meetings.

This will eventually lead to some title changes and possible step increases for current town employees. However, so far Milanoski has only asked for one new headcount: an assistant treasurer-collector. While Advisory and Budget Planning Group chair Peter Pescatore expressed concern during Tuesday's selectmen meeting at the thought of a new staffer, Lepardo made a compelling case for why she needs a qualified person to sign off on payroll and warrants, and complete other duties only the Treasurer-Collector can do, in the event that she is unable to come to work.

"What is done in the office by one person right now – getting payroll in and processed, health insurance, benefits fairs – in a tiny office with no privacy... It's very difficult," said Lepardo, who added that she works "non-stop" all day and does not take a lunch break. "I'm working continuously... We need more staff."

The new position would be part-time, and Pescatore agreed that it is a necessary addition for the department.

"You should have somebody qualified to step into your shoes when you're not there," said Pescatore. "It's a necessary evil."

FY 14 budget

The auditor's findings naturally segued into a discussion on the town's current FY 2013 budget, and looking forward to FY 14.

Milanoski explained that the audit focused on the past while giving suggestions for the future.

"They talked about our past— it was a mess," the town manager said of the auditor's report. "We're coming out of the mess; we're fixing things, and they have confidence. Compared to being 20,000 leagues under the sea, we're now above the water."

The budget plan includes policies and procedures and a vision of restructuring town departments "to better provide the services our taxpayers demand in a transparent and efficient way," said Milanoksi.

The FY 14 budget "meets all our financial management polices that were adopted by the town [Annual Town Meeting 2012] that have become our roadmap for doing our budgets," the town manager explained.

Volume 39 - Report No. 4 January 21-25, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on eight roll calls and local senators on four roll calls from the week of January 21-25.

All roll calls were on proposed changes in the rules of the Legislature. Most of the proposals were offered by Republicans who in most cases voted for the new rules while Democrats opposed them.

	Hedlund	Bradley
PUT JOINT COMMITTEE ROLL CALLS ON WEBSITE (H 2015) House 29-126, rejected a rule that would require joint committee votes cast by legislators on bills heard by their committees to be posted on the Legislature's website. Current rules require these committee votes to be kept at the Statehouse in the offices of the committee and be available for public inspection upon reasonable notice and during regular office hours. Supporters of the new rule said this would simply give people quick and easy access to the committee votes of their legislators. They noted that under current rules, a person has to drive to Boston during business hours in order to obtain this information. They said requiring a trip of perhaps hundreds of miles is ridiculous and archaic. Opponents offered no arguments. In the past, opponents have said the idea is a good one but the website is not yet ready technologically to implement this system. Others have said the posting would be confusing. Some have argued that the current process of allowing a person to come to the Statehouse to get these roll calls is sufficient and has worked well for years. (A "Yes" vote is for posting the roll calls on the website. A "No" vote is against posting.)	*	N
REQUIRE TWO-THIRDS VOTE TO APPROVE TAX HIKES (H 2013) House 29-124, rejected a rule that would prohibit a tax hike from taking effect unless it is approved on a roll call vote by two-thirds of the members of the House. Current rules require only a majority vote. Supporters of the new rule said that the higher threshold would protect the interests of taxpayers and ensure that a tax hike is absolutely necessary and has broad support. Opponents of the new rule said that it is difficult to get a two-thirds majority to support a tax hike and argued that the requirement should not be any higher for a tax hike than for any other legislation. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring a two-thirds vote for a tax hike. A "No" vote is against the requirement.)	*	N
RAINY DAY FUND (H 2015) House 29-126, rejected a rule that would require a two-thirds instead of a majority vote of the Legislature in order to spend money from the state's Rainy Day Fund. The fund is a stabilization fund established by the Legislature to ensure that money is put aside in case of an economic downturn. The money can only be spent to make up for revenue shortfalls or federal funding reductions and when events threaten the health, safety or welfare of citizens. Supporters of the new rule said that the two-thirds requirement would ensure that the money is used only when absolutely necessary. They noted that the higher hurdle would make it difficult to raid the fund unless there is a real emergency and overwhelming legislative support. Opponents said that a two-thirds requirement is too strict and nearly impossible to obtain. They noted that it only takes a majority vote to place money into the fund and argued that it should take the same vote to spend it. (A "Yes" vote is for the two-thirds requirement. A "No" vote is against the two-thirds requirement.)	*	N
CONFERENCE COMMITTEES (H 2015) House 29-125, rejected a rule requiring that a conference committee report be available to the public by 1 p.m. the day before it is considered by the Legislature. Current rules require it to be available at 8 p.m. the night before a session. A conference committee drafts a compromise version of legislation when the House and Senate approve different versions of bills, including the state budget. Supporters of the new rule said it will ensure that legislators have an opportunity to read and understand the multi-billion dollar state budget and other conference committee bills prior to being asked to blindly vote on them. Amendment opponents said the current rule is sufficient. (A "Yes" vote is for the 1 p.m. deadline. A "No" vote is against it.)	*	N
ALLOW USE OF CELL PHONES IN HOUSE CHAMBER (H 2013) House 29-126, rejected a rule that would allow members to use their cell phones in the House chamber as long as they use them in a "quiet and courteous fashion." Current House rules prohibit the use of any cell phones. Supporters of the new rule said that cell phones are no longer a novelty but are an integral part of communicating. They noted cell phones are now also used to send silent e-mails and texts and find information on the Internet. Opponents said the ringing of cell phones and the ensuing conversations ruin the decorum of the chamber. (A "Yes" vote is for allowing cell phones. A "No" vote is against allowing them.)	*	N
SPEAKER ONLY VOTES IN A TIE (H 2013) House 22-131, rejected a rule that would prohibit the speaker of the House from voting on a roll call except in the case of a tie. Current rules allow the speaker to vote on all roll calls. Supporters of the new rule argued that members often rush into the chamber to vote, sometimes without having heard the debate. They argued that some of these members simply look at the roll call board and vote the same way the speaker does. Opponents offered no arguments. (A "Yes" vote is for allowing the speaker to vote only on tie votes. A "No" vote is against it.)	*	N
EQUAL REPRESENTATION ON ETHICS COMMITTEE (H 2013) House 29-126, rejected a rule that would change the current 11-member Ethics Committee to an eight-member one that would include four Democrats and four Republicans. Current rules provide for seven Democrats and only four Republicans on the 11-member committee. Supporters of the new rule said a balanced membership, regardless of which party controls the House, would create a truly bipartisan committee and ensure that investigations into any representative's or employee's conduct are fair and nonpartisan. They noted that the U.S. Congress' Ethics Committee has an equal number of members from both parties. Opponents said no one has challenged the fairness or integrity of the current Ethics Committee with its Democratic majority. They noted it is illogical to have an equal number of members from each party on the committee when the makeup of the House membership is 129 Democrats and 29 Republicans. (A "Yes" vote is for the rule requiring that the Ethics Committee include an equal number of Democrats and Republicans. A "No" vote is against it.)	*	N
ADOPT LOCAL AID RESOLUTIONS BY MARCH 15 (H 2015) House 29-126, rejected a rule that would require the House and Senate to annually adopt by March 15 resolutions stating the minimum amount of local aid the state will give each city and town for that fiscal year. Supporters of the new rule said many towns craft their budgets at town meetings in March and April and need to know as soon as possible how much they will receive from the state. They argued it is unfair and irresponsible to expect communities to assemble their budgets without this information. Amendment opponents said the Legislature should inform cities and towns as soon as possible but should not have its hands tied by some arbitrary date. They noted things often change in a matter of days and argued that the Legislature does not know in March what the state's financial situation will be when a budget is finally approved in May or June. (A "Yes" vote is for the March deadline. A "No" vote is against it.)	*	N
SESSIONS BEYOND MIDNIGHT (S 7) Senate 4-35, rejected a rule requiring a unanimous vote in order for any Senate session to continue beyond midnight. Current law requires a two-thirds vote to go past midnight. Amendment supporters said requiring unanimous consent will virtually put an end to post-midnight sessions and argued it is unnecessary and irresponsible to work while legislators are exhausted and taxpayers are asleep. Amendment opponents said the amendment is undemocratic and will allow one legislator to end Senate debate and action. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring a unanimous vote to continue beyond midnight. A "No" vote is against it.)	Y	*
PROHIBIT "PAIRED VOTES" (S 7) Senate 4-35, rejected a rule that would ban, except when the senator is absent because of military service or a physical incapacity, the current Senate practice of "pairing votes." This pairing process allows an absent senator to express how he or she would have voted on a roll call. Under the arrangement, the absent senator contacts a senator who is present and plans to vote the opposite way. The present senator agrees to "pair" his or her vote with the vote of the absent senator. Neither vote is counted in the official total—they cancel each other out. Supporters of the new rule said this process allows both senators to be unofficially recorded on the roll call. Opponents said it is illogical and misleading to have a member "recorded" on a vote if he or she was not in the chamber. They also noted it confuses the public which often thinks both senators were present. (A "Yes" vote is for banning paired votes. A "No" vote is against the ban.)	Y	*
7 DAYS NOTICE FOR TAX HIKE LEGISLATION (S 7) Senate 4-35, rejected a rule requiring that any measure that proposes an increase in taxes be available in print and posted on the Senate website at least seven days prior to consideration. Supporters of the new rule said that legislators and taxpayers should have at least a week to read and understand all proposed tax hikes. Opponents said current rules already provide procedures, including a motion to postpone, to delay consideration of a tax hike for many days. (A "Yes" vote is for seven days notice. A "No" vote is against it.)	Y	*
SENATE ROLL CALLS ON WEBSITE WITHIN TWO DAYS (S 7) Senate 39-0, approved a rule requiring the Senate Clerk by May 1, 2013 to post the results, including the bill title and number, of all roll call votes "in a manner easily identifiable, searchable and conspicuously located" no longer than two days after the vote is taken. Supporters said citizens should have quick and easy access to this information on how their senators vote. (A "Yes" vote is for the rule.)	Y	*

This budget has no reduction in services and includes increases for the Veterans' Service Officer position and additional full-time staff for the Council on Aging as the group looks forward to a new senior center building, expected to be completed by 2015. There is also additional funding for the facilities departments, which Milanoski said has been under-funded in the past.

Also included in the FY 14 budget: adding more money to town stabilization funds, including the trust fund to deal with the unfunded OPEB liability. It also includes funds for the Chief Technology Officer position created last year and shared with the schools at a cost of $150,000.

This year vs. last year

At just over $10 million, the town's FY 14 budget is a 1.7 percent increase from FY 13. The school's budget is around $16.2 million.

Milanoski said that everything in the budget is being funded using available resources; after a spending freeze was enacted last spring, shortly after Milanoski was appointed as acting town manager, the town ended FY 12 around $30,000 in the black.

The town manager reported that there is no need for a freeze this year. The town sold a tax title property on Jerusalem Road over the summer for $240,000 and had $900,000 in Free Cash certified by the DOR in the fall. These funds were not available in FY 12; the Free Cash was supposed to be divvied up at the Dec. Special Town Meeting, but an error in the warrant article dealing with the free cash caused the article to be indefinitely postponed to the spring Annual Town Meeting (April 22).

The good news is, the town is on budget and not running a deficit this year.

"We are living within our budget," said Milanoski.

However, the town manager does have a few concerns, including high legal costs due to personnel issues and investigation (including the removal of former town manager Michael Coughlin, who is suing the town for reinstatement, and an investigation into former Police Chief Mark DeLuca, who was suspended with pay in May and whose employment contract ended only last week).

Another concern is overtime in the public safety departments. Milanoski said that despite issues that are beyond the chiefs' control, such as lack of staff, the overtime issue is being handled well.

"On the police side, it's significantly lower under new leadership," said Milanoski, crediting Deputy Police Chief William Quigley.

Budget Planning, Schools

The School Committee and Budget Planning Group held a joint meeting Wednesday during which OPEB was the chief topic of concern. Also discussed was the five-year budget forecast.

The SC was asked to crunch some numbers and work on lowering the amount the schools are currently asking for; however, the numbers shared so far are preliminary. The school department will hold a public hearing and vote next year's budget in March.

For more on this issue, see an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Kids aged five and up were invited to attend a Star Wars Symposium at the Paul Pratt Library on Saturday, Jan. 26.

The program gave kids the chance to learn about the history of Star Wars, play video games, and compete in Star Wars trivia. There was also, of course, a costume contest: kids came dressed as Jedis, Stormtroopers, Ewoks, Wookies and more.

Hosted by Scituate Teen Librarian Peter Struzziero, the event functions as a way to draw kids to local libraries while having fun with the sci-fi series. Star Wars fan Struzziero has reportedly held over 50 of these symposiums all over the state in the past two years.

Huge strides for icewomen

Skipping Indians a different team from recent beginnings

The Hanover Mariner

The combined girls high school hockey team from Cohasset and Hanover has come a long way in three short years. After starting three years ago as a junior varsity team, and playing only eight games that year, this year's version of the Skipping Indians is almost unrecognizable from that team.

Despite only losing two players to graduation, this year's varsity team has a lot of familiar faces but is playing at a much higher level.

The team, coached by Deb Beal, and assisted by Ted Coyle, has a league (SEMGL East) record of 3-5-1, and overall is 3-7-3, good for sixth-place in both. They lost three games by one goal and have been competitive in all. This past week they played two games against Scituate, losing the first 4-2, then coming back to take a 3-1 win. The loss had one bright spot when freshman Sam Taylor netted her first goal of the season, on a wrist shot to the upper corner.

The win featured some outstanding play from all the girls.

Meghan Kearney started the scoring putting the girls up. After Scituate scored, Olivia Arnold tallied the game winner (her second of the season) and Erin Smith

Defensive gem

Skippers defense clamps down on Norwell

The Cohasset Mariner

Heading into the fourth quarter of Friday night's home tilt against South Shore League rival Norwell, things weren't looking to good for the Cohasset boys basketball team.

Entering the final frame, Cohasset trailed 42-34 to the same Norwell squad that had beaten the Skippers by 10 points earlier in the season.

Then Cohasset turned up the defensive pressure and the Skippers made it count on the offensive end on the way to a 53-45 Cohasset victory.

With the band playing, the crowd amped up for the game and the team riding a seven-game win-streak, including a big win over Carver, this was a huge game for Cohasset, especially with Rockland on the docket tonight.

Rockland currently has a one-game lead in the South Shore League and beat the Skippers earlier in the season.

The Bulldogs are led by senior Tyler Gibson, a UMass Lowell commit, and are coming off a 67-53 win over Abington.

For the Skippers, the game turned in the fourth quarter when they rallied to a 19-3 run in the fourth quarter.

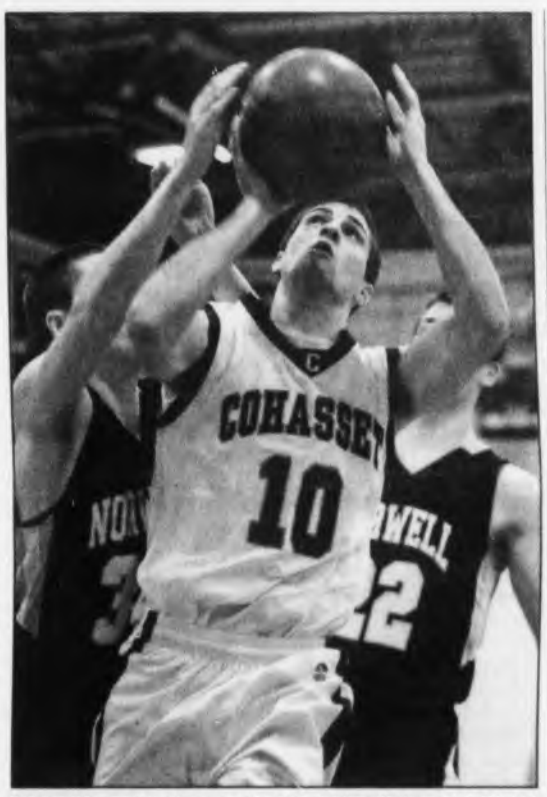
Norwell took control early when they made six three-pointers in the first quarter.

The Skippes kept poised and continued pressure that finally allowed Cohasset to overcome Norwell with the big run.

Cohasset's balanced attack started with 14 points from Jr. Rocco Laugelle, 13 points from senior captain Shane Haggerty, and 10 points from senior captain Christian Davis.

Junior Joe Buckley led the team in the third quarter with 6 points.

The Skippers relentless press in the fourth quarter kept Norwell's shooting to a minimum.



Sophmore Patrick Federle came off the bench in the fourth quarter scoring two big buckets in the run.

Davis and Laugelle closed the scoring going 3-for-3 from the free throw line after the Skippers tremendous defense shut down Norwell on their last three ball possessions.

"Great comeback by the guys," Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero said. "The press finally took its tool on Norwell in the fourth period and our guys just stayed tough mentally and survived the barrage of Norwell's 3 pointers in the first half.

"Key baskets at key times with great floor game by everyone. Only eight

Depleted, but not down

Injury plagued Cohasset/Norwell making most of it

By Ryan Wood

Injuries can take a toll on any team, but when they hit a team that has about a dozen or so athletes, it takes an even greater toll. In its most recent action, the combined Cohasset/Norwell gymnastics team, hit hard by injuries, lost 128.8-118.45 to Marshfield.

The Rams, which have an 8-2 record and only one loss in the Cranberry League, swept the meet, but Cohasset/Norwell competed as best it could despite its depleted lineup.

"It has been unfortunate for us again," Co-Head Coach Ruthann Ardizzoni said. "Freshman Livie Rober is out for the remainder of the season, (and) Cohasset's Elizabeth Coletta (is) still out with a mild concussion. It has been really frustrating, like a roller coaster ride with ups and downs."

In addition to those two gymnasts, junior Christina Tedeschi was out with illness, and freshman Julia Richardson is also sidelined. So, instead of the group of 12, Cohasset/Norwell competed against Marshfield with just eight kids.

Following tradition

Small group of grapplers furthers tradition of excellence

For a small team, the Cohasset wrestling team has done pretty well for itself.

After Wednesday night's 47-23 dual meet win against Carver, the Skippers had a 16-10 record behind some outstanding individual performances.

Leading the way has been sophomore Matt Froio with a 27-4 record at 170.

"He's been very consistent," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "He's done a good job of getting on his feet from the neutral position. He works hard at that. It sets him apart. He's a very good athlete from the neutral position."

Not far behind in the win column is senior captain Greg Berube.

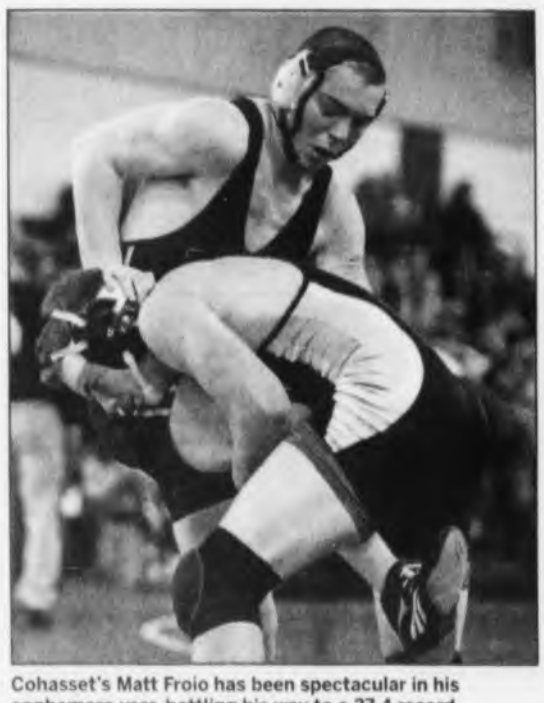
Berube has a 20-8 record including tournaments.

"He's knocked off some good wrestlers," Sweeney said. "Greg should be one of the top seeds at sectionals."

Senior captain Mike Livingstone has done well in a couple of spots, building an 18-10 record along the way.

"Mike will probably be one of the top seeds at 182 – 190," Sweeney said. "He's been up and down (weight classes). He prefers 195 pounders. He's more athletic than most at that weight."

Livingstone generally weighs in at 182.



Senior Zach Washak, has done well with a 10-12 record wrestling at 285.

"Zach has won some big matches for us recently," Sweeney said. "Two weeks ago he pinned a kid to win the match at Bristol-Plymouth. The week before he pinned to clinch the Quincy match.

Last week, Livingstone won by pin against Tyngsboro to clinch a 32-31 win.

Senior captains Alex Seppela and Graham Bell have both provided great leadership.

KNOCK ON WOOD

NSCAA Convention: soccer heaven

RYAN WOOD

Players battle it out in the Walt Chyzowych 4-A-Side Tournament. PHOTO/RYAN WOOD

A massive, 12-foot rotating sign greeted convention goers in Indianapolis.

I wouldn't say Indianapolis is paradise, but for four days last week, I guess you could say I was in soccer paradise. It was the annual National Soccer Coaches Association of America (NSCAA) Convention.

Basically, you take coaches from around the world, world class college and high school players from the U.S. and abroad, international and professional soccer stars, scouts and agents, fans, and media, who all have a love for the game of soccer, and throw them into a convention hall for a few days.

Each year, the NSCAA Convention seems to get bigger and better. This was my third trip, having gone last year to Kansas City and the year before to Baltimore. The more things change each year, the one constant, something that will never, ever, ever change: the attire. Track jackets, sweat pants (certainly not loose fitting), and adidas Samba sneakers were everywhere. You kind of feel out of place wearing anything else. Although, I passed on the sweat pants.

My flight from Boston, via Washington, landed in Indianapolis just at the conclusion of the Major League Soccer Draft. But it was clearly obvious who the draft picks were; most of them were wearing suits and had team scarves draped around their necks. And that night, they lived like rock stars, getting into VIP parties, signing autographs, posing for pictures. Ah, the life of a professional athlete.

I arrived in time to catch the opening of the exhibit hall. Let me tell you, this hall was enormous. The room was filled to the brim with booth after booth of exhibitors. Some featured the latest in soccer technology. Apparently, everyone has the next best thing when it comes to computer analysis. Some of it was more impressive than others, and a few companies offered absolutely invaluable tools for soccer coaches on any level.

International teams also made their presence felt. Several major teams – Barcelona, AC Milan, and Manchester City – have all started to bring their academies to the U.S. and had booths set up inside the hall. Would you pay thousands of dollars for your kid to join a top-notch club? Probably not. But it was kind of cool to see what these teams have brought to the U.S.

Speaking of one of those clubs – Manchester City – well, first off let me begin by saying I'm a Chelsea supporter and absolutely loathe Man City. But, when I spotted the Premier League trophy and a chance to get your photo taken with it, I jumped in line like I was a teenager at a One Direction autograph signing. I didn't realize at the time, though, that I had a Chelsea T-shirt on when I stood next to the trophy. That might explain why the guy from Manchester City took a blurry photo of me. Eh, win a European Championship and then come talk to me, buddy.

The exhibit hall gives you a chance to meet people from all over the world. I had a great chat with a few guys starting a semi-professional women's soccer team in Kansas City. Talk about passion for the game, these guys networked like crazy with women's and men's teams alike. I ran into colleagues and friends I haven't seen in years – former U.S. women's World Cup winning coach Tony DiCicco, former U.S. stars Kristine Lilly and Leslie Osborne, and current U.S. midfielder Lauren Cheney.

Once the allure of the exhibit hall wore off, and after I collected a ridiculous of free swag (most of which I tossed because it couldn't fit in my carry-on), we ventured around Indianapolis. Let's just say it was an interesting night. It went from trying to figure out why a steak restaurant sold pancakes to convincing my friends that, no, that wasn't Snoop Dogg on the dance floor inside this shady restaurant. Oh, and speaking of that restaurant, former U.S. national team and Fulham star Brian McBride, most recently featured on the show, Dream On: The Journey of Wembley FC, was there. Of all places, McBride couldn't find something more upscale? He, as did our crew, ended up bailing and calling it a night.

At the actual convention, I had a chance to sit in on some sessions; that's why most people are there. Representatives from Mexico's and Germany's national team systems gave insightful presentations. Former Manchester United and Ajax coaches talked tactics. You learn so much in such little time.

One of the most interesting sessions of the week was led by University of Virginia women's head coach and U.S. U-20 Women's National Team Head Coach Steve Swanson. He talked about lessons learned from the U-20 World Cup, which his U.S. team won (and featured Hanson's Sam Mewis). Swanson explained how his staff tracked their players' performances from the first day of camp, roughly one year prior to the tournament, all the way through the championship match. These kids, mostly 18- and 19-year-olds, went through extensive physical and mental testing. And in the end, what these kids learned was how to play as a team and accept their role, be it a starter, substitute, or getting little to no playing time at all. They never complained. Kids, if I could've taken this session home with me for your coaches, I'd have done it in a heartbeat. Teams are never individual sports.

After the sessions came meetings upon meetings upon meetings. And I can't complain. Not one of them was boring. Talking social media strategies with MLS representatives, helping prepare a coaching staff for the National Women's Soccer League Draft, and discussing ACL injuries and concussions with top professionals, I came away some amazing ideas and insight.

The final night of the convention was arguably the best of my stay. It was the annual Walt Chyzowych 4-A-Side Tournament, which I actually prepared to play in until I realized my fitness level was far below average (and one of my teammates dropped out a couple days prior). I'll start training now for next year's tournament. It's meant to be fun, and it was, but man, these matches were intense. There were players barking at referees, a few playing dirty, and some keepers throwing their bodies around like it was the finals of the World Cup. One poor guy took a rocket of a shot off the face from about 5 yards out. Instant shiner. But he kept playing.

All in all, it was a great week. There were several banquets, one in which had some local connections. Pembroke's Kathryn Nathan, who plays for Amherst College, and Scituate's Eric Anderson, who plays at Babson, were honored for receiving NSCAA All-American awards.

If you ever get the chance to go to a NSCAA Convention, take advantage of it, and soak everything in while you're there. You won't regret it.

YOUTH LACROSSE

Registration open

2013 Cohasset Spring Youth Lacrosse registration is now open

Registration is now open for Cohasset girls and boys in grades 1 through 8 for the spring lacrosse season (www.cohassetlacrosse.com.) This is the 18th year of lacrosse in Cohasset, sponsored by Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, which is the primary organizing body for spring lacrosse instruction, league play and for supporting the woman's and men's Cohasset Varsity Lacrosse program through fund raising and organizing events. The program is run by volunteers and coaches who strive to promote a love for the game with a focus on providing a positive, encouraging experience for every player.

U9 Clinics:

First and second graders participate in the U9 intro-to-lacrosse clinics. Sessions are held weekly on Saturday afternoons on the middle school front field.

The U9 players are coached by parent-coaches and high school volunteers with a focus on fun and encouragement. Basic skills are introduced through fun drills and we include a 2-3 scrimmages with neighboring towns as the season progresses.

Third grade through eighth grade boys and girls:

This year teams are arranged by grade in both the boys and girls program. We continue to work closely with the Cohasset High School coaching staff to ensure we are teaching players the most advanced skills and game concepts. We combine weekday practices with weekend games to ensure a healthy balance of instruction and competition.

Pre-season training begins in March and the regular season runs from early April to June.

We will take full advantage of Alumni field this year with a new feature for eighth grade boys and selected girls teams: the "Friday Night Lights" program.

So what else do you need to know?

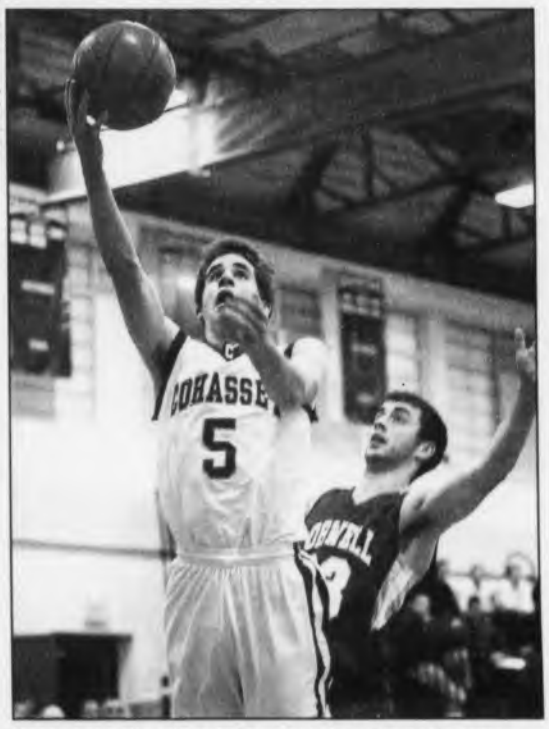
Cohasset followed the win with a 67-47 win over the Hull Pirates, Tuesday night.

With Cohasset riding an eight-game win streak, the team was playing with full intensity.

In the first quarter, Laugelle scored 8 points and Davis added 6 points to give Cohasset a 16-9 lead after one quarter.

The Skippers high pressure press and quick pace kept them in the lead.

Haggerty scored two key baskets and Federle had 2 points in the second period to put Cohasset ahead by 6 at the half.



In the third period, Shane Haggerty was firing on all cylinders scoring 9 points while battling tough defense by Hull.

chipped in insurance goal to ice it. The goal was Smith's first of the year.

Kylie Coffman (playing defense and forward), Alex Russell, Maddi Giovanucci, Sam Campadelli and Meredit ı Corry all played key roles in the win. Kayla Garrity and Lauren McLellen anchored the defense, limiting the shots on goalie Shea Kearney.

Taylor Fredrick was forced to sit out the game due to an injury, but was there to assist the coaching staff, and cheer on her teammates.

This year's team is led by captains Nicole Farren and Taylor Graf, both seniors. Both girls are forwards, but have played mostly defense due to an injury to stalwart defenseman Sophie Arnold (due back this week) and a graduation.

Returning all star Julia Dares leads the team with 11 points, followed by Graf with 10, and junior Whitney Joy and Farren with 7.

Sophomore Valerie Farren has had another strong year playing great two-way hockey. The defense has been anchored by juniors Jenna O'brien and MacKenzie Dunphy. The team was lucky to add some outstanding freshmen talent this year.

Forwards Ari Saldano,and Sam Taylor, as well as defenseman Molly Cameron. In goal this year is another freshman Shea Kearney. After an injury to senior goalie Kelsi Orcutt, Kearney has taken the the league by storm. With a stellar goals against average of 2.66, she ranks 27th out of 138 goalies in the state.

The girls have an opportunity to qualify for the state tournament if they can win at least four of their last five games and pick up a tie in the other.

What the girls have done is quite an accomplishment for a team in only it's third year.

Win or lose, the girls have always supported each other. Friendships for life have been forged by these teammates.

Countless team dinners, some " sleepless " sleepovers and of course a season's worth of games and practices have helped to bring together all the teammates. The girls have done an outstanding job representing two towns with great academic and athletic traditions.

In their most recent action, the Skiping Indians upset Norwell 5-4 to 5-7-3 and keep their tournament hopes alive.

WRESTLING

Junior Harry Helbock has fared well since returning from an injury, battling to a 10-2 record at 115.

Fellow junior Joe Sestito has also wrestled well with an 11-5 record at 132.

In the 152 division, junior Chandler Skolnick has a 10-17 record in what Sweeney said was a very tough class.

Freshman Sean Mavilia has made a quick impact with a 17-7 record.

Mavilia and Livingstone each had big pins in Wednesday's win over Carver. Another freshman, Nick Hall has also made a name for himself quickly with a 17-10 mark at 138.

Junior John Nolan and sophomore Hayes Keniley have done well spiltting the duties at 160.

Freshman Sean Kearns and eighth grader Drew Skolnick have a couple of wins each under their belts, and Whyatt Dominguez has impressed in spot starts.

"Whyatt has done a good job wrestling in Harry Helbock's spot when Harry was injured," Sweeney said. "Dom Sestito, Davis Cronin and Connor Naughton have also done a good job wrestling with the varsity."

Overall, Sweeney is pleased with the way the season has gone.

"They've done a real good job," he said. "I'm happy about that. They've come together and won some big matches. To be 16-10 with our youth is impressive."

THEATER | DAVID BROOKS ANDREWS

"Oliver!" at Wheelock Family Theater, through Feb. 24.

"Book of Mormon," at the Boston Opera House, April 9-28.

Imagine a different world

As the curtain goes up, forget the winter doldrums

As we head towards spring, Boston theaters offer a wide range of shows - old favorites and new ones, taking us from Venice to North Korea, while letting us see the world through eyes as different as a black maid auditioning for a Hollywood film and German nuclear scientists being held by the British at the end of World War II.

Here are some of the theatrical opportunities to expand our views of the world over the next few months.

Daniel Berger-Jones stars in "Stones in His Pocket," at the Lyric Stage Company of Boston, Feb. 15-March 16.

February

Oliver Twist will be tossed from his orphanage into the even crueler London streets for uttering his now famous line, "Please, sir, I want some more" in Wheelock Family Theatre's production of "Oliver!" Lionel Bart turned Charles Dickens' beloved novel "Oliver Twist" into a musical that children have relished for years without feeling terrified. It runs through Feb. 24. www.wheelockfamilytheatre.org

If a trip to New York City can seem overwhelming, imagine it through the eyes a North Korean girl who has escaped the world's most closed society. In "You For Me For You" by Mia Chung, you'll see NYC through just such a girl's eyes and follow her struggles to free the sister she had to leave behind. Company One is staging the show from through Feb. 16 at the Boston Center for the Arts. www.companyone.org

The stylish, highly physical comedy "The Servant of Two Masters" by Carlo Goldoni will run at ArtsEmerson's Paramount Center through Feb.10. In this 1753 Venetian commedia dell'arte masterpiece, the servant Truffaldino tries to make enough money to feed himself by working for two masters at the same time without letting either know. Artsemerson.org.

"Jersey Boys" is back in town Jan. 30-March 3 at the Colonial Theatre thanks to Broadway in Boston. This jukebox musical tells the story of how Frankie Valli and three friends went from being blue-collar kids to an enormous rock 'n' roll success named the Four Seasons. Boston.broadway.com

The highly acclaimed actress Cherry Jones returns to the American Repertory Theatre, where she was a founding member, to play Amanda Wingfield in Tennessee William's classic play "The Glass Menagerie." Amanda's daughter Laura can't find her niche in life while her son Tom can't wait to escape from his mother's tyranny, lightly disguised by the accent of an aging Southern belle. The show runs from Feb. 2-March 17. www.americanrepertorytheater.org

Actors' Shakespeare Project steps aside from its usual Shakespearean fare to tackle Will Eno's "Middleton," a play that examines a day in the life of a small ordinary town (sound like Thornton Wilder's "Our Town"?) while exploring the boundaries of thought and language. It runs Feb.13-March 10 at the Theatre at the Cambridge YMCA. www.actorsshakespeareproject.org

Super sopranos stars of stellar lineup

The Super Bowl on Sunday, Feb. 3 might be an anticlimax in Boston, but there will still be a major event in town that afternoon. Symphony Hall will host sopranos Renée Fleming and Susan Graham, who will provide their own kind of sparks - minus the celebratory spikes, unless it's heels. Part of the Celebrity Series' tremendous winter offering of international entertainment, that recital is just part of a series of concerts that includes violinist Itzhak Perlman (March 3), the London Philharmonic Orchestra (March 8) performing Beethoven's Fifth and the first Shostakovich concerto with violinist Vadim Repim), and appearances by pianists Jonathan Biss (March 22) and Evgeny Kissin (April 21), violinists Gil Shaham (Feb. 10) and Hilary Hahn (March 1), and flutist Sir James Galway (March 24). For classical music fans, the looming decision by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of a new music director is by far the biggest news in the next few months. Managing director Mark Volpe hinted in a radio interview that an announcement should be made sometime this spring; BSO followers have scanned the list of guest conductors, seeing if there are hints at James Levine's potential replacement. If frequency tells the story, either Daniele Gatti, the Italian conductor who makes three appearances with the orchestra before this season is over, or Charles Dutoit, the urbane French and Russian music expert who similarly appears three times this year, might get the nod. Some observers favor the reserved Russian, Vladimir Jurowski. The young Latvian, Andris Nelsons, has also burst onto the scene. Nobody really knows anything, except for Volpe and the BSO selection committee, and they have kept their ideas close to the vest.

Until that announcement, the music plays on. Highlights of the BSO spring season include appearances by pianists Lang Lang (Feb. 28-March 2) and Garrick Ohlsson (April 2), a world premiere of Augusta Read Thomas' cello concerto (with soloist Lynn Harrell, March 14-16), and Gatti leading Mahler's Third Symphony (March 28-30). For complete listings and ticket information visit www.bso.org or call 800-266-1200.

Early music always has a presence in Boston, and this winter is no different. Handel & Haydn Society, under the deft leadership of Harry Christophers, explores its naming rights with music of Handel (his opera "Jephtha," May 3 & 5) and Haydn (Feb. 22 & 24), along with explorations of Purcell (Jan. 25 & 27), Beethoven (March 15 &17) and Vivaldi (April 5 & 7); www.handelandhaydn.org; 617-266-3605. Boston Baroque also explores the same terrain with Carissimi's oratorio "Jephte" (March 8, 9) and Haydn's "Lord Nelson Mass" (April 19, 20). BB's concertmaster Christina

Sticking to a diet?

You can still dine out – guilt-free

Thinking about eating out this weekend? Don't let your New Year's resolutions stop you. Going out to dinner doesn't mean that you have to get a calorie-laden cheeseburger accompanied by an enormous side of fries. Today's restaurants know that eating out must be a healthier option for diners and have introduced many low-calorie menu items to beat the battle of the bulge.

"We do a lot of steamed items, and sushi is one of our biggest sellers here," Bill Sarro, owner of Fresh Catch Seafood of Mansfield, said. "We have a salmon burger, 10 different salads, and you can get a piece of fish with rice and vegetables for a healthier alternative."

Fresh Catch is also catering to diners with dietary issues by introducing a new gluten-free menu.

"This time of year, everyone tries to eat healthier, especially with all of the New Year's resolutions just made," he said. "It's important for us to have just what they are looking for available on our menu."

Eating healthier used to mean sacrificing taste for quality ingredients. With today's modern chefs and everyone looking for ways to stay in shape and live longer, the challenge has become somewhat easier.

For example, when you head over to Applebee's in Quincy, try one of their entrees endorsed by Weight Watchers like the grilled jalapeno lime shrimp or the creamy parmesan chicken. Applebee's even has an "Under 550" menu with dishes like Napa chicken and portobellos, roasted garlic sirloin, and zesty Roma chicken and shrimp that don't sacrifice portion size either.

If you see something on the menu that is offered fried, don't be afraid to ask for it grilled instead and be sure to request a side of vegetables instead of those unhealthy fries. Many chains today will offer low-fat entrees that show the nutritional content of each dish, as well, to keep you on track.

"We are fortunate to have enough of client base so we have regulars who come in here three or four times a week," Patrick Connell, owner of Maguire's Bar & Grill in Easton, said. "Most people know what they want, and we can accommodate their requests for something healthier. We do a lot of salads as part of our healthy options and have some broiled and grilled seafood dishes that are very popular. People love our grilled salmon and broiled haddock."

Even Outback Steakhouse in Hanover has some healthier options like its under-600 calories section. Instead of opting for their classic seasoned and seared steaks, try a lighter, wood fired, grilled piece of salmon or chicken on the barbie.

When opting for a salad instead of a heartier dish, be sure to request a fat-free dressing because, while you think a salad may be a healthier alternative, the calories and fat content found in the salad dressing can have that lighter option weighing in at just as much as that juicy cheeseburger you passed over.

Here are some tips to keep in mind when trying to eat out healthier:

- Avoid the bread basket and opt for more vegetables instead.
- Start your meal off with a salad and low-calorie dressing on the side (so you can control the amount you eat).
- Continue to drink water throughout the meal to keep you hydrated and feeling full.
- Avoid calorie-laden alcoholic beverages like fruity, sugary cocktails.
- Opt for fish or chicken (grilled or broiled) instead of a high-calorie steak.
- Choose dishes that are light on sauces.
- Use portion control and request a dinner from the low-calorie menu.
- Take the time to eat slowly and enjoy your meal.
- Skip over the dessert menu. (We know this one is difficult!)
- Be sure to talk to your server about how the food was prepared. Most restaurants are only too happy to make accommodations. You just have to ask.

If you keep these tips in mind, you will soon be on your way to enjoying a healthier lifestyle without having to sacrifice your dinners out.

The skinny on skin care

By Karina Timmel
GateHouse News Service

Wondering what those unpronounceable or flowery-sounding ingredients are in your creams and lotions? Read on:

Anthocyanin

The Claim: A potent antioxidant found in purple varieties of potatoes and carrots and in the Australian kakadu plum, anthocyanin promises to fight free radical damage caused by the sun's UV rays and build collagen in the skin.

The Proof: "There has been a decent amount of research looking into anthocyanin as a natural sun-protection agent with basic science showing that it also can stall the growth of precancerous skin cells," Dr. Adam Friedman, assistant professor of medicine and director of dermatologic research at Albert Einstein College of Medicine, New York, says.

Silica, an element that supports collagen, is found in the bamboo plant.

Neroli oil, extracted from orange blossoms, helps keep skin supple and soft. PHOTOS COURTESY OF WIKIMEDIA

Seaweed

The Claim: Derived from algae and kelp, seaweed extract is rich in proteins, vitamins and minerals that balance and tone your skin, and serves as a powerful humectant (attracts water).

The Proof: "Seaweed functions very similarly to hyaluronic acid that's naturally found in your skin, which holds 1,000 times its weight in water – meaning it can pull water into the skin to hydrate it," Friedman says.

Bamboo

The Claim: The bamboo plant contains a high level of silica, an element that supports collagen in the skin to give it a youthful glow. Silica naturally depletes as you get older, resulting in a dry and wrinkled complexion.

The Proof: "Bamboo extract is an effective anti-aging ingredient because it's the richest known source of silica," Dr. Debra Jaliman, author of "Skin Rules: Trade Secrets from a Top New York Dermatologist," says.

Copper

The Claim: The metal promotes the production of collagen and elastin, helping to reduce fine lines and wrinkles.

The Proof: "Copper is just like vitamin C – it's important for the formation of elastin in the skin. More research still needs to be done on its efficacy in topical applications, but in theory, it works," Friedman says.

EXERCISE

Reach your fitness goal safely, effectively

Personal trainers provide motivation, knowledge and more

By Lisa Gallagher and Karen Peterson
Special to GateHouse Media

Personal trainers can design a program that is specific to the client's fitness level and goals. PHOTO COURTESY OF METRO

January is the season for New Year's resolutions. In our business we get a surge of new members looking to jump into exercise without having a plan on how to reach their health and fitness goals safely and effectively. The people that hire a personal trainer have a much higher success rate as they are given a realistic plan that works for them. They also receive on-going support for long-term success. The advantages of personal training are many, but the top ones are motivation, knowledge, safety, rehabilitation and sports-specific training.

Motivation: Personal trainers provide motivation in many ways. For some, if they don't have a set appointment with their trainer, they won't work out. Having paid for this service, clients are more likely to show up. Personal trainers provide encouragement and positive feedback as well as the extra push their clients need to reach their goals.

Knowledge: Oftentimes clients feel overwhelmed by the amount and/or types of equipment found in the gym. Personal trainers help their clients learn how to use the equipment as well as design a program that is specific to the client's fitness level and goals.

Safety: Many people injure themselves at the gym by lifting too heavy, going too fast, or doing too much too soon! A personal trainer will help to ensure that their clients are working at a level that is appropriate for them as well as making sure they are using correct form.

Rehabilitation: We see many people who have "graduated" from physical therapy, but still need guidance while exercising. A personal trainer will work with the therapist to design a program to help the client recover and regain range of motion, strength and mobility.

Sports-specific training: If you are training for an event, a personal trainer will design a program to help you be prepared. Whether you are looking to compete in a marathon, triathlon, or "Weekend Warrior" event, a personal trainer will help you get into shape for your sport.

If you are considering hiring a personal trainer, make sure that they are nationally certified and check with the fitness director to help you get the right fit for your needs. A personal trainer can help you progress at a pace that works for you, allowing for long-term success in achieving your health and fitness goals. Good luck, be safe and enjoy the process!

FINANCES

Estate planning

Name your beneficiaries

By Paula Harris
Special to GateHouse Media

The new year is a great time to check in and update your estate plan. These are very important documents that will direct your loved ones and the legal system about your end-of-life decisions or directives: power of attorney if you are incapacitated, who will take care of any minor children and what to do with your financial assets.

Quite often the process causes people to go into shutdown mode and they're unable to take action on implementing these important documents. If you've ever been an executor or known someone who has, it can be a nightmare if people have not properly planned.

Rather than standing on my soap box to try and motivate you to focus on your entire estate plan, let's focus on one bite-size piece that you should be able to accomplish: naming beneficiaries for your IRA or 401(k). If you properly name beneficiaries, you can solve many of the potential future financial headaches. The named beneficiary is a contract and supersedes what might be stated in your will or trust. It's important to review these named beneficiaries annually because our relationships do change over time. People get divorced. People die. Or, they are just not the most important to us anymore. But that piece of paper may still list someone you no longer want to have listed.

Paula Harris

If you properly name beneficiaries, you can solve many of the potential future financial headaches.

Regardless of where you live, federal law dictates that your surviving spouse be the primary beneficiary of your 401(k) unless your spouse signs an effective written waiver. And if you live in one of the community property states, your spouse may have rights related to your IRA regardless of whether he or she is named as the primary beneficiary.

When it comes to beneficiary designation forms, you want to avoid gaps. If you don't have a named beneficiary who survives you, your estate may end up as the beneficiary, which is not always the best result. So, you want to make sure you have a primary beneficiary and, where possible, contingent beneficiaries.

Also, you can have multiple beneficiaries to share in the proceeds. In this case, you need to specify the percentage each beneficiary will receive. The shares do not have to be equal.

There are a few reasons why you would want to name an individual rather than your estate as your beneficiary. A named beneficiary can maximize tax deferral by spreading out lifetime distributions, a benefit available only to an actual person. An estate is not an actual person and loses this benefit. Another reason might be to avoid the cost of the probate process, including attorney and executor fees. The distribution of assets to a named beneficiary will be expedited, as well. It's important to note that your estate may end up as your beneficiary by default if you don't have a contingent listed.

There can be tax and legal implications to naming your beneficiaries so you want to consult with the appropriate professional. Now, go check your files and see whom you have listed as your beneficiary.

10 tips for walking on snow and ice

Falls account for more than one million injuries in the U.S. annually. There are four types of walking accidents with the most common being the slip and fall. That's the type of fall that happens when you fall due to snow or ice on the ground.

"Every winter the hazards of driving in snow and icy conditions are noted, but rarely noted are the hazards of walking on snow and ice," Martin B. Tirado, CAE, executive director of the Snow & Ice Management Association, said. "Slipping and falling while walking accounts for a large number of winter-related injuries and can have an impact on the quality of life for the injured person."

SIMA, the national nonprofit organization representing the snow removal industry, has some tips on safe winter walking.

1. Wear proper footwear. Proper footwear should place the entire foot on the surface of the ground and have visible treads. Avoid a smooth sole and opt for a heavy treaded shoe with a flat bottom.

2. Accessorize to see and be seen. Wear sunglasses so that you can see in the reflective light of the snow. Wear a bright coat or scarf so that drivers can easily see you.

3. Plan ahead. While walking on snow or ice on sidewalks or in parking lots, walk consciously. Instead of looking down, look up and see where your feet will move next to anticipate ice or an uneven surface. Occasionally scan from left to right to ensure you are not in the way of vehicles or other hazards.

4. Make sure you can hear. While seeing the environment is important, you also want to be sure you can hear approaching traffic and other noises. Avoid listening to music or engaging in conversation that may prevent you from hearing oncoming traffic or snow removal equipment.

5. Anticipate ice. Be wary of thin sheets of ice that may appear as wet pavement (black ice). Often ice will appear in the morning, in shady spots or where the sun shines during the day and melted snow refreezes at night.

6. Walk slowly on stairs. When walking down steps, be sure to grip handrails firmly and plant your feet securely on each step.

7. Enter a building carefully. When you get to your destination such as school, work, shopping center, etc., be sure to look at the floor as you enter the building. The floor may be wet with melted snow and ice.

8. Be careful when you shift your weight. When stepping off a curb or getting into a car, be careful since shifting your weight may cause an imbalance and result in a fall.

9. Avoid taking shortcuts. Shortcuts are a good idea if you are in a hurry, but may be a bad idea if there is snow and ice on the ground. A shortcut path may be treacherous because it is likely to be located where snow and ice removal is not possible.

10. Look up. Be careful about what you walk under. Injuries also can result from falling snow/ice as it blows, melts, or breaks away from awnings, buildings, etc.

Following these tips will help ensure that you survive the snow and ice season safely.

Egyptian neroli oil
The Claim: This essential oil extracted from the flowers of an orange tree is said to help maintain the right moisture and oil balance in the skin to keep it supple and soft.
The Proof: "Neroli oil is an emollient that moisturizes the skin well," Jaliman says.

Calendula
The Claim: This flower blossom has a long history of use as a wound-healing and skin-soothing botanical, which makes it a popular moisturizing agent in beauty products.
The Proof: Not only does calendula have great promise as a moisturizer, Friedman says, "In clinical trials, it prevented free radical damage – though more research needs to be done with topical applications of it."

Jade
The Claim: Jade is believed to slow down cell aging and contains vital elements for the human body, such as minerals, calcium, magnesium and water.
The Proof: "There's nothing that I know of or studies I could find to support these claims," Friedman says.

Baobab
The Claim: The baobab fruit's pulp is full of antioxidants that protect the skin from free-radical damage, which can lead to wrinkles and sunspots.
The Proof: In addition to antioxidants, baobab is also rich in amino acids, B vitamins, calcium and potassium. "With this potent roundup, it does protect the skin against free-radical damage, " Jaliman says.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF FEB. 11, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) It could be risky to push for a project you believe in but others are wary of. Never mind. If you trust your facts, follow your courageous Aries heart and go with it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your enthusiasm sparks renewed interest in a workplace project that once seemed headed for deletion. Support from supervisors helps you make all necessary changes.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A colleague might be a bit too contrary when your ideas are being discussed in the workplace. A demand for an explanation could produce some surprises all around.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Try to avoid distractions at a time when maintaining stability in a fluid situation is essential. There'll be time enough later for the Moon Child to enjoy some well-earned fun and games.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Stop wasting energy licking your wounded pride. Instead, put the lessons you learned from that upsetting experience to good use in an upcoming opportunity.

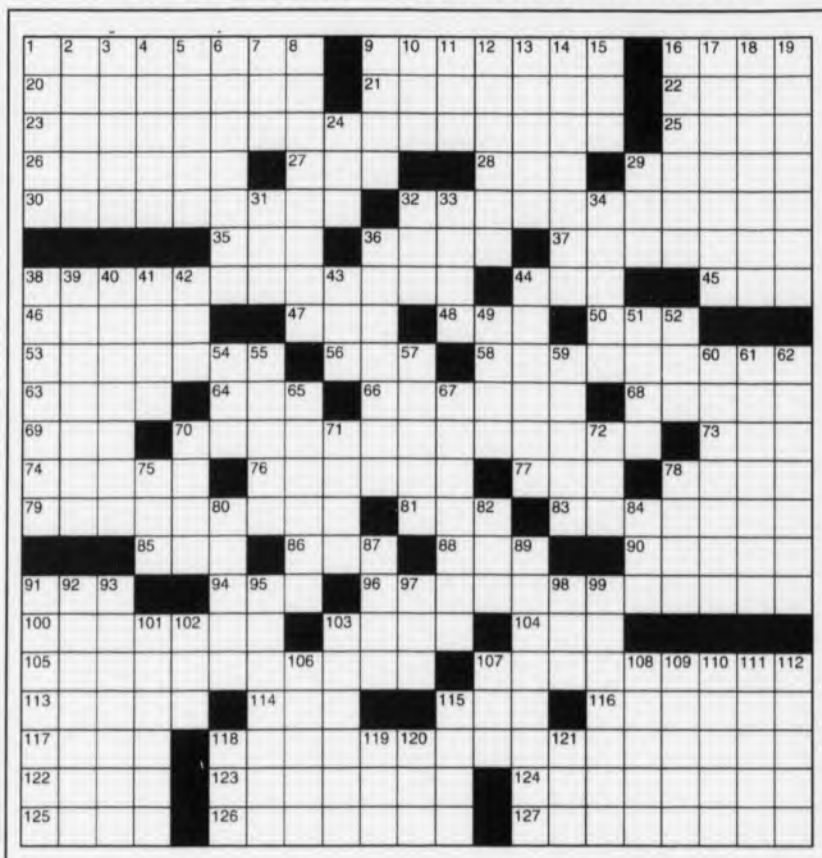
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You love being busy. But try not to make more work for yourself than you need to. Get help so that you don't wind up tackling tasks that are better left to others.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your usually balanced way of assessing situations could be compromised by some so-called new facts. Check them out before making any shift in judgment.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel angry over an unexpected shift in attitude by someone you trusted. But this could soon turn in your favor as more surprising facts come out.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Love rules everywhere for all amorous Archers, single or attached. It's also a good time to restore friendships that might have frayed over the years.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's not always easy for the proud Goat to forgive past slights. But clearing the air could help establish a better climate for that important upcoming venture.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Good news: Your skillful handling of a recent matter has won admiration from someone who could be influential in any upcoming decisions involving you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You continue to welcome new friends into the widening circle of people whom you hold dear. One of those newcomers soon might have something special to tell you.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love nature and inspire others to follow your example of concern for the planet's well-being.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Moderate

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

HISTORICAL SOCIETY EVENT

Broadway tunes, costumes showcased

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"Come on along and listen to the lullaby of Broadway" as a local chorus belts out show tunes this weekend.

The Cohasset Historical Society is giving its regards to Broadway this Saturday, Feb. 9 in an evening gala celebrating the music and memories of the Great White Way. The Unicorn Singers will perform Broadway favorites at the Cohasset Historical Society while the society shows off some of its best Broadway-style attire from its vintage clothing archive.

The event starts at 6 p.m. at the Cohasset Historical Society with a cocktail hour, during which patrons can view period clothing displayed in the style of the various Broadway shows being featured, such as "Carousel" and "Guys and Dolls."

Textile Exhibit Coordinator, Martha Fisher, tends to a dress from "A Little Night Music" which is part of the Historical Society's new exhibit highlighting items from their textile collection. The exhibit corresponds with an evening of Broadway song in conjunction with the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers. STAFF PHOTO/MARK GARDNER

Vintage vignettes

Lovers of vintage clothing will enjoy the Broadway displays featuring looks pulled by the historical society's textile exhibit coordinator, Martha Fisher. With the help of the Unicorn Singers, who provided a list of the songs they'd be performing and a description of each song's corresponding Broadway show, and Cohasset Historical Society (CHS) executive director Lynne DeGiacomo, who wrote up the documents with each display, Fisher created vignettes using clothes and accessories from the historical society's vast archives of vintage items.

CHS president Kathy O'Malley said that Fisher "has an eye for design. We're very grateful to have her."

Fisher has assisted the CHS with similar displays for the past three years. She attended the Fashion Institute of Technology (FIT) in New York and spent nearly 20 years creating eye-catching displays for Filene's department stores. Her experience comes in handy at the CHS, where Fisher can search through the treasure troves of vintage textiles and memorabilia to make memorable displays.

O'Malley said that for the CHS, the textile archive is one of it's best assets and explained how much they value "the importance of preservation and history."

HR at Town Hall

Officials consider hiring special counsel

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In a departure from their typical meetings, the Board of Selectmen held a roundtable discussion Tuesday night in Town Hall's basement meeting room (rather than in their upstairs office) to set goals and objectives for fiscal year 2014, which starts on July 1, 2013.

While many topics were discussed, from Cohasset's high tax rate to the town's staggering unfunded Other-Post Employment Benefits (OPEB) liability (see related story), personnel matters took up the bulk of the discussion.

Chief among the group's concerns was the need for human resources for town departments, whether hiring a consultant to create some HR policies and procedures or having an HR department. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski has been in talks with a law firm that could perform an HR audit and create policies and procedures, for the cost of $20,000 for four months of work ($5,000 per month). The cost would come out of the town's legal budget.

Milanoski gave the selectmen a proposal from the firm Koppelman and Paige. Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that she would not support this initiative because it was the first the board was hearing about this, and she also did not feel a law firm was necessary. Milanoski said he had just received the proposal that day.

Selectman Diane Kennedy disagreed with Gjesteby, say-

Senior Center designs are done

What's next for building project

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Ground has not yet been broken for the new Cohasset senior center, but designs for the building's exterior and interior were recently completed.

The Social Service League, which is primarily funding the building project, announced this month that the architect firm it hired to oversee the design has completed the plans. The Boston firm Bargmann, Hendrie and Archetype was hired last spring; Joel Bargmann is the principal on the design plans.

While the proposed senior center does not yet have a physical structure, it does have an address: 91 Sohier Street.

The center's exterior will be built to resemble a stately New England home so that it matches the neighborhood aesthetic. The priority for the interior design is also rooted in comfort and familiarity.

"The main objective is to have the space feel comfortable for anyone who's there," said Rick Stockwood of the Social Service League (SSL). Ensuring that "anyone" feels at ease in the building is the key phrase; the SSL has said that the center is for the whole community, not only the seniors. "It's a multi-generational place for people to share experiences."

The Mariner caught up with Mary-Anne Crawford, owner of Par-Tee in Tedeschi Plaza. For more about Par-Tee, call 781-383-6900 or visit: par-teegolf.com. If you see Mary-Anne around town be sure to tell her you spotted her in Picture This! PHOTO/MARY FORD

Mary-Anne Crawford

Name: Mary-Anne Crawford.

Occupation: Owner of Par-Tee in Tedeschi Plaza.

Best day of your life: The day Par-Tee opened in May of 2000. It has been an adventure in fun.

Best vacation: Fortunately I have had lots of great vacations in my life, a college tour of Europe, many yearly extended family (groups of 40-50) weekends, cruises, bus trips, cross country on the train and even a trip to Japan.

Favorite season: Summer, because I love sunshine. I wish Par-Tee had a retractable roof!

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving, no stress. I don't host and just have to show up with my favorite food.

Favorite junk food: Chips and dip. No contest.

Best book: I'm addicted to books on tape in the car and I love to read. Loved "The Harry Potter" series. Mostly I read and listen to mysteries.

Best movie: I like the old classic movies and my favorites include "Sound of Music" and "Wizard of Oz."

Best TV show: Believe it or not I do not have cable, so my favorite TV shows are "Jeopardy" (even though I hardly ever get to watch anymore) and "Antiques Roadshow." I love TV, that's one reason why I do not have cable, I would be up all night watching. I am a night owl.

Pet peeve: Waiting for the next available assistant.

Fun fact: Everyone knows I love golf, even though I stink at it, but actually I love all kinds of games. One of my favorite things to do is to play cards with my parents and nieces and nephews. And every week I play Mahjongg with a group of friends.

Most embarrassing moment: Deciding to color my hair at work when it was slow and then all of a sudden a group of people came in to golf.

Biggest worry: (Besides finances, because that's just money) is losing anyone close to me. Even though I have a pretty strong religious faith, I still worry because I miss so many people already. But, let's not talk about that or I will worry some more!

Person you would most like to meet: Maybe Carl Yastremski, as we have the same birthday. (Only he is older. Much older!)

Goal: To do the best I can and appreciate what I have and what I have been able to do. I'm always hoping to be a little bit more organized, but that is definitely a work still in progress. Life is good; I hope it always will be.

Best part of Cohasset: (Besides my brother's family who live in town) how great it feels to have become a part of the community through the thousands of birthday parties. It has been so rewarding to be able to work here for the past 12-1/2 years; I have met so many great people who have supported the business. Plus, my immediate neighbors, the businesses in the same plaza, I consider great friends.

Wheels stolen from new Nissan

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

On Thursday (Jan. 31) at about 9:08 a.m., police were dispatched to Coastal Nissan, 742 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, for report of a past larceny. Upon arrival, officers were met by the reporting party, who brought them to the rear parking lot where there was a 2013 Black Nissan Maxima which had all four wheels stolen.

The vehicle was brand new and unregistered, police said. The vehicle was propped up on rocks. The rear passenger side had slipped off the rock, possibly causing damage to the vehicle. There were lug nuts on the ground next to each wheel well.

Value estimate of the tires and rims is $4000. Video was recovered and the case was turned over to the detectives.

Paintball

At 3:16 p.m. o n Monday (Jan. 28), a resident of Forest Avenue called to report what she thought to be gunshots near her residence. Officers on scene discovered several local youths using paintball guns. All the kids were known to the officer and were advised not to shoot so close to the neighbors.

Tree hit

At 12:17 a.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 29), police responded to a report of an accident. Police said a 34-year-old Hull man was driving on Forest Avenue in his 2006 Ford Expedition when he lost control on the slippery conditions and struck a tree. The impact spun his vehicle across both lanes of travel and sent it into the woods on the opposite side of the street. No injuries. The operator was cited for marked lane violations.

Stone pillar

At 7:50 a.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 29), police responded to an incident involving a 16-year-old Linden Drive resident, who was operating a 2007 Chevy Suburban on Jerusalem Road. The driver skidded on the slippery pavement and struck a stone pillar at #260 Jerusalem Rd. Both operator and passenger were gone upon police arrival.

When police arrived, a private tow had been called by the owner of the Suburban and had the vehicle on his ramp truck. The homeowner of the damaged property at #260 identified both owner and operator. They reported to police headquarters for identification and the operator was cited for marked lane violation.

Mailbox

On Tuesday (Jan.29), police were dispatched to a home on Jerusalem Road for a report of a past vandalism. Upon arrival the officer met and spoke with the 52-year-old resident, who told him that sometime between 11p.m. on the 28th and 7 a.m. on the 29th someone struck his mailbox post. The support arm was broken off of the main post. There was no damage to the box. Upon further examination it appeared from tire tracks in the snow that a vehicle had backed out of the driveway across the street and struck the post. The officer attempted a neighborhood canvass for witnesses to no avail.

Salesman

A resident of Beechwood Street called at 3:43 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 29) to report a vacuum salesman driving a maroon Nissan Maxima had tried to sell him a vacuum cleaner. Caller did not want to speak to an officer, just wanted it logged in case this happens to another resident.

Rifle found

At 4:48 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 29), a 75-year-old resident of Joy Place went to the police station with a .22 caliber rifle found while renovating his residence. The weapon was made inoperable, and was checked in the computer to see if it was reported stolen or missing. It wasn't, police said.

Drug activity?

Caller reported at 2:38 p.m. on Wednesday (Jan. 30) seeing some kids in the area of the tennis courts on Bancroft and Norfolk Roads involved in possible drug activity. The responding officer reported finding no one in the area.

Hawk saved

A resident of Arrowwood Street called at 3:31 p.m. on Wednesday (Jan. 30) to report a hawk was stuck in the trampoline in her yard. The Animal Control Officer responded and was able to release the hawk without injury.

Identity theft

A 44-year-old resident of Beechwood Street called at 11:46 a.m. on Thursday (Jan. 31) to follow up with an identity fraud packet he had downloaded from the police department website. Police said that several accounts had been opened in the victim's name, and in one case, a Discover card had been compromised for more than $8,600. Detectives are investigating.

Generator

The owner of the strip mall at 166 King Street came into the station last Thursday (Jan. 31) to report his tenants were using a portable gas generator to power their business. Officers on scene noticed the front doors were propped open to this business and went into the store. The business reeked of gas and there was smoke throughout the establishment. There was an engine running from a portable gas generator on the ground. The wires from the generator were not in compliance with multiple building codes and a licensed electrician would not have connected the wires the way they were found, police said. The Health Inspector cited the owner for multiple violations. The business was ordered closed by the fire department until these violations were corrected.

Fire

On Friday (Feb. 1) at about 8:03 a.m., police were dispatched to Stop & Shop, 400 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, for report of fire alarm activation. Upon arrival officers were met by a group of employees at the front of the store. They informed the officers that there was indeed a fire in the rear grocery room, and that everyone was out of the building. Flames were coming from a heater pipe on the ceiling. Firefighters turned off the gas, and the store was allowed to reopen shortly thereafter.

Car crash

At 1:30 p.m. on Friday (Feb 1), officers responded to a two-vehicle crash at King Street and Route 3A. Police said a 2005 Acura driven by a 67-year-old Hull man, was turning to go southbound on King Street. At the same time a 2005 Chevrolet pickup driven by a 45 year-old Hull man was turning left off Route 3A onto King Street and the collision occurred. There were injuries, no citations, and both vehicles were drivable.

Car crash

At 2:17 p.m. on Friday (Feb. 1), police responded to a two-vehicle crash at Route 3A and Beechwood Street. Police said a 2004 Chevy driven by a 62-year-old Scituate woman was attempting to turn left onto Beechwood Street. A 2006 Nissan, operated by a 39-year-old Scituate woman, was traveling south on 3A when the Chevrolet turned in front of her. The operator of the Chevrolet was cited for failure to yield to oncoming vehicles. There were no injuries, and neither vehicle was towed.

Harassing calls

At 11:56 a.m. on Saturday (Feb. 2), a Cohasset resident called to report receiving several harassing phone calls from a telemarketer. Caller did not want to speak with an officer, but wanted it logged in case any other calls are received from that number.

Unwanted guest

At 9:52 p.m. on Thursday (Feb. 3), officers responded to a home on Atlantic Avenue for a report of an unwanted guest. Upon officers' arrival, they were met by the 52-year-old homeowner, who had allowed a 22-year-old woman to stay at his residence as she was just released from a halfway house. An argument ensued, and the homeowner asked the female to leave. Transportation was arranged for the female to friend's house in Braintree. No abuse or violence reported and peace was restored.

Erratic operation

At 7:27 p.m. on Saturday (Feb. 2), a cell caller reported that a blue sedan has been driving erratically on Route 3A and has turned into Avalon apartments. Officers made contact with the caller, and were directed to a parking spot where the caller had seen a blonde woman and a young child entering an apartment. Officers were unable to locate the woman or child.

UPDATE

Arrest made in burglary

Second suspect being summonsed to court

On Wednesday, Jan. 16, a report was made to the Cohasset Police Department by the daughter of an elderly Cohasset resident that someone had attempted to use her mother's debit card at the ATMs of several Cohasset banks. Numerous attempts were made by the suspect to withdraw money but the suspect was prevented as a result of entering incorrect PIN numbers. Images from the ATM security camera were later publicly disseminated and resulted in numerous leads as to the identity of the suspects being received.

On Saturday, Jan. 26, the son of the same elderly woman reported to the Cohasset Police Department that at approximately 1:15 a.m., he was at his mother's residence, looked out the window and observed a man run down his driveway toward the house. When he confronted the man inside his house, the man fell at the doorway and dropped a purse that was later identified as belonging to the elderly resident. The elderly woman's son then chased the man down the driveway and observed a vehicle speed away from the house.

Detectives assigned to the Criminal Investigation Division responded to the crime scene and initiated an investigation with the assistance of patrol officers already present at the scene. Based on information obtained during the investigation of the ATM card offenses, interviews, information obtained from the public and the execution of a search warrant, CID identified two subjects as being responsible for the burglary. Further investigation linked them to a total of four separate entries into the elderly victim's home.

On Friday, Feb. 1, with the assistance of the Patrol Division, CID stopped a vehicle being operated by Paul J. McCaw, 22, of 388 Beechwood St., and placed him under arrest for the following offenses: unarmed burglary (four counts), larceny from a building (two counts), and attempting to commit a crime (two counts). He was held on $10,000 cash bail at the Cohasset Police station and was arraigned in Quincy District Court on Monday, Feb. 4. The second subject identified in the investigation, Sam DeGiacomo, 59 Beach St., will be summonsed to Quincy District Court for being an accessory after the fact to burglary. According to published reports and the police report, DeGiacomo cooperated with the investigation. DeGiacomo told police he was with McCaw on four occasions when he entered the elderly woman's residence. He also drove McCaw to several banks where McCaw allegedly used the woman's debit card in an attempt to withdraw funds from the ATM machines.

Acting Chief of Police William Quigley credited the public in helping to identify the suspects in this case saying, "We posted a photo of the suspect on our department Facebook Page and within hours the calls were pouring in with a name to go with the face."

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week

When driving near large trucks, stay away from front and rear blind spots. Following a truck too closely obscures your view of the road in front of you. The driver of the truck is also unable to see your vehicle. If you can't see the driver in the truck's side mirror, the driver can't see you or your vehicle. COURTESY PHOTO

Generator removed from business

On Thursday (Jan. 31) at about 7:06 p.m., Engine 3 and Ambulance 1 were dispatched from fire headquarters to 166 King St. (3A Pizza & Grill) for a report of a generator running inside the establishment. The gasoline-powered generator had been turned off and the business evacuated prior to any Cohasset Fire Units arrival at the scene. Upon investigating the interior of the business Cohasset Fire Department personnel detected levels of carbon monoxide at 4ppm and a generator that had been illegally wired to the electrical circuit breaker panel.

The board of health and wire inspector were then requested to the scene once these two conditions were discovered. Cohasset Fire Department personnel ventilated the business to remove the carbon monoxide and then removed the generator from the business once the wiring inspector disconnected the illegal wiring to the electrical panel. The business owner then agreed to voluntary close the business until his electrical panel had been repaired and inspected.

HVAC unit

On Friday (Feb. 1) at approximately 8:03 a.m., Engine 3, Engine 1, Ladder 1 were dispatched from headquarters to 400 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Super Stop & Shop) for a reported fire in the Heating, Ventilation, Air Condition (HVAC) unit in the rear of the building. Employees of Stop & Shop discovered the fire; they activated the fire alarm system and evacuated the store while fire department units were responding to the scene. Ambulance 1 also responded to the scene once they cleared South Shore Hospital from a previous incident.

Upon arrival, Cohasset Fire Department personnel discovered a fire in the HVAC unit located in the ceiling above the first floor grocery storage area. Fire department personnel extinguished the fire by turning off the gas flow to the HVAC unit and removed the insulation around the unit to check for any further extension of the fire. Fire Department personnel also checked the roof of the HVAC unit and found no extension into the roof area. The gas/plumbing inspector responded to the scene and placed the affected HVAC unit out of service until it has been repaired. Super Stop & Shop was closed for about an hour while fire department personnel checked for any extension of the fire.

Health agent Dr. Godzik steps down

Elder Affairs gains full member

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset Health Department lost a member Tuesday night while Cohasset Elder Affairs gained a new one.

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to appoint alternate CEA member Paul Kierce to a full member position.

Meanwhile, upstairs in the Board of Health meeting, Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik made the unexpected announcement that it would be his last day with the health department.

According to the Board of Health office, Godzik stated at the meeting that he technically retired 10 years ago but had stayed on part-time to assist former Health Administrator Tara Tradd, who left her position last year. Felix Zemel was hired in the summer as the new Health Administrator/Inspector. Godzik said that he was confident, after six months on the job, that Zemel was ready to take the reigns of the Health Agent position.

There has been no word yet on whether Godzik's vacated position will be filled, or whether Zemel will absorb all of the agent's duties. However, Godzik only worked part-time at around 10 hours a week; Zemel is the town's Health department head.

The selectmen and Acting Town Manager learned of Godzik's announcement during their meeting, which was held in the basement meeting room in Town Hall (the health board met in the selectmen's office). Sewer Department administrative assistant Diane Hindley brought a message to selectmen secretary Tracey Connors-Kelly, who read the message aloud. The message was that, simply, Godzik had stepped down.

Chapman said of Godzik in a phone call, "We fully appreciate his staying on and all the service he's given."

Godzik confirmed in a phone call that after retiring 10 years ago and staying on part-time, he simply felt it was time to move on. "Now that Felix is here, he's been here for six months, he's got a firm hold on the job; he can handle it. I felt that it was time to leave," said Godzik. "I've been contemplating this for some time."

Town officials take on OPEB

Looking at ways to tackle liability

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

These days, an ominous term among officials is OPEB, or "Other Post-Employment Benefits."

The town's staggering unfunded OPEB liability for retired municipal employees' health care has been a major discussion topic among town officials, particularly in the last year. The Budget Planning Group and School Committee recently exchanged ideas on how best to tackle the problem.

OPEB (other post employment benefits) is the set of benefits offered to a retiree other than their pension, consisting mainly of health insurance and including medical, dental, Medicare Part B premiums and prescription medications. The OPEB liability is what the town owes for its share of the retirees' health insurance costs, plus their dependents, from the time they retire up until they die.

Currently, Cohasset is $32 million in the hole to pay for OPEB. The town is not alone in this, however; cities and municipalities around the nation are forced to address the issue. While Cohasset officials are trying to stay ahead of the curve, however, they have pointed out that with the town's high tax base and lack of build-able lots for commercial properties, Cohasset is not likely to increase its revenue income by much anytime soon.

The town's total levy is steady each year, coming in at just over $30 million; the town gets around $900,000 in new revenue year to year. Without any major developments in the near future, after the Avalon luxury apartments were built, officials said that these numbers are unlikely to change much.

"We get about $900,000 a year to work with everything," said Advisory Committee and Budget Planning Group chair Peter Pescatore during the Wed., Jan. 30 joint meeting with the SC. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski noted that this figure pays for fixed expenses.

The town has a trust fund with $164,000 earmarked for tackling this liability; the May 2012 Annual Town Meeting voted to set up the fund to start chipping away at the unfunded liability. The town voted to appropriate $20,000 to the fund, as well as reallocate $144,000 from an older trust fund, so that Cohasset has $164,000 total saved in what Milanoski has called an "irrevocable" fund, whose monies can only be used to pay for OPEB.

Cohasset also has an unfunded liability for pension debt, to the tune of $16 million, according to the acting town manager, and that amount will only increase. "We will be getting larger and larger bills from the county to fund that liability."

Officials also stressed the importance of building up the town's stabilization and reserve funds. The goal, said Milanoski, is to have $1.9 million in stabilization; the proposed amount to add in Fiscal Year 2014 will bring the amount up to $1.5 million. He expects the town will be "on target" for stabilization by 2017.

While Cohasset seems to be on top of these issues, Pescatore said the town needs to do even more. He said that auditors will soon expect to see the OPEB liability in the town's balance sheet. This means that in order to secure a good credit rating, towns will need to show that they are dealing with the liability. Furthermore, "We may be forced to fund it out of spending," Pescatore added. "It's going to be a shock to the system."

The numbers are staggering: Pescatore said in order to stay on top of OPEB, the town should be spending $1 million a year toward the unfunded liability. Even that will barely help Cohasset get out from under the burden.

"This liability alone is running an excess of $2 million a year," said Pescatore. "We're falling behind $1 million a year. There's no opportunity to put a big mall in Cohasset... We're not going to have a major change in the overall revenue projection... I don't know how we can catch up with the growth of these liabilities unless we change."

Reform

The change some officials are proposing: health care reform.

Part of the problem, said Milanoski, is that the while the town pays for 50 percent of retired municipal employees' health insurance, Cohasset covers 85 percent of retired teachers' insurance. This was enacted when a previous Board of Selectmen voted to accept Chapter 32B, which put teachers into the state's Group Insurance Commission (GIC) health plan. Milanoski's suggestion was to have the current board of selectmen repeal 32B.

School committee members were cautious to agree to that, saying that the GIC plan needs to be looked at closely because it is probably less expensive. "You have to compare dollars to dollars," said SC chair Jeanne Astino.

Milanoski said that he would "run the numbers."

Other BPG members, including Jack Keniley and Steve Gaumer, were concerned that unless the town comes out from under the increasing liability, Cohasset could have to look into cutting back on services.

"We're not going to be able to fund the schools or public safety," said Keniley, saying that the town could look into regionalization as a "last resort." He was not, however, optimistic on that front. "Who's going to regionalize with us? We're not a talented dancing partner."

School committee members took issue with the idea of eliminating Cohasset's schools. "It's the golden egg that has helped [the town] in many ways," SC member Helene Lieb said of Cohasset's top-ranked school district. "You don't want to attack our golden egg."

Ultimately, the two committees agreed on the need to start an OPEB task force to explore ways of dealing with the liability. They also voted in favor of making a recommendation to the Board of Selectmen, that the selectmen explore health care reform.

OPEB came up again during the Tuesday, Feb. 5 selectmen meeting. Milanoski reported the recommendation from the BPG and SC and discussed setting up the OPEB committee.

"Your task force should be made up primarily of people who understand the industry and at least one municipal employee who can speak the lingo of what the employees are going through," Milanoski told the selectmen.

The selectmen agreed to discuss OPEB and the task force at length during an upcoming meeting.

OPEB by the numbers

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski is crunching more numbers to find out how many retired teachers live in Cohasset; how much these teachers are paying for insurance; and how much money the town could save by opting out of Chapter 32B which placed teachers on the state's Group Insurance Commission (GIC) health insurance plan (he estimates it could be $150,000 to $200,000).
So far, the numbers for OPEB are...

- $1.26 trillion = Total national liability
- $30 billion = Total Mass. municipal liability
- $16.2 billion = Total Mass. state liability
- $32,380,795 = Cohasset's unfunded liability as of FY10
- $164,000 = Amount in Cohasset's OPEB trust fund
- $130,000 = Amount it would cost each town employee to pay off OPEB liability
- $4,500 = Amount it would cost each individual townsperson to pay off OPEB liability
- 11 percent = Amount current Cohasset town employees pay toward their healthcare plans
- 31 percent = Amount current Cohasset town employees pay toward family healthcare plans
- 50 percent = Amount town of Cohasset pays toward employee healthcare after retirement
- 15 percent = Amount Cohasset teachers pay toward their insurance after retirement

SCHOOL BRIEFS

CEF grants are accepted

The School Committee voted last week, during a joint meeting with the Budget Planning Group, to accept a gift from the Cohasset Education Foundation of $34,762. This donation will fund four programs: the new "WeatherBug" weather detection system; district presentation bundles; "Simple Machines Explored through LEGOs;" and the schools' first LEGO robotics team.

SC chair Jeanne Astino thanked the CEF for their "kindness in facilitating programs and supporting us financially," and also thanked the PSO and boosters.

"They help us with so many different components," said Astino. "It's a very generous contribution."

School board votes calendar

The School Committee voted on the 2013-2014 calendar Wednesday night. They voted to approve the 2014-2015 calendar at a previous meeting.

While the '14-'15 school year will have a two-week break for the holidays in December and January, this will not occur next year. After discussion, the board decided that next year, school will reconvene on Thursday, Jan. 2 so that students don't lose two days of school in a row and have to come back after another long weekend. Those against the two-week vacation felt that crucial learning would be disrupted.

The board was split on the issue, however, voting 3-2 to approve the calendar without a two-week break. Students will have seven school days off and two weekend days.

Schools closer to going solar

The school committee has been working with the town's Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) to try to bring solar power to the schools. The AEC and SC alt. energy subcommittee issued a Request for Proposals (RFP) in December for solar panel companies to bid on the town's two sites for solar arrays: the town landfill on Cedar Street and the Middle-High School roof.

AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell reported during the Wednesday, Feb. 6 SC meeting that four bids have been received from four different companies; three bid on both the landfill and the roof, while one bid on a private piece of land using the same procurement process (under Mass. General Laws Chapter 30B).

An evaluation committee made up of two members each of the AEC, school department, Planning Board, Advisory and Capital Budget committees will soon review the four bids and rank them based on 30B criteria and will make a recommendation to the town's Chief Procurement Officer, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski; he will then choose a company based on the best value for the town.

This means that Cohasset schools are one step closer to going solar. If solar panels are installed on the school roof, the school board plans to have an educational tie-in for students.

SC member Helene Lieb said it was nice to see the board's dream start to become a reality. Bodell replied, "We have a long way to go, but we have met a very important milestone. It's very exciting; we are that much further along."

Girls' Golf club is on the way

The school board was in unanimous favor of starting a girls' golf club in the Middle-High school. Parent Maggie Moy took the reigns on the program and pitched it to the committee. It will start out as a club with the hope that enough interest will be generated so that it will eventually become a varsity sport.

COUNSEL

ing that a law firm was needed to craft HR policies. "Every problem we have ties into legal issues."

And while the town does pay a monthly retainer for legal counsel to Boston firm Deutsch-Williams, Kennedy said that she felt HR fell outside Town Counsel's scope of work, which is just "to provide town counsel services."

In today's "very litigious society," Kennedy added, "we need a law firm."

Selectman Fred Koed said that while he was not against the idea, he would like to see proposals from more than one firm before deciding anything. Milanoski stressed the immediacy of the issue; he had requested that the board vote on the matter that night so that the firm could start by Monday, Feb. 11.

Gjesteby said she would have appreciated more notice. "We have an awful lot on our plates – the budget, Town Meeting – this is coming out of nowhere... All this rush, rush, rush is not good decision making."

Milanoski said that it's a problem he's been trying to work on, and did not want to delay addressing it any longer. "Maybe I should've flagged this three months ago, [but] I'm flagging it now."

Koed wondered, along with Gjesteby, why a law firm was needed rather than HR consultants, and noted that the work the firm would do seemed more extensive than was needed.

"We have an awful lot on our plates – the budget, Town Meeting – this is coming out of nowhere... All this rush, rush, rush is not good decision making."
Selectman Martha Gjesteby

"I'm confused," said Koed. "HR is HR... This has legal overview. Is there something we need to discuss in executive session? If there's something we need to know about..."

Gjesteby also wondered why the town would need "something this complicated."

Milanoski indicated that there were some significant personnel issues that needed to be addressed.

"My belief is we can't wait any longer," the acting town manager said.

Milanoski explained that it's a problem because Town Hall not only lacks personnel policies and procedures, but also job descriptions, which means that the town is not in compliance with state and federal requirements.

"The resources are just not there," said Milanoski. "Everything we have needs to be updated to meet current employment rules and regulations. They haven't been updated in a while; the priority is to get them updated as soon as feasibly possible."

"We have nothing," Kennedy agreed. "We need to get it right."

Koed noted that the town did have a personnel committee years ago, but that it was "rolled into" the Town Manager position when Cohasset switched from a Town Administrator in 1997.

When asked about getting prices from firms besides Koppelman and Paige, Milanoski agreed but said there was a reason he wanted to use their services. "This is a special program they offer," he said of the law firm's HR services. "It's counsel on call... It's a unique niche they have and focuses exclusively on HR legal issues." He added that he and the selectmen could "talk more in executive."

The board asked Milanoski to get prices from one or two other firms and come back with the proposals for them to review and discuss at their next meeting. No vote was taken on whether or not to support the initiative yet.

LIFE AT CHS

Fundraising for Costa Rica trip

WHITNEY MALONE

For additional fundraising, we are also planning a "Movie Theater Night" in the school auditorium, sometime within the next couple of weeks.

This week, students sold coffee, hot chocolate and baked goods at the "Skipper Café," located in the senior lounge, each morning before school to fundraise for the Costa Rica ecology trip in April. Don't worry if you missed out; we will continue to sell drinks and treats next week, so everyone should remember to bring their money! For additional fundraising, we are also planning a "Movie Theater Night" in the school auditorium, sometime within the next couple of weeks. Middle and high school students are welcome to attend this theater-style playing of a classic movie (yet to be decided upon) with their friends, without having to pay a ridiculous cost. Students will also be able to purchase candy and drinks to enhance their movie experience!

Wednesday night, both the Gymnastics and Girls' Ice Hockey varsity teams held their "Senior Nights" at their home events. The only senior member of the gymnastics team from Cohasset, Kelsey McCunney, was recognized for her years of commitment and her leadership as a team captain this season. At their home game against Marshfield, four Cohasset students, captain Nicole Farren, Kylie Coffman, Lauren McLellan, and Meghan Kearney, were honored as senior members of the Varsity Ice Hockey team. This group of senior girls has been a significant contributor to the team, as they pushed to establish Girls' Ice Hockey as an organized sport at CHS their sophomore year. Congratulations to all of you!

Thursday afternoon, the Math Team participated in their last meet of the year. While they did not move on to the league playoffs, the team ranked within the top 15 of the Southeastern Massachusetts Mathematics League, a six-division league with over 30 participating schools.

Also finishing up this year, the Peer Leaders program held its last workshop today. Middle school students and their Peer Leaders reflected on their past discussions this year, engaged in closing activities, and said their goodbyes to the senior leaders.

It's unbelievable that there is only one more week until February vacation! Students participating in the French Exchange are leaving for France next Friday and will be spending the vacation week with their French friends, who visited Cohasset back in October. It's a good thing they aren't traveling this week... have a fun, snowy weekend!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High; her column appears weekly during the school year.

Snowed in

Hey there Cohasset friends here in town and to those reading from afar, how are you? As I am writing this week's column, I am getting more and more excited (although living in New England, I will believe it when I see it:) about some real snow! Sorry groundhog dude, spring may be around the corner but winter is not leaving without a fight! This weekend is supposed to be a big one and quite a storm so stay safe everyone. Remember: "A picture is worth a thousand words," so make sure to snap a few if possible.

My memories of the Blizzard of '78, were those of huge snows, ice cold water that had flooded Atlantic Avenue and of the snow plow that plowed up my dog named "Yummy" on Red Gate Lane. I was 12 at the time and after digging my way to the street on day 3 or 4, our neighbor asked me to take a ride to see how things looked. We went through the icy, frozen salt ocean water on Atlantic and then we had to try and push the car to get it out and started again. That afternoon, after hours of warming up, we could not find our all-white dog in the "all white" snow until I saw something move in the fresh, plowed snow bank and yes, there was Yummy, cold, plowed up and in, but unhurt! There was no school it seemed forever, but we had the best nature's playground to enjoy for weeks.

Stay safe Cohasset, through this one and yes, make some memories with family and friends! Valentine's Day arrives on Thursday so happy day to all and enjoy!

BC High

Hats off to Zachary Coggins of Cohasset, a junior at Boston College High School, who was among the 96 seniors and juniors inducted into the Robert J. Fulton, S.J. Chapter of the National Honor Society at an evening ceremony Jan. 10, 2013, at Boston College High School's Fahey-Hunter Commons.

The National Honor Society is established under the National Association of Secondary School Principals to provide recognition to high school students who have clearly distinguished themselves in their school and community for scholarship, character, leadership and service.

Movie night

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee hosts "movie night" on Friday, Feb 15 at 7 pm at the Paul Pratt Library. This month's feature is "Red Tails," starring Cuba Gooding Jr., the story of the Tuskegee Airmen in WWII.

Making the evening viewing of Red Tails extra special will be an introduction to the movie by Cohasset's own Tuskegee Airman, Jack Bryant, who will speak briefly about the Tuskegee Airmen and answer audience questions about his experiences.

As always CDTC "movie nights" are free of charge and all are welcome! What a great experience for all who can attend, enjoy.

Polar Plunge!

We hope you all read the great story in last week's Mariner about the 15th Annual Polar Plunge benefiting Special Olympics MA to be held at Nantasket Beach. With two weeks to go until Saturday, Feb. 23rd, the brave Plungers are busy knocking on doors hoping to raise $400,000 for the programs of Special Olympics all across the state.

The 25 member South Shore Mariners Team includes Cohasset residents Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Laurel Hickey, Jessica MacDonald, Steve Myers, Jay and Jeff Nothnagle, Pat Plante, and Doug Yeager. The SSHARCS Team includes Nick, Charlotte and Graham Sida, Phil Faulkner, and Brook Miele.

These two teams provide training and competition in 13 of SOMA's 27 year-round sports, and help the athletes move on to compete in one of the 130 competitions offered state-wide annually. There are 13,000 Special Olympics athletes in Massachusetts, ages 2 to 100 (yes, our centenarian still competes!). The teams are still seeking more Plungers, plus Chickens (who do not go into the water!), and Virtual Plungers (who send a picture of themselves "in water!"). You can register to participate or donate online at specialolympics-ma.org/sponsorplunger, or mail a check payable to"SOMA" to Team Scituate Mariners, 36 Atlantic Ave., Cohasset, 02025. There is a costume parade at 11:15a.m. and the Plunge is at noon. Any questions, call Jeff Nothnagle at 781 383-0895.

Lunches!

Cohasset Elder Affairs will offer this month's Brown Bag Lunch and Movie on Feb 11 at 12 Noon, at 3 North Main St. Join friends for the remake of the John Wayne Classic, "True Grit," starring Jeff Bridges, Matt Damon and Josh Brolin. Bring your own lunch. Popcorn and soft drinks will be offered. No reservations required. Call 781-383-9112 if you need a ride. You may also join the fun for the Valentine's Tea on Tues., Feb 12 at 12 Noon at the Second Congregational Church. Chef Anna's and her helpers will provide treats and treasures. Singer/entertainer Tommy Rull will feature songs of Frank Sinatra, Lou Rawls, Marvin Gaye, Ray Charles, Paul Anka, James Taylor, Billy Joel, and others. Enjoy his musical renditions as he takes us through the years. To reserve your spot, call 781-383-9112 no later than Feb 8.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

BROADWAY

Fisher spent over a month going through the archives to pull the perfect looks together, then spent some quality time with her ironing board getting the period clothing ready for prime time.

Of all the eras that are represented in the various displays, from the 1800s to the 1920s and '40s, Fisher said it's impossible to pick a favorite.

"I love them all," the textile expert said.

While the CHS has an impressive archive, their collection of vintage items only goes up to the '60s; they are hoping to add clothing and accessories from the '70s and '80s and always welcome donations, especially if they have Cohasset provenance.

The Broadway vignettes will be on display in the Paul Pratt Building (106 South Main Street) through the end of the month.

Broadway favorites

Fun, fashion and music come together Saturday night as the CHS displays its vintage wares and the Unicorn Singers provide the entertainment.

The Unicorn Singers are a 20-member mixed chorus whose members hail from all around the South Shore. The group puts on a charity Broadway revue every February, but this year got hired to perform the same show for the CHS fundraiser.

"It's much nicer to do the show more than once," said Unicorn Singers director Margo Euler.

The proceeds from the group's charity concert, at the Hingham House of Prayer on Sunday, benefit the Horizons for homeless children program.

The show features each member of the Unicorn Singers as a soloist taking on songs from several different beloved Broadway shows, including "Ragtime," "Anything Goes," and "Oklahoma!"

Saturday's catered event is a fundraiser for the Cohasset Historical Society. Admission is $50 and includes a cocktail hour in the costume room and the concert, starting at 7 p.m. Tickets are available by calling the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 or emailing cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

The Unicorn Singers will perform their set again the following day in Hingham, raising money for the charity Horizons, which assists homeless children.

The concert, followed by a party, begins at 5 p.m. at the House of Prayer, 916 Main Street in Hingham. Tickets are $25, payable to Horizons. Reservations can be made at 781-749-7826 or jandsdav@comcast.net.

The Cohasset Historical Society is celebrating its 88th anniversary this year with special events planned each month. Check back in the Mariner for details and updates.

SEPAC CORNER

Student skills focus of talk

The Cohasset SEPAC is pleased to host "Executive Function with the Ely Center" presented by Pamela Ely. The presentation will be at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 12th at the Paul Pratt Library.

Ely will be sharing her approach to developing executive functioning skills for all our students (organizing, time awareness, pre-writing skills). She is currently working with the Cohasset District in observing students needs and training the staff through professional development as well as in individual classrooms with on-the-spot teaching opportunities. Executive function and social skills are critical not only for students, but for parents and executives as well. Pamela will help us to assist our children with everything from getting ready in the morning, homework, tests and project completion, as well as time management necessary for active schedules including sports and the arts.

On Wednesday, Feb. 13th at 11am, Cohasset SEPAC will be hosting a morning coffee at the home of Kim Whittemore, SEPAC board member. This coffee group is to allow families a forum to discuss SPED issues with the school district and to gain insight for programs offered in the community. The presentation in is free and all are welcome. Refreshment will be served. For more information, please visit at our website at www.cohasset-sepac.org.

CENTER

is over, the SSL can focus on the next piece of the project: getting ready to break ground. This could happen as early as fall 2013.

"The goal is to have [the center] occupied in 2014, probably toward the end," said Stockwood.

It could take up to a year to complete the building. This might seem rather far off, but the center, as a vision and goal for the SSL and Elder Affairs, is a dream that's already five years in the making.

Now, the SSL hopes to hear some community feedback on the initial interior designs (see photos), which they will listen to and incorporate into the final designs.

"We want to put out the best as possible for the community," Stockwood said. And while the entire community will be considered, "the primary focus is the comfort level for the seniors. It needs to be accessible."

Having that homey aesthetic is also crucial so that the building feels "less institutional."

The SSL's Marita Carpenter added, "It needs to be vibrant."

As the group solicits community feedback, they also hope to continue to gather community support, including financial support for the building project. Once the center is complete, Elder Affairs will move in and concentrate on adding staff and programming — the "end game" of a long, but worthwhile process.

Most of all, the league looks forward to the project's completion and admiring the finished product.

"We're proud to have this be part of our legacy," said Carpenter, "and we look forward to celebrating [the SSL's 100th anniversary] in March" (see sidebar).

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

FIRST PARISH

Organist Joshua Lawton to play at First Parish

Hear the rafters shake when Joshua T. Lawton comes to the Third Sunday Series at First Parish Cohasset. This Cambridge-based organist will present a varied program at 3 p.m., on Sunday, Feb. 17. First Parish is on the green at North Main Street, Cohasset. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children. Take a musical trip around the world for Valentine's Day weekend.

Lawton will present a diverse and diverting program on First Parish's own Hutchings-Morel pipe organ. Music by Johann Sebastian Bach and Felix Mendelssohn will serve as cornerstones to a mix of American and European folk hymns and art songs. Highlights will include an exploration of several American traditions and landscapes, with a romantic stopover in continental Spain and France. Imagine a Valentine's Day getaway to Salamanca and Paris.

A native of Worcester, Lawton is an accomplished organist, pianist, harpsichordist, composer and singer living in the Boston area. He studied pipe organ with Edwin I. Lawrence in Williamstown, and with Peter Sykes in Cambridge. He has earned degrees from the Longy School of Music (master of music in organ performance with distinction) and Williams College (bachelor of arts in English). He is a frequent organ recitalist, and collaborates extensively as an accompanist, chamber musician and continuo player with various choral ensembles and other musicians. He is an active and contributing member of the Boston Chapter of the American Guild of Organists, and also works for Spencer Organ Co., a firm noted for its expertise and care in restoring classic American pipe organs. He served as organist of the First Congregational Church of Natick for nine years, and was recently appointed Minister of Music at Saint Peter's Episcopal Church in Central Square, Cambridge.

Lawton is noted in particular for supporting and performing new and recent music. He is a scholar of the organ works of 20th Century composer Olivier Messiaen. He gave the world premiere of "Transmigration," by Michael J. Veloso, an addition to the repertoire that marries the sonic possibilities of the pipe organ tradition to the craft and artistry of the finest soundscapes of ambient and minimalist music. He demonstrates a wide knowledge of classical music, from Medieval chant through the present day, gleaned from his experience in working with large choral ensembles and small Renaissance and Baroque chamber forces, including Cantilena, Somerville Community Chorus, New Century Voices, Boston University Department of Historical Performance, Longy School of Music Early Music Department, Boston Cecilia, and many other groups.

For more information about the concert, call Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461.

Lawton will present a diverse and diverting program on First Parish's own Hutchings-Morel pipe organ. COURTESY PHOTO

Walter F. Sweeney

Walter F. Sweeney

SAN DIEGO, CA – Walter Francis Sweeney "Walt", 71, of San Diego, CA , formerly of Cohasset on Feb. 2, 2013 died at his home with his children at his side.

Walt achieved fame as a nine time all pro in the NFL with the San Diego Chargers and Washington Redskins. He was the number one draft choice of the Chargers coming out of Syracuse University in 1963. In his hometown of Cohasset Walt led Cohasset High School to its only undefeated season in 1957 as a running back who led the league in rushing with average touchdown runs of 35 yards. Walt also starred in basketball and track.

In an autobiography titled Off Guard which was published last August, Walter retells the story of a turbulent youth in Cohasset as the youngest of six boys growing up in a rowdy household where "brawling and drinking" were the norm.

His father Jack was the victim of a tragic hit and run accident while walking home from work when Walter was only two. Walter's mother Mary, who washed clothes and cleaned homes for her wealthy neighbors, tried to keep the peace at home with the help of Walt's only sister, Mary Louise. In his book Walter states that "we might have been rowdy and we might have been poor but we were always the cleanest kids.... my mother saw to that!"

After his NFL career was completed Walter filed a suit against the NFL charging that he had been forced to take performance enhancing drugs during his early days in the League with the Chargers that led to a life of addiction and drug dependency. He originally won a suit against the league but that decision was later overturned before he received an extra cent.

Walter was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer on January 14th and passed away 19 days later with friends and family at his side. When asked about symptoms of pain, Walter, who played for 13 years through multiple injuries without ever missing a game replied "oh yeah, I felt something here and there but just assumed it was some old injury acting up..."

Walter is survived by his daughter Kristin, his son Patrick and his first wife Jean, all of San Diego. His wife of over 30 years, Nanci, died of cancer last March.

Private memorial services will be held by friends and family in San Diego and Cohasset at a future date.

OUR VIEW

Election season

We are happy to report this week that nomination papers for the Annual Town Election for 2013 will be available on Tuesday, Feb. 12, at the Town Clerk's Office.

The last day to obtain nomination papers will be Thursday, March 21. The last day to submit nomination papers to the Board of Registrars for certification is Tuesday, April 2.

In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. Please note that you are not running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

We are hoping for races for elected town positions. We understand that conducting a campaign in which one is challenged by one or more opponents can be time consuming, expensive and even stressful. However, contests help air the issues and provide opportunity for debate.

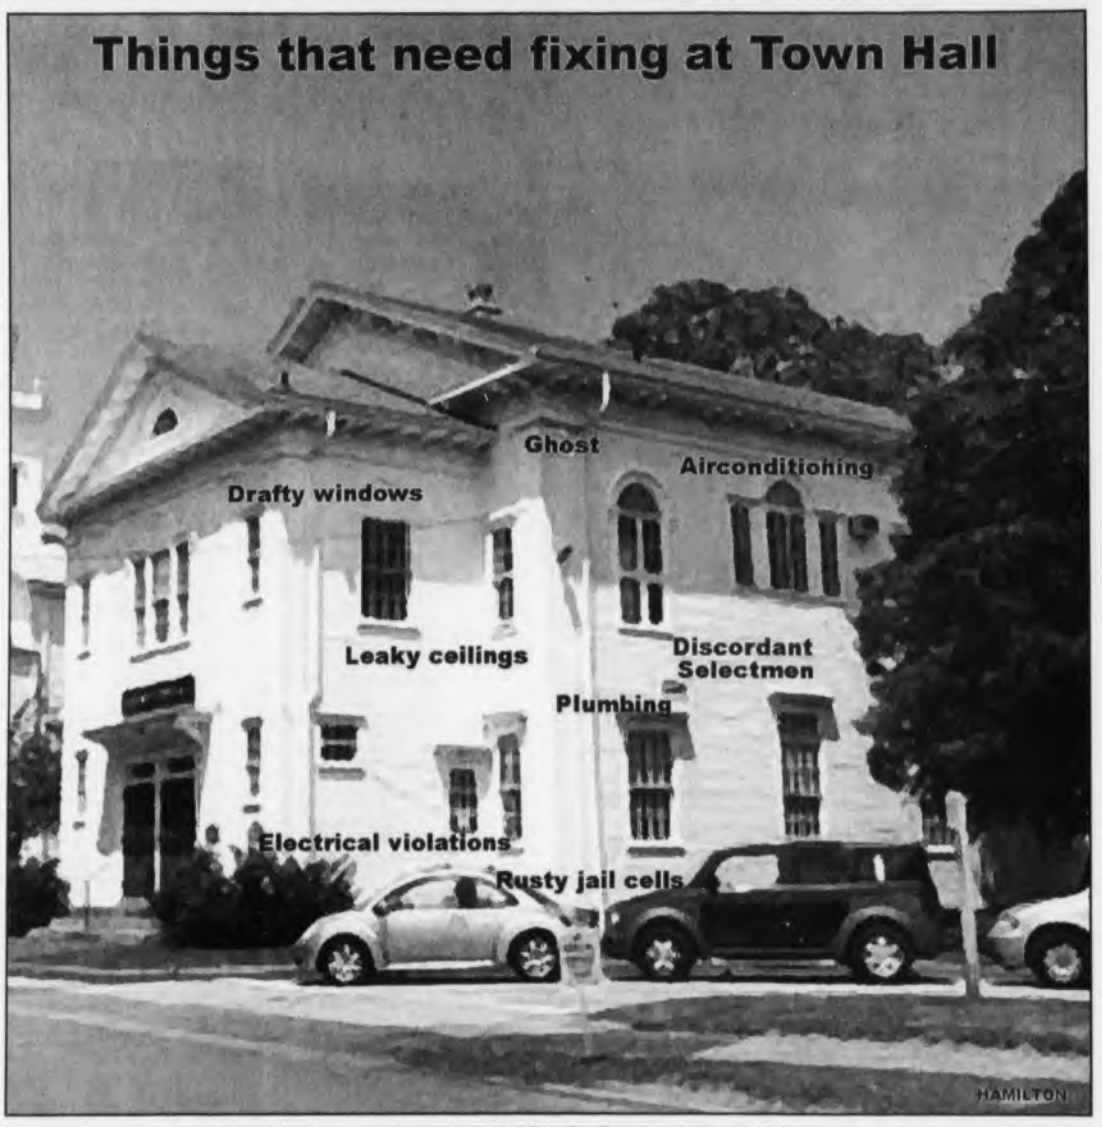
Service to one's community can take many forms from volunteering at the library or schools to seeking elected office. Many consider community service to be a calling and expect little in return other than helping to make a difference.

If you are considering a run – time is of the essence! March 21, the deadline for picking up nomination papers, will be here before you know it.

Marijuana poll

If you voted "yes" on legalizing medical marijuana in the Nov. 6 general election, are you having second thoughts? We wonder if voters realized there could be unintended consequences by legalizing the drug for medical purposes. It is a complicated issue and one that we will continue to write about as town officials wait for the state Dept. of Public Health to finalize regulations.

Did you know that effective immediately, some patients can get hardship prescriptions and begin cultivating marijuana themselves or through a registered caregiver in an "enclosed, secure facility?" However, information on where this would be allowed is lacking.



Please weigh in on our poll at wickedlocalcohasset and let us know if you would vote the same way today as you did on Nov. 6.

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dog owner grateful for support

I lost my dog at Whitney-Thayer Woods in Cohasset last Tuesday morning. The story has a happy ending because she was found. Thank you from the bottom of my heart to: Leslie Badger, Hingham ACO; my friends and fellow volunteers at the Scituate Animal Shelter; Robin Fox of A Fox and Hounds; Kim Sylvester of Maggie's Dog House; Steve, Kathy and Matt Glenzel; Lisa Vaillancourt of Granite State Dog Recovery; everyone who came from near and far to search with me and to offer comfort; and Karen Scarry and her son who suspected the dog sitting alone at the Turkey Hill entrance at dusk was missing her family and brought her home, safe and sound.

Our family is forever grateful to all of you for your searching, advice, kindness and prayers. We are truly fortunate to live in these communities with so many selfless, caring people. Thank you, friends!

Karen Myrick, 19 Tower Road, Hingham

Road litter is an issue

You may have noticed several citizens of Cohasset picking up litter along the roads during their walk/run. While this is likely appreciated, it is a sad commentary on the behavior of some who drive on our roads. I have observed that the prevalent litter is plastic and Styrofoam cups, plastic water bottles, beer cans and bottles and small plastic liquor bottles.

A number of years ago, the Vermont Legislature passed a law providing for a fine for littering. It had an immediate and lasting effect on the landscape. Perhaps the Cohasset BOS could look into a similar law. While we do not want to add additional burden to our police force, the possibility of a hefty contribution to the town accounts may just have the effect of modifying some unwelcome behavior.

Timothy C. Davis, 257 Atlantic Ave.

Heartfelt appreciation

I wish to thank all of the persons who made the wonderful meals and drove Arne and me to many places including the BOS meeting.

My hip is now almost well and I can drive and walk with a cane

Thank you all -we are blessed with such caring people in Cohasset

MARK YOUR CALENDAR

CDTC to host movie night Feb. 15

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will resume its movie nights at 7 p.m., on Friday, Feb. 15, at Paul Pratt Library.. This month's movie is a special feature, "Red Tails," starring Cuba Gooding Jr. The movie tells the story of a crew of African American pilots in the Tuskegee Training Program, who faced segregation and were kept mostly on the ground in World War II. They are finally called to duty under the guidance of Col. A.J. Bullard, played by Terrance Howard. This movie tells the story of the African American, US Army Air Forces aerial combat unit, better know as the Tuskegee Airmen. "Red Tails" is a George Lucas film and was his "passion project" on which he spent $58 million of his own money. The Tuskegee Airmen, the first all African American aerial combat unit, paved the way for the integration of the U.S. armed services. As always CDTC movie nights are free of charge. All are welcome.

Making the evening viewing of "Red Tails" extra special will be an introduction to the movie by Cohasset's own Tuskegee Airman, Jack Bryant. Bryant will speak briefly about the Tuskegee Airman and answer audience questions about his experiences as an Airman. Come and meet Bryant and enjoy "living history."

Director Anthony Hemingway said for him "making the movie carried enormous responsibility." "I went to Tuskegee, Alabama, and actually had the chance to look into the eyes of living history and when I looked into their eyes and connected with them (the Airmen) it registered and the weight of the world was on my shoulders at that point."

GROWING ON THE FARM

Chickens trump turnips

Upon return, the same kale obliging children wanted to see where the chickens were sleeping and check on the goats, bunny, dogs and barnyard cat and how they were resting on that cold night.

JON BELBER

For many years, I have always said that chickens trump turnips. In the farm education business, I can talk about the joys of pulling a fresh, dirty carrot, giving it a rinse and crunching the healthy root. I can talk about snapping a sugar snap pea off the vine to taste the sweet pod. Or certainly the happiness of letting a sun gold tomato fall into the palm of your hand for only a split second, so as to just as fast pop it into your mouth for juicy delight. But usually, when any of these organic, healthy vegetables are mentioned, they pale in comparison to the strut of a hen, the interest of a goat coming to the fence, the cuteness of a bunny, the soft coat of a horse or the chance to pet a loving dog.

All these farm animals, and many animals in general, more often than not command more attention and excitement from children than do any vegetable, flower or herb growing at Holly Hill Farm.

But grow these vegetables we must. Cohasset's only organic vegetable farm tries mightily to provide produce from April to December. Though on a moonlight stroll the other evening, several kids and I did wrestle free some cold, sweet kale, both for the thrill and as a possible flu deterrent.

Upon return, the same kale obliging children wanted to see where the chickens were sleeping and check on the goats, bunny, dogs and barnyard cat and how they were resting on that cold night. The children had already said hello and goodnight to the horses in their stalls, still excited to see passersby on the snowy driveway. The farm dogs were at home, already cozy on the couch, resting from the chill and discontent of winter.

It is the animals that draw the customers down the path to the right of the main barn. The customer might be lured by a son or daughter who came on a field trip and asks "can we feed the goats?" In season, there are usually carrot tops for such a task. Perhaps one catches sight of the upper hen house from the back opening of the barn. In visiting the hens, the veteran visitors know to grab some grass blades to place through the chicken wire.

Each should know about moderation in feeding the barnyard animals, to pay attention to any signs about such action and to use common sense when taking up the notion to feed any animal.

Now that it is winter and the visitors and vegetables are fewer, the animals still need our care and still garner our attention. Each and every day, Jean brings food, water and grain to these hardy animals, often with one or two in tow.

Maybe a piece of homespun fruit scrap is brought from home, carried along the path for a special, healthy snack. The eggs are still coming, about four dozen a week under slowly increasing light of day, through bitter cold days and nights. The goats move around their pen, the bunny huddled with plenty of fur, the horses unable to jaunt on the too icy paths. Shadow the cat circles the barn, staying low to the ground.

All of our animals, off the farm, are also quite aware of winter, with extra protection, caution and making sure to find warm, safe spots as the snow falls and the temperatures fluctuate from a 26 degree "heat wave" to the windy evenings when it feels like 8 below.

I could write much more of the animals for whom we do not overtly feed or care. These hawks fly overhead, the fox leave tracks and the deer roam field edges, to name but a few.

For me, it is the company of a dog, faithful at one's side, perhaps barking out of concern or delight. He will listen as I rant on about the merits of spinach, the hardiness of leeks in early spring and the glory of beans in the height of summer.

I will keep trying to put those turnips at the forefront of farm education, knowing full well it is the animals who rule the roost and garner the affection and attention. As to that steady companion, who greets an owner every day, I better share a carrot with him, as he loves them so.

Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming. His column appears twice monthly in the Mariner. He can be reached by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com. For information on upcoming programs at Holly Hill, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

COMMENTARY

A lesson in love from Newtown

ELISA CASTIGLIONI

And then there is Valentinus' love: the love that becomes action. This is exactly the kind of love that we need.

Soon it will be Valentine's Day, a celebration that I have never considered important. I thought it was invented by chocolate factories and florists to boost their business in the middle of the winter.

Or so I believed until I discovered the story of Valentinus, the early Christian saint who lived in Rome in the third century and after whom the February celebration is named.

According to the legend, Valentinus was imprisoned for performing weddings for soldiers who were forbidden to marry and for ministering to Christians who were persecuted. During his imprisonment, he healed the daughter of his jailer Asterius. Before his execution he wrote her a farewell note signed "from your Valentine". This letter was the first Valentine card ever written.

Since I read this story, I started thinking about the meaning of love. There are so many different shades and kinds of love. The romantic love, the platonic love, the parent's love, the grandparent's love, the love for nature, the philophical and scientific love for The Truth, the mystical love for God. Passion. Friendship is for sure a kind of love. And then there is Valentinus' love: the love that becomes action. This is exactly the kind of love that we need.

Challenging the rules and culture of his time, Valentinus did what he believed was right. He married soldiers and Christians. And he even made time to heal his jailer's daughter. He became a legend. A lesson in love.

Today the Newtown families are giving us a lesson in love. The kind of utter love that makes you face the gun-bullies at the pro-gun legislation hearing demanding gun control. As Jesse's father did at the Legislative Office Building in Hartford, Conn. He was holding in his arms the beautiful portrait of himself and his little baby.

The kind of love that makes you leave your precious son's coffin open and show his face with no more mouth to the Governor of Connecticut, so he won't forget and will act to prevent such immense tragedy from happening again. As Noah's Mom. "I needed it to have a face for him ... If there is ever a piece of legislation that comes across his desk, I needed it to be real for him." She explained.

The kind of love that makes you start a fund for autistic children in memory of your dearest treasure and his beloved teacher. As Dylan's parents did (Dylan Hockley Memorial Fund).

The kind of love that makes you demand a decent dialogue over guns. As Daniel's parents did. "Make the debate over guns worthy of our son." They said. And a dialogue begins with listening.

The kind of love that makes the Newtown parents share with us their children's sacred memories and pictures. They let us into their hearts. Now we need to be very, very gentle. Those are wounded hearts. Help them heal.

We need love to heal. We need as many Valentine's Days as possible. Love will triumph. It's true. But only if we turn our love into action. As Valentinus did.

On this Valentine's Day, wear a heart with the intials of the child or the children you love. (For ideas see the One Million Moms for Gun Control Facebook page. It is full with hearts.) Your daughter, son, nephew, grandchild, students, neighbor, your friends' children. There are so many ways to be a mother that do not include the physical act of giving birth. They simply include love.

And if you are still looking for the perfect Valentine gift, here is a tip: "Over the Rainbow" sang by The Sandy Hook Elementary children. You find it on Amazon for $1.29. It's a donation to Newtown. A contribution of love.

SENIOR SCENE

Valentine tea is Tuesday!

LOUISE SMULLEN

The first seminar of the New Year was presented by Gwen Morgan and Alexandra Herman of South Shore Hospital. The subject was Giving the Gift of Preparedness to your loved ones. Alexandra spoke about the importance of having a healthcare proxy. Anyone 18 years of age and over should have one. This gives someone you trust to carry out your wishes if you are seriously ill. However, it is wise to let all your loved one know your wishes. If this is not done sometimes it may cause division in a family.

Gwen has published a book titled "What if——Workbook." In it are pages to fill out with information in case of serious illness, accident or death. One may list people to be contacted, where bank statements, insurance policies and other important papers are kept, and if there are any loans to be paid. There are also pages for listing one's personal last wishes and what one would like to have put into their obituary. These are samples of what you may put into the book.

On a lighter note, Jean Hanson and her fourth grade class came from Deer Hill School to join us for lunch one day. They entertained with some song, dance, and magic tricks. Each student had an attached flower to a pen, which they gave to us. The girl sitting beside me interviewed me at length about my life so far, then gave me a picture she had drawn.

At the seminar on Jan. 23 the presenter was Lea Goddard, E.D., of Cohasset Sunrise. Her subject was memory loss – what is normal and what is not. She pointed out the differences between dementia, which can be helped, and Alzheimer's disease. She stressed the importance of getting help as soon as possible if someone you know undergoes a distinct personality change or seems to be confused.

The last seminar of the month was presented by Chris Plant from the Mass. Equipment Distribution Program. This offers adaptive equipment to people who have hearing or vision loss. Chris brought with him different and interesting telephones. There is even one with Braille. These phones are free to those who qualify. An application is required along with your doctor's signature.

Monday, Feb. 11 is Movie Day. This takes place at the Center at noon. Bring your own lunch, and CEA will provide popcorn and soft drinks. This month's movie is the remake of "True Grit."

The annual Valentine Tea will take place at noon, on Feb. 12, at the Second Congregational Church. Come and enjoy dainty tea sandwiches and delicious desserts. Singer Tommy Rull will entertain with a musical journey through the years. Be sure to call 781-383-9112 to make a reservation.

On Feb. 20, Mark Price of the HomeCorps Borrower Recovery Initiative will speak. This program helps those who have lost their homes to foreclosure with finding new housing, financial assistance and family stabilization resources.

On Feb. 27, the presenter will be Bob Ward, Office Manager for H & R Block of Cohasset. He will have a Federal Income Tax update for seniors.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Mariner.

A big part of our Inner Circle initiative has been looking for creative ways to connect or reconnect with the community.

Over the past couple of years, we've been focusing on reader callouts to encourage folks to send in photographs on various subjects and topics that might be somewhat seasonal or correlating with a holiday.

For instance, we're in the middle of soliciting winter-related photos, although for the second year in a row Mother Nature isn't cooperating as she usually does. A dusting here and a few flurries there haven't quite produced the winter wonderland that makes for the stunning shots we're used to seeing in New England.

Those reader callouts have produced multiple photo galleries for our websites and have helped bolster our Your News page in print.

The next big thing (sorry Samsung) is focusing on community events that feature a lot of familiar faces. We're calling it "Seen on Scene."

Seen on Scene is really nothing new, like a lot of our Inner Circle initiatives. You've "seen" these types of photos before, we just didn't have a catchy name to associate them with, or a philosophy to help shape a strategy to be shared across newsrooms.

Seen on Scene is basically pictures of local people at local events, shot close up, with faces clearly visible, usually in groups. A lot of community events lend themselves well to these types of pictures. We'll be looking to those who run events at the senior center, library, schools, churches, as well as to local groups and organizers of community social events to help us in a number of ways.

First, we'll need you to continue to tell us about your event. Or if for some reason you have never contacted an editor about an event because you didn't think it was worth covering or you've stopped contacting us because you've been turned away, we want you to reach out to us.

Second, we may need some additional help beyond just letting us know about your event.

With staff and freelancers not always available at the time of the event, we may need you to pick up a camera or a smartphone and snap some shots for us. If that turns out to be the case, the guidelines are pretty simple. We're looking for photos that have two or three people in them who are facing the camera and their faces are clearly visible.

In many cases, we'll want to use your photos on our Your News page in the newspaper in addition to the online photo gallery. For those photos, we'll need information for the caption describing who is in the picture (from left to right) and details describing what's happening in the frame.

Think of Seen on Scene as the society page that many newspapers used to run on a regular basis. We've gotten away from those types of photos in recent years, but we know people like to not only see themselves, but also others who may have been at the same event or other events happening in town or around the region.

It's just another way to connect with the community.

GOP POSSIBILITIES

Cohasset man considers senate race

Norfolk rep Winslow forms committee

By Matt Murphy
STATE HOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Gomez has been critical of the President Barack Obama's handling of the strike on Osama bin Laden, writing an op/ed in May for the Cohasset Mariner...

Without the luxury of much time to decide, Republican state Rep. Daniel Winslow on Tuesday announced that he would open a committee to test the waters for a potential campaign for U.S. Senate, a step short of pulling nomination papers that will allow him to begin fundraising.

Since Scott Brown announced on Friday that he would not enter the race, surprising the GOP establishment, the Republican Party has been scrambling to find a candidate to run for the U.S. Senate seat vacated last week by John Kerry. A succession of potential high-profile candidates has announced that they will not enter the race.

Republicans have little time to find a candidate to run for the U.S. Senate seat, with 10,000 nomination signatures due to local election officials by Feb. 27.

Gabriel Gomez, a Cohasset resident and former Navy SEAL, is also giving serious consideration to entering the race as a Republican. Gomez, who works in financial services, has been talking with Republican leaders and campaign operatives throughout the state, according to party officials.

Doug Bennett, a Dorchester resident and a self-described "leader within the Massachusetts Liberty Movement," is the only declared candidate in the race on the Republican side, though he is a relatively unknown figure and it remains to be seen whether he can qualify for the ballot. Bennett said his platform will be to end the wars, audit the Federal Reserve, and protect civil liberties.

Gomez was in Washington this week, reportedly meeting with officials from the National Republican Senatorial Committee, according to the Boston Globe and other media outlets. He was accompanied by close Romney friend and advisor Ron Kaufman, who is a Republican state committeeman from Massachusetts, according to the reports.

Gomez has been critical of the President Barack Obama's handling of the strike on Osama bin Laden, writing an op/ed in May for the Cohasset Mariner that was posted on the Cohasset Wicked Local website giving the president credit for ordering the raid on his compound in Pakistan but criticizing Obama's messaging and willingness to take credit for the attack over the bravery of the SEALs involved.

While donating to Romney, Healey, former President George W. Bush and other Republican causes, Gomez also gave $1,000 to liberal Democrat Alan Khazei's Senate campaign in 2009, according to state and federal campaign finance records. He donated $2,500 to Romney's 2012 presidential campaign.

Winslow, a second-term state representative from Norfolk, is a former district court judge and chief legal counsel to former Gov. Mitt Romney. Since arriving on Beacon Hill, he has been an outspoken member of the House minority party and shown a willingness to engage and work with both Democrats and Republicans in the Legislature.

Oxford Republican Jennie Caissie of the Governor's Council is also seriously considering a run. Another potential candidate on the GOP side is Senate Minority Leader Bruce Tarr of Gloucester.

Former Gov. William Weld, former Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey, former Senate Minority Leader Richard Tisei and Tagg Romney, the oldest son of Mitt Romney, are among the Republicans who have announced in recent days that they will not enter the contest.

Reps. Edward Markey and Stephen Lynch are competing for the Democratic nomination in the June 25 special election. The primaries are scheduled to be held on April 30.

New Town Hall phone system

If you have called an office at Town Hall this week, you probably noticed that the answering system has changed.

Last week, after Town Hall's voicemail module "died," according to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, the system received a temporary, new voicemail configuration until a full phone system upgrade can be done.

Now, when you call the Town Manager's office, or Board of Health, Dept. of Public Works, or other departments, you will hear an automated answering system that offers menu options and asks the caller to dial an extension.

The town's website has not yet been updated with a list of all the extensions for various departments, employees' existing extensions have stayed the same. Milanoski said that the complete list will be published soon.

In the meantime, the acting town manager said, "We're temporarily repairing the entire system; we apologize for any inconvenience and change, but are lucky it's still alive."

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Boys edged in epic battle

By John Botelho
For The Brockton Enterprise

When the South Shore League-leading Rockland High School boys basketball team traveled to Cohasset on Friday to meet the second place Skippers, a tug-of-war broke out between the teams.

They volleyed leads back and forth for most of the night - 18 lead changes in all - before Rockland's Tyler Gibson put home a thunderous slam dunk with 3:30 to go to put the Bulldogs (14-1, 11-1) ahead for good. They finally won, 61-59, to put themselves in the SSL driver's seat.

The loss was a tough one for the Skippers as far as the South Shore League battle goes, but it was also a great

GIRLS HOCKEY

Fight to the finish

Icewomen just miss tourney invitation

The Hanover Mariner

The Cohasset/Hanover Girl's Hockey Team has had an exciting few weeks as they tried to rally past a slow start to the season and qualify for the MIAA Tournament.

After starting out the season a little slowly the girls are really picking up some momentum heading into the final weeks of the season.

"As the midway point in the season (2-5-2) came we had a much better idea of how to prepare for the opponents," said coach Deb Beal. "We were playing with a lot more confidence and a lot more trust. Our leading scorers began to emerge."

Julia Dares and Taylor Graf, both from Hanover are leading the team with 14 and 7 goals respectively.

One particular game left a mark on the team.

"In early January we faced a very tough Norwell team and played them to a 1-1 tie," Beal said. "That was a game that we left knowing we could play better and we were eager to face them again. Last week we played them again on our home ice and going into the game Norwell did not have a SEMGHL loss to any team in the league. We came out battling and after a few back and forth goals we were able to hold on for the win 5-4.

"That gave the girls quite a boost and prepared them for the long road ahead of trying to qualify for post season MIAA play."

Beal said it was still a daunting task with little wiggle room.

"With eight games remaining we needed to win 5.5 of them, that meant we could lose two and tie one and the rest had to be wins," Beal said. "We played some great hockey and won the next two (Mashpee, Quincy), lost one (Scituate) and tied one (DY). Mathematically we were still alive with four games to go. We again rose to the occasion and beat Latin Academy and Norwell."

Next up was a boat trip to Martha's Vineyard.

Wrestlers finish regular season with 18 wins

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

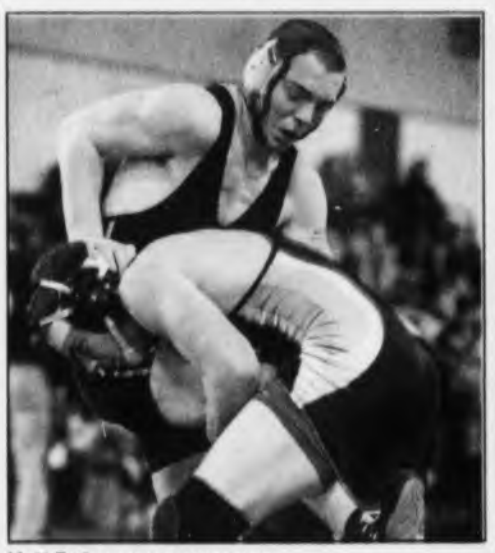
The Cohasset wrestling team finished the regular season with a solid performance in a quad-meet against Hopkinton, Assabet Valley Regional and Northbridge on Saturday.

Cohasset took two of the three meets, losing the morning match to Hopkinton 42-30 before downing Northbridge 36-6 and Assabet Valley 42-12.

"We were hoping to beat Hopkinton, but after the long bus ride it felt like we were still on the bus," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "We weren't quite ready."

Still, the two wins gave Cohasset 18 wins and a good feeling heading into Saturday's (or Sunday's depending on weather) South Sectional Tournament at Foxboro.

The 18 wins matched last season's win total, and tied the school record for wins, which was an accomplishment for a generally young team.



"I'm pleased with it," Sweeney said. "The young kids really wrestled well."

Former SSCC pro recognized as U.S. Kids Golf Top 50 Kids Teacher

The Hingham Journal

Scituate, Massachusetts native Holly Taylor of Port St. Lucie, Fla, is among the class of the Top 50 Kids Teachers for 2012, as announced by U.S. Kids Golf.

Taylor has been a junior golf instructor for 26 years and is currently the Director of Golf at the PGA Center for Golf Learning and Performance. This is the first time that she has been named a Top 50 Kids Teacher by U.S. Kids Golf.

"My passion is teaching junior golfers the game of golf," Taylor said. "It is truly humbling yet satisfying to be recognized as a U.S. Kids Golf Top 50 Kids Teacher in 2012 for my contributions to junior golf and growing the game that I love so much."

The award, in its ninth year, recognizes golf professionals across North America who focus much of their time and energy on developing young golfers in their communities. The instructors are judged on several criteria, including percentage of time devoted to kids programs, creativity, communication and efforts to grow the game.

Taylor, who grew up in Scituate, graduated from Boston College and Notre Dame Academy. She worked as the golf pro at the South Shore Country Club before moving to Florida.

This year's class represents 19 states, Australia and Canada and includes teachers who work at public, private and resort courses.

"The Top 50 Kids Teachers represent a group of professionals who are dedicated to helping kids develop their skills and their love of the game," said Dan Van Horn, founder and president of U.S. Kids Golf. "We are pleased to recognize their talents and commitment"

The 2012 Top 50 Kids Teachers will be recognized Friday, January 25, at the PGA Merchandise Show in Orlando.

Norwell/Cohasset sails to victory

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset/Norwell gymnastics team has had its share of ups and downs this season, battling injuries and facing some tough competition. But the girls remained composed throughout, and their perseverance, patience, and hard work paid off in a recent meet against Scituate.

Norwell/Cohasset beat the Sailors, 120.50-98.1 and saw the return of Elizabeth Coletta, who had been out with a concussion. Coletta scored an impressive 7.90 on the floor and a 7.50 on the beam.

Speaking of the beam, Cohasset/Norwell has had a tough time balancing on it this season, but against Scituate, the girls turned in one of if not the best performances on the beam this season. Mimi Waters led the team with a 7.75, followed by Emma Basso (7.5), and Kelsey McCunney (7.2).

The meet started with the bars, and Basso scored a 7.4. McCunney earned a 7.2 Next came the vault, where Basso led the team with an 8.05. McCunney and Carly Oremus both scored a 7.8. This gave Norwell/Cohasset an 11 point lead after two events.

The night ended with the floor exercise, one in which Basso scored an 8.1 and McCunney scored an 8.0.

FOOTBALL

Former NFL standout from Cohasset remembered

Cohasset friend fondly recalls Sweeney, former standout lineman in NFL

By Dick Trust
For The Patriot Ledger

Chris Ford was always there for his good friend, Walt Sweeney, so it was only fitting that the two spent some happy – and clearly emotional – hours together the day before Sweeney died.

Big Walt the football player passed away last Saturday at his home in San Diego, and Chris the real estate man was there Friday – the two old buds from Cohasset reminiscing about anything and everything that crossed their minds.

"I was passing around to him and his friends some pictures of my wife, who had passed away," Ford recalled Wednesday. "I said, 'Walter, I know you always had a little spot in your heart for my wife, Karen. You had a crush on her.' He smiled and said, 'Yeah, I guess I did, Chris.'

"I said, 'Just keep in mind, if you get up to see The Big Guy ahead of me and you run into Karen, remember, she's mine.' He said, 'Well, I think I'm gonna get up there ahead of you, Chris, and we'll see what happens.'"

Although it hurt to lose his friend just four days earlier, Ford laughed heartily at the exchange. Sweeney had found the humor in it, too.

"He could laugh about it," Ford said. "He kept his sense of humor right through."

Sweeney, whose wife of 30 years, Nanci, died of cancer last March, did get to see The Big Guy first. Cancer of the pancreas and liver was detected 14 days into 2013. Less than three weeks later he was gone. The former Cohasset High School, Syracuse University and professional football standout was 71.

"When he told me, I said, 'I think you're a victim of your famous tolerance for pain.' He never missed a game or a snap in 13 years of pro ball, 181 games. After one game, they discovered he had broken his forearm in the first quarter and he just kept playing."

Sweeney is a legend in his native Cohasset, where he was a linebacker on defense and high-scoring running back fueling the offense on the high school football team that was coached by Evie Dorr and went undefeated (9-0) in 1957. He was a big kid, 6-3, 215, when he graduated in 1959.

Ford was a second-string center and first-string defensive end on that storied squad.

After his days at Cohasset High, where he also played basketball and ran track, Sweeney starred at Syracuse University and was picked No. 2 overall by San Diego in the 1963 American Football League draft.

He played 11 seasons with the Chargers and finished his career with two years on the Washington Redskins. For nine straight seasons Sweeney was either an AFL All-Star guard or, after the merger, an NFL Pro Bowler.

A Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic, Sweeney is in the Cohasset High School Athletic Hall of Fame and the San Diego Chargers Hall of Fame.

In his autobiography released last year and titled "Off Guard," Sweeney wrote that he and other Charger players were given performance-enhancing drugs at a time when little was known about such substances and their effects. Sweeney battled drug and alcohol addiction later in life, undergoing on-and-off periods of rehab.

He sued the NFL, claiming he was forced to take the performance-enhancing drugs during the early days of his playing career, and was awarded $1.8 million. However, the decision was overturned.

Walt Sweeney was thin, frail, in the last days of his life. He was under hospice care but alert enough to carry on a conversation.

"One of the most moving things last Friday was when Walter read a letter he had received from a friend and former Cohasset teammate, Roy MacDonald," Ford said.

"The nature of the letter was, 'Walt, memories of you as a football legend are strong in my mind (but) what I remember most is being with you on a summer day on Sandy Beach (in Cohasset), working on our tans, and you had just been accepted to Syracuse. You were kind of nonchalant about it.

"'Then I noticed you were reading a paperback book, a profound Russian novel. Turns out it was the Dostoevsky novel, "The Brothers Karamazov." I've got to admit you were a much brighter and deeper person than I had realized.'

"Walt also read 'The Idiot' by Dostoevsky that summer. Walt said to me last Friday, 'I guess he figured out I wasn't an idiot after all.' Then he said, 'You know, Chris, this letter and the thought behind it means more to me than all of the football recognition I got.'

"He's 18 years old – we were lifeguards that summer – and he read both of those books, which the rest of us weren't reading. A lot of people don't know that Walter had a deeper side and was a lot brighter than they realized."

Chandler Skolnick was a big winner Saturday, winning all three matches he wrestled at 152.

"That was a great way for him to finish," Sweeney said. "He could be a middle seed this weekend."

Heading into the weekend, Sweeney feels like his wrestlers should do well and pick up some decent seeds.

The top four wrestlers in each weight class advance to the Div. 3 State Championship Tournament.

"Froio and Livingstone should get to seeds at their weights," he said, referring to sophomore Matt Froio (170) and senior captain Mike Livingstone (182 or 190). "We should have some good seeds.

"Harry Helbock is in a tough weight class (113). He wrestled well. We're hoping for a high seed. Greg Berube (senior captain) should get a top seed at 120."

Helbock, a junior, missed much of the early part of the season with an injury, but wrestled well in his return, while Berube was 20-8 heading into the weekend quad.

Sweeney mentioned freshman Sean Mavilia as another youngster who has a chance for a higher seed at 126, along with Joe Sestito.

"Joe Sestito has a pretty good record, but he's in one of the tougher weight classes," Sweeney said. "He'll have his work cut out for him."

Freshman Nick Hall will also be in the mix at 138.

"Nick has a lot of natural talent," Sweeney said. "He's at a tough weight for freshmen. He finished the regular season with a winning record. At that weight it's pretty good for a freshman."

Seniors Axel Seppala and Graham Bell are both possibilities at 145.

"I'm not sure which one of them takes it right now," Sweeney said. "I'm waiting on some injuries to see."

In the 160 division, junior John Nolan gets the nod.

"He has a .500 record at 160," Sweeney said of the tough division. "We'll see how he does."

Sweeney said his team is ready.

"I think the kids are excited," he said. "They're a great group of kids. They have a real togetherness. They support each other and do well. They wrestled a tough schedule to prepare us for the sectionals."

As far as any surprises, Sweeney won't make any predictions.

"I wouldn't want to jinx anybody when he was asked if there might be a wrestler battling from a low seed to win big. "I'm always happy with the way we perform at sectionals. If there are surprises, it usually goes the other way. The best wrestlers are usually in the best weight classes."

If the tournament doesn't go Saturday, it may be Sunday.

"The weather could change it," Sweeney said. "But it has to be before States. There isn't a lot of room for change."

test for Cohasset as it heads into the stretch run of the season and into the playoffs.

It was a test that the Skippers passed, battling Rockland into the closing seconds with a legitimate chance to win the game.

Cohasset moved on quickly, notching a 63-40 win over Southeastern Regional in a non-league game Tuesday night.

The win improved the Skippers to 14-3 and gave the squad another win in the bigger goal of a higher seed in the Div. 4 South Sectional Tournament.

Christian Davis led Cohasset's charge with 19 points in the win, and Shane Haggerty chipped in 16.

Gibson, who has committed to UMass-Lowell, put forth one of the best efforts of his career as he piled up 23 points, 19 rebounds and six blocks in the win.

One of those blocks came on the possession before the dunk, and after the Skippers (13-3, 10-3 SSL) had already pulled down four offensive rebounds. Unable to finish and add to their one-point lead, a fifth shot went up, but thanks to Gibson's long arms the ball was swatted into the hands of Rockland senior point guard Bryan Tavares.

After the Bulldogs set up their offense, Tavares, who finished with 17 points (five 3-pointers) and four assists, sent a pass to Gibson in the middle of the paint.

The 6-6 forward took care of the rest, spinning to the hoop and going up for a powerful two-handed slam.

Gibson sealed the win on the last play of the game, when Cohasset's Shane Haggerty attempted a potential tying jumper from the elbow. Gibson swatted the ball out of bounds as time expired.

"He's a defensive force who changes a lot of stuff we usually are able to do," said Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero.

Rockland also got 14 points and nine rebounds from junior Matt Nicholson, and Liam Ball chipped in with six points and four rebounds, as well as several headsup hustle plays on both ends of the floor.

While Rockland's seniors led the way on the offensive end, so too did Cohasset's. Christian Davis scored a team-high 20 points, matching Tavares with five 3s of his own, to go with five assists and three steals.

Haggerty, a 1,000 career-point scorer, poured in 18 points with four steals, three blocks and three assists.

"In that fourth period, Christian hit three 3s. Shane Haggerty was outstanding again," said Ruggiero.

Henry Brown chipped in 11 points, five rebounds and four blocks.

Cohasset had been scheduled to play Monomoy on the road tonight, but that game was played last night.

The girls also played Monomoy last night.

team that we knew was ready for us," Beal said. "They had the home ice advantage for sure, it's a long morning traveling to the boat and then across to the island. We started off a little sluggish and not doing the little things with the diligence that was necessary. We made some "panicked" mistakes and before we knew it were down 2-0."

Beal's squad recovered and made it a game.

"The one thing about this team is that they never stop fighting, they never look and the scoreboard and think they've already lost," she said. "We play until the final horn at the end of the third period."

The never-give-up attitude made a huge impact.

"Many of the one goals wins we have are because players like Taylor Graf, Valerie Farren, Julia Dares and Nicole Farren have worked tirelessly to create the opportunities to score in the final minutes," Beal said. "They very often keep us coaches and the parents on the edge of our seats. They play well under pressure I guess.

"At Martha's Vineyard though, our luck ran out and we ended losing 4-2, with that loss we also ended our hope of any post season play.

"As a coach I've been there more than a few times and one of the hardest things I've had to do is face that group of athletes who have just given everything they have in the arena and have not met their goal. Their minds are not clear and they are a storm of frustration, anger, sadness and exhaustion. They always recover but those moments in the locker room are the ones that motivate and inspire the younger players to get back to that place and change the outcome in the seasons to come. This is a very special group because not only did they start a girl's hockey program, they also had to create new friends and learn to trust people they hardly knew. The growth of the program alone in these past three years is so impressive. I am so very proud of all these kids, they put themselves out there and they worked hard and although what they got out of it is a little unclear to them right now as they move on they will look back and see how wonderful the opportunity was and how even though they didn't win a state championship or a league title they are a very big part of their schools history. They should be very proud."

Wednesday, Cohasset/Hanover honored six graduating seniors, Taylor Graf and Kelsi Orcutt from Hanover and Nicole Farren, Lauren McLellan, Kylie Coffman and Meaghan Kearney from Cohasset.

Here's a look at the past few games.

Last week, the girls hockey team had two huge upset victories. The Skipping Indians first went to the home of Northeastern University,Matthews Arena, and took on Latin Academy.

Latin Academy was riding an eight game unbeaten streak, and held onto second place in the S.E.M.G.L. east division. The home team came out strong and jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first period. The C./ H. girls came out in the second period focused and ready to play. Leading a four-goal barrage for the visitors were freshmen sharpshooters, Ari Soldano, and Sam Taylor. Also adding to the onslaught were leading scorer junior Julia Dares, and super sophomore Valerie Farren. The 4-2 victory proved to the girls they could play with anyone in the league.

Next on the schedule were the girls from Norwell. The Clippers were undefeated in league play, and had only one loss on the year.

They are led by leading scorer Tori Dinger,and defense stalwart Cassidy Nadeu. Once again the C/H girls came out slow, and Norwell took advantage, jumping out to a 1-0 lead.

The C/H girls regrouped quickly, and Taylor Graf equaled the game 1-1 on a rebound by the side of the goal. The goal ignited the girls, and two minutes later Julia Dares scored on an end-to-end rush. The momentum was totally in favor of the Skipping Indians. Not to be outdone, Graf had a nifty end to end rush as well, making it 3-1.

Meanwhile in net, freshmen Shea Kearney was making some outstanding saves. The C/H Defense,led by senior captain Nicole Farren,along with juniors Jenna O'Brien,and MacKenzie Dunphy,and Freshmen Molly Cameron, were keeping the explosive Clippers at bay. Once again Dares found the back of the net after blowing by a Norwell defender,and showing the crowd her blazing speed. The C/H girls entered the third leading 4-1.

Norwell then showed why they are on top of the league.

Led by Dinger, the Clippers came roaring back with two unanswered goals making it 4-3. Coach Beal settled the C/H girls and got them to refocus. Once again Dares went end to end, beating the Norwell goalie and making the score 5-3,while getting her first hat trick of the year. Into the game Beal inserted Kayla Garrity,and Erin Smith. Both girls gave the girls of C/H a lift with their hustle and determination.

With only two minutes left Norwell struck again putting in a rebound by the sprawled Kearney to draw within one goal. The Clippers pulled their goalie in hope of escaping with a tie. The girls of C/H would not be denied, with Kearney making more heart stopping saves and Graf dribbling out the clock.

The girls of C/H prevailed 5-4 capping off the best week of the year. Next up is Martha's Vineyard ,then senior night vs Marshfield slammed into the boards in a game against Medway on January 31.

This unfortunate mishap resulted in a concussion and Queenan's return to the line up is unknown at this time.

The South Shore Conference is shaping up to be a dogfight to the finish. The perennial favorites; Cohasset, Abington, Rockland and Norwell are all jockeying for the playoffs.

Saturday night Cohasset coach Bob Walsh and his Skippers had their backs up against the playoff wall.

Before playing an aggressive Norwell team – a team that beat Cohasset 7-4 (Cohasset's largest margin of defeat.) just a few weeks prior, there was some chatter.

The rumor in the Cohasset locker room - the Norwell Clippers had posted a "premature" "W" on their calendar. A win or a tie would secure a playoff spot for Norwell. The Skippers needed a win to keep their playoff hopes alive.

With 124 goals in Cohasset's rear view window – this year's team relies on goaltending, defense and two-way hockey, the scene was set: A sell-out crowd swarmed the Connell Arena in Weymouth.

The Cohasset faithful were hungry for revenge against a league rival. (CHS with a record of 6-8-0 against NHS with a record of 9-5-1.)

After one period the score was 0-0. Thanks to the flawless play of junior goaltender Brandon Winn. Winn was a dominant force in net. His grit, determination and catlike balance frustrated the sharpshooters of Norwell.

At 12:23 of the second frame, sophomore Adam Benson put Cohasset on the scoreboard.

Chris Lund broke the play out of the defensive zone with a tape-to-tape pass to Terence Doonan.

Doonan recognized a streaking Benson and sent a saucer pass over the (offensive) blue line. At which point – Benson did what he does best – he fired the puck "5 hole" which swiftly found the back of the Norwell net.

The crowd went insane. Coach Pete Afanasiw almost broke his hand pounding the glass in jubilation. The Skipper faithful were happy and apprehensive at the same time. They have witnessed a few too many one-goal losses to put this game in the win column.

Period three started with Cohasset up 1-0 and Norwell was pressing. The line of senior captain Conor Goetz, junior forward Colin Whelan and Derek Benson played their best two-way hockey of the year - suffocating the Norwell offense.

At 10:13 of the third period Adam Benson struck again. This time the feed came from Michael Lund and Terence Doonan. M. Lund gained the neutral zone and fed T. Doonan – while Benson broke to the net – received the pass and roofed his second goal of the game.

Up 2-0 with over 10 minutes to play Norwell went on the attack. Winn faced an assortment of shots from the Clippers offense - he was outstanding between the pipes.

The line of Tommy Powers, Jeff Powers and Curtis Golden were looking like the Law firm of Powers, Powers and Golden. High priced but worth every penny .

With 3:29 remaining in the game – Norwell erased the bagel on the scoreboard. A breakout pass from Alex Furguson found Cormel Longergan streaking through center ice. Longergan cut the Skippers lead in half with a picturesque top shelf goal.

Cohasset has seen too many one-goal leads evaporate in the last few minutes of a game. Junior forward Chris Cohen displayed a sense of urgency he wasn't going to let this game slip away. Cohen never allowed Norwell a chance to set up a scoring bid.

The buzzer sounded, Cohasset won 2-1 in a hard fought battle. The home crowd was ecstatic . Andrew Barrett (#1 FAN) could be seen carrying football captains Jake Herth and Shane Haggerty on his broad shoulders. Quarterback Chris Haggerty's whereabouts were unknown.

Coach Walsh will let his team enjoy this victory for one day - then he'll start preparing his troops for the next game. Cohasset will play (first place) Abington this Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Connell Rink in Weymouth.

We hope to see you there .

College Summer Programs FOR HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

BERKLEE COLLEGE OF MUSIC

All that jazz, funk, rock and more

By Carole LaMond
Correspondent

World-renowned Berklee College of Music is in full swing during the summer with an exciting Five Week Summer Performance Program for aspiring musicians ages 15 and older.

One thousand students of all levels of ability — from those learning the fundamental skills to advanced performers and every level in between — can choose from a plethora of courses in theory and musical styles in the core curriculum including jazz, funk/fusion, pop/rock, or pop/R&B for vocalists, as well as electives ranging from Turntables to Musical Theater.

"Our five-week summer program is the largest and most comprehensive contemporary summer music program anywhere," said Dana Acker, director of the Office of Summer Programs at Berklee. "Whatever your particular interest may be, we have a program. It's mostly about performance and making them better performers. They get private lessons, labs, theory, musicianship and ensemble, but we also have electives they can choose. The program culminates at the end of the five weeks with students performing with their ensembles. There are about 150 ensembles."

Classes are taught by Berklee faculty as well as visiting artists and clinicians. A highlight of the 2013 program is visiting artist Guthrie Govan, a famous guitarist.

Additional workshops, independent of the five-week program, include the Mark O'Connor Summer String Program and the Victor Wooten Summer Bass Weekend.

About a third of the students attend the five-week summer program between their junior and senior year of high school. The program is ideally suited for older high school students to help them determine if they want to study at the college level or pursue music as a career choice.

"In any fall entering class at Berklee about a third will have attended one of our summer programs, and about a third of the summer kids will apply for undergraduate admission, so their summer grades are important," said Acker. "Summer students will get a much better idea of Berklee and it will give them a leg up in the first couple of semesters of the undergraduate program. The program is a good opportunity to test drive Berklee for five weeks."

The campus is bustling during the summer with about 2,700 students in various music programs or workshops. The summer program, now in its 27th year, has accommodated students who play instruments from accordion to a nyckelharpa. Students can also explore musical electives from songwriting to drum circles.

International students, from over 70 countries, make up a third of the summer students.

"The exchange of cultures and ideas is a big part of what Berklee is about, but it is really reflective of the five-week program," said Acker.

The summer program has dormitory space for 600 students on campus; other students will be referred to off-campus housing. Many students choose to commute which is a way to save money on housing.

There are some scholarships available.

In addition to the five-week program Berklee runs about 20 additional summer programs ranging from two days to a week long, most performance-oriented for instrumental or vocal students.

WESTFIELD STATE UNIVERSITY

CSI camp teaches teens about criminal justice

By Carole LaMond
Correspondent

Westfield State University, a scenic campus set on 307 acres of towering pines, is known for its criminal justice curriculum, so when administrators began talking about a summer residential program for high-school age students their focus was on designing a Crime Scene Investigation camp. Made popular from CSI television shows, the science of investigating all aspects of a crime scene from laboratory analysis of evidence to writing a police report seemed like just the ticket to give teenagers a chance to combine academic challenges, career skills, and an opportunity to experience life on a college campus.

Teen University was born. "We wanted something to excite high school-age students academically over the summer that would help them think about a career path, and what they might like or not like in a career," said Meaghan Arena, director of Program Development and Outreach in Westfield State's Division of Graduate and Continuing Education. "This age group is one that is just beginning to explore college, and just beginning to think about living away from home, so we also hoped that some of these students would want to apply to Westfield."

Designed for students age 14 to 17, Westfield-CSI camp debuted in the summer of 2011.

"Westfield-CSI was a bigger success than we ever dreamed it would be," said Arena. "We had 32 students registered and a long wait list."

Westfield-CSI is an interactive, two-week residential program where students work in small teams to solve a fictional murder case by using forensic science, criminal justice techniques and crime scene investigation technology. The camp is led by two professors from the university's Criminal Justice Department and includes visits from a local judge, law enforcement and a K-9 unit as well as academic work in aspects of psychology of criminal behavior, laboratory work, writing and the role of law enforcement in crime investigation.

"The students came from across the state so they were out of their regular school element, and that helps them to focus on who they are as an individual rather than who they are in their group of friends," said Arena. "A lot of them made new friendships they think will be life long, and have continued to keep in touch."

Now accepting application for its third summer, Westfield-CSI was recently honored with the Innovative and Creative Program Award by the University Professional and Continuing Education Association (UPCEA).

Teen University has expanded for the summer of 2013 with two new one-week programs for high school students, Guitar Palooza and HELP: Exploring Health and Medicine.

Guitar camp participants will live on campus and work with music department faculty and other professional musicians. There will be a final performance for family and community members on the last day of camp.

"Basically, it's a really funky band camp," said Arena. "Our music department is wonderful and innovative."

The more science-based HELP camp will focus on career fields in medicine including doctor, nurse, physician's assistant, phlebotomist, pharmacy technician and more. Students will also become CPR certified.

"The faculty who are involved in all of these summer programs do it because they are devoted to teaching and love the institution," said Arena. "Our instructors are wonderful at helping students to use critical thinking skills. Students are really encouraged to think outside the box."

Tips for sticking with your fitness goals in 2013

It is one thing to set a fitness goal for the New Year; it's another thing to stick with it. Coaches at Evolution Sports Performance provide advice on how to start strong and keep the momentum going through 2013.

Set measurable, attainable goals

Write your goals down and make them practical. When you have an established plan, in writing, you are more likely to stick with it. It is important to start with short, quantifiable goals; for example to lose 1 to 2 pounds per week, 5 to 8 pounds per month, and lose 20 to 30 pounds total. Aside from weight loss or weight gain measurements, set fitness targets, as well. To start, try to do 10 full push-ups or run 1 mile nonstop within the first month of training.

Set up your workouts for success

Start with a realistic amount of time to devote to training. If it has been a long time since you last trained, start with a regimen of three days per week for one hour each day. Avoid the temptation to jump to the most extreme training regimen if you are not ready; it will not be a quick fix and may result in injury. Gradually increase difficulty as your body can handle it and it will become a habit. You will want to develop a lifestyle of fitness.

Drink water.

If you're trying to lose weight, warm water will make you feel full more than cold water. If you're trying to gain muscle, water will keep you hydrated and the muscles full of nutrients so they can build.

Don't do it alone.

Working out is more motivating when you are with a friend or training with a coach. Your chances of success are much higher when you have a training/diet partner to be accountable to. Report weekly to your training partner; whether it is a weigh-in or review of training logs, weekly check-ins will keep you on track. The positive reinforcement and constructive criticism of a good coach and/or training partner is a valuable asset.

Reward yourself for your success.

Look to the short-term goals to measure your success: making each training session for a week/month, running three miles without rest, completing every rep/set of each exercise you have planned, etc. Once you reach these goals, reward yourself with some healthy, positive downtime or recreation time with friends. Having small victories will keep you in the game longer.

Hold yourself accountable.

Even with an experienced coach or training partner, ultimately it comes down to you. You must be honest with yourself, in setbacks and in victories. If you achieve your initial goals, reset them again. Remember, the ultimate goal is not only getting in shape for 2013, but staying fit and healthy for life.

Evolution Sports Performance has locations in Easton, Sharon and Kingston. With programs developed by degreed and certified coaches (USAW, USA Track and Field, CSCS, etc.), Evolution provides total performance training based on an individual's distinct strengths and weaknesses.

Turning the tide of obesity

Dr. Dennis Barley

If you've tuned into the headlines at all in the past year, you know that obesity is now considered an epidemic by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention; it affects nearly one third of the population of North America. The co-morbidities associated with being overweight and obese include hypertension, type II diabetes, cardiovascular disease, gall bladder diseases, osteoarthritis, strokes, respiratory diseases, dementia and some forms of cancer.

Interval training

What it is and why it works

By Meg Watterson
Special to GateHouse Media

The hot topic in the fitness world these days is interval training. What is it? Is it healthy? Is it efficient? Will it make me lose fat and gain muscle quicker?

Athletes employ interval training because short, high-intensity bursts of activity interspersed with periods of "rest" or lower-intensity activity for a longer duration helps to improve their speed and endurance. But what about the health-conscious person that just wants to improve cardiovascular health and maybe lose some fat in the process? Since interval training involves short bursts of activity working at 85 to 95 percent of our maximum heart rate, we reap the benefits of a high-intensity workout, without having to maintain high intensity for a long duration.

Another benefit is that interval training tends to burn more calories; work harder burn more, even if it is just for a short period, makes sense right? You are also able to progress yourself naturally, as you see fit. As your aerobic capacity increases, you'll find that you can sustain a high-intensity activity for a longer duration with shorter rest periods in between. Interval training not only allows you to effectively increase your aerobic capacity, but by switching exercise intensities you'll find that you are never bored, because your exercise is always changing.

Do good, feel good

The psychological benefits of giving Charities often benefit significantly from the generosity of donors and volunteers. But the person providing the philanthropy also takes away something from the experience, and there actually may be measurable emotional advantages to being charitable. Helping others not only makes a person feel good, but it may also increase physical and emotional well-being. Several studies have indicated that being generous has profound effects on how a person thinks and feels. One such study from researchers at Cornell University uncovered that volunteering increases one's energy, sense of mastery over life and self-esteem. It also promotes feelings of positivity, which may strengthen and enhance the immune system.

In 2008, Dr. Ellen Langer, a professor of psychology at Harvard University, advocated for giving gifts and being generous – even in tough financial times.

"When you give a gift it makes you feel generous, it makes you feel in control, it's good for your self-esteem, and it's good for the relationship," Langer says.

According to psychologist Robert Ornstein and physician David Sobel, authors of "Healthy Pleasures," they talk about a "helper's high." This is a sense of euphoria that volunteers experience when helping others. It can be described as a sense of vitality and a warm glow. It has been compared to a runner's high and may be attributed to a release of endorphins.

Various studies have found that donors and volunteers gain the most from a charitable encounter.Here are a few more health benefits that may result from being altruistic:* an activation of emotions that are key to good health* lower stress levels* longer periods of calm after the generous act* improved mood* a potentially longer life span

There are many ways to give back and experience these physical and psychological benefits:* share experiences at a school* volunteer at a hospital* volunteer at a national or local park* donate unused items, like clothes or cars* read to children at a library* help to care for animals at shelters* volunteer at a hospice and comforting those at the end of their lives* donate supplies to a new teacher* become a companion to a senior citizen

Grow your wealth

Points to consider

By Chris Kondracki
Special to GateHouse Media

Truly well run companies typically have a history of not only growing earnings but also increasing dividend payouts to shareholders, often through some of the most difficult economic and market environments.

The stock market has always been volatile and even today we are seeing this. To make matters worse, interest rates continue to hover at or near historic lows. In this environment, it is no small matter to protect your current and future purchasing power against the ravages of inflation. Although this presents serious challenges for individuals who want to protect themselves, there are investment approaches that should reduce investor anxiety while still offering opportunities to grow wealth in a way that is sensitive to the investor's desire to reduce risks.

We know that short-term stock market returns can be significantly impacted by a variety of factors, but ultimately the earnings of corporations are the mother's milk of stock price appreciation. And, truly well run companies typically have a history of not only growing earnings but also increasing dividend payouts to shareholders, often through some of the most difficult economic and market environments. Over time these great companies have become even more valuable, and investors have experienced the fruits of this success in their returns on their investments. For many industry-leading, time-tested companies, these long-term total returns have been impressive, even during periods thought to have been very poor for stock market performance. These are the types of companies that investors should always strive to own.

It is important to know that not only is good company selection critical, it is also essential to integrate these companies into a well diversified investment portfolio, one which gives considerable attention to sector selection and sector weightings. Yes, good company selection reduces risks, but so will wise sector selection. The importance of sector selection cannot be underestimated.

There are many common investment vehicles that an investor can use to obtain market exposure such as index funds, exchange traded funds (ETFs) and mutual funds. With index funds and ETFs, common stocks in these portfolios are typically not selected on the basis of careful individual stock research and analysis. While mutual funds usually do conduct research on companies in their portfolio offerings, do not expect to have any undergraduate, professional, post-professional and current studies, have exposed me to a fair amount of nutritional education. And as a health care provider, I am deeply concerned about this growing trend and want to educate and empower my patients so that they can stem the growing tide of obesity.

So how did we get here?

Americans have increased their consumption of energy-dense, nutrient-poor foods, which are loaded with high levels of sugar and saturated trans fats. That, along with reduced physical activity and increased stress, has contributed to this epidemic. We can also blame fast, inexpensive food; super sized portions; a food pyramid that stressed six to 11servings of grain (what do we fatten cattle with?); and the new, larger food plate, all of which subvert our efforts to stay at a healthy weight. With television being our primary source of nutritional education, we have produced the recipe to become the fattest people on the planet.

The physiological breakdown in so many of us can be linked to indulgence and, let's be honest, oftentimes overindulgence, in simple sugars and even complex carbohydrates. In 1912, Americans consumed approximately five pounds of sugar in a year's time. Today, sugar is hidden in many of the foods we were taught are healthy, such as bagels, rice cakes, granola bars, pasta and cereal. Because of this, the average American now consumes 150 to 200 pounds of sugar per year.

In very simple physiological terms, when we eat the typical American diet, the culprit is sugar. When we eat too much sugar, the pancreas responds by producing insulin. Why is this a problem? Because insulin is a master hormone that regulates sugar's ability to get into the cells of the body to be used for energy but if there is too much sugar in the system then insulin stores it in the fat cells for future use. This is an innate mechanism that was useful when we were hunters and gatherers; when one day we ate and the next when we didn't, we could dip into our reserves. Trouble is, today we never dip into our stored fat and use it, so we gain year in and year out. This is what I call "the Insulin Effect" that, coupled with the acidifying typical American diet, leads us down an inflammatory pathway that is disastrous for our health.

What can we do?

There are many diets, and we've tried them all. My suggestion is to choose a safe and effective method that helps correct the dysfunction but also keeps one accountable and empowers individuals with knowledge. This safe and effective method must utilize the body's fat stores for energy, enabling the person to become a fat-burning machine. A diet that controls the "insulin effect" by reducing sugar intake and gives you low-calorie, low-fat, adequate, not over-abundant, high-quality, bio-available, muscle-sparing protein is a great way to lose weight. We can add vitamins and minerals to replace what can sometimes be lost in a diet and, using certain complex carbs, like low-glycemic, fibrous vegetables, and plenty of water, we will have successful results. Now we have a safe plan of action to get ourselves to the ideal weight.

But the journey is not over yet. Anyone can lose weight but now we must keep it off, which is the key to longevity and quality of life. A weekly coaching session, education and knowledge (so one understands food), and support are a few of the systems that you may need to put in place in order to be successful.

It's your body, and the ability to lead an active, healthy life is life-changing. The choice is yours.

Dr. Barley is the director of Barley Family Healthcare & Rehabilitation in Fairhaven and East Bridgewater, a health clinic that provides chiropractic care, physical therapy, massage therapy, and nutritional and dietary advice utilizing the Ideal Protein weight loss method.

Post, O'Connor & Kadrmas Eye Centers Experience Your Eyes Can Trust!

Plymouth Laser & Surgical Center

Plymouth Laser & Surgical Center has been the choice for thousands of patients having either elective or non-elective eye surgery on the South Shore and Cape Cod. Dedicated to creating and maintaining a center of excellence, the team works together providing patients with the best possible eye care and technology in a comfortable and safe environment.

"We pride ourselves in having a surgical center that is state-of-the-art and conveniently close for patients," explains Eddie F. Kadrmas, M.D., Ph.D., retinal surgeon. "By not traveling into Boston, patients can stay local and have their procedure in a warm and friendly environment."

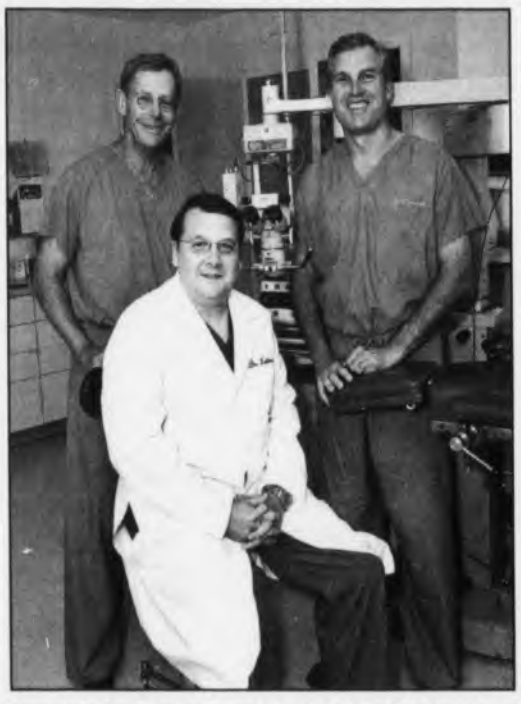
Affiliated with Post, O'Connor & Kadrmas Eye Centers, P.C., which has been caring for patients throughout the South Shore, Cape Cod and Southeastern regions of Massachusetts for over three decades, Plymouth Laser & Surgical Center balances the highest level of professional eye care with personal patient care.

Unlike multi-specialty facilities, the Center specializes in one area, treating eyes.

"When we built the surgery center we created a center of excellence that concentrated on our specialty, ophthalmology," notes Charles T. Post, Jr., M.D., founder of the Plymouth Laser & Surgical Center.

This singular focus allows the Center to deliver the most advanced treatment options from refractive procedures such as Custom LASIK or the Implantable Collamer Lens (ICL) to cataract surgery, glaucoma, oculoplastics and retinal surgery.

"The Center is truly remarkable. It was one of the reasons I left Boston to take care of retina patients locally," says Dr. Kadrmas. "One big advantage is having a staff that knows eyes. With that familiarity comes excellence and consistency. They're the best at their positions and are truly specialized in caring for our patients."



The surgical team supporting the doctors consists of certified registered nurse anesthetists, registered nurses, and surgical technicians. The team's expertise creates an efficiency that emphasizes the patient experience from the moment patients walk into the center. From arrival through recovery, the staff creates an environment that fosters a high level of comfort and confidence, reducing anxiety.

"Not only is the staff highly competent, they are very friendly," explains Daniel J. O'Connor, M.D., cataract, glaucoma and refractive surgeon. "They make sure patients are comfortable and relaxed throughout the entire surgical experience. They take pride in making sure patients' privacy is safeguarded, that the care patients receive exceeds expectations, and that all instructions are explained clearly and patiently to build comprehension and compliance. They know exactly what patients need before and after eye surgery. We couldn't ask for a better team."

This level of specialization allows the surgical team at the Center to stay on the vanguard of advanced techniques.

"The equipment we use is all geared towards eye surgery," says Dr. O'Connor. "It's state-of-the-art, and it's updated on a continuous basis."

As pioneers in laser, surgical treatments and therapeutic injections, the Center's team continues to introduce the latest medical and surgical eye techniques providing better, safer and faster results for patients.

From left, Dr. Charles T. Post Jr., Dr. Eddie F. Kadrmas and Dr. Daniel J. O'Connor, of Plymouth Laser & Surgical Center, are taking eye care to the next level through advanced technology, expertise and commitment to patients closer to home. COURTESY PHOTO

Among these techniques is 25 and 23-gauge advanced micro-incision retinal surgery using instruments half the size of traditional instruments. Involved since the surgery's inception, Dr. Kadrmas took an innovative role in helping design and develop the 25-gauge surgical technique and instrumentation.

"The smaller instrumentation allows for quicker visual recovery, increased patient comfort, faster surgical time," shares Dr. Kadrmas, "which all translates into a better experience for the patient."

Dr. Kadrmas also offers patients the latest in therapeutic retinal injections. Using some of the most advanced medications, patients with retinal conditions such as age-related macular degeneration or diabetes have had remarkable results.

"The retinal injections have really changed the face of how we practice retina today for diseases that were not treatable just a few years ago," Dr. Kadrmas notes. "As far as visual recovery, 95 percent of patients with wet macular degeneration can stabilize, and up to 40 percent of patients can actually see better. Of course results can be even better with early diagnosis."

The Center's commitment to patient satisfaction and improved outcomes is enhanced by new methods and advanced technology now available for cataract and refractive surgery including Premium Intraocular Lens Implants (IOL), Custom LASIK and the Implantable Collamer Lens (ICL) expanding the treatment options for nearsighted and farsighted patients who wish to reduce their dependency on glasses or contact lenses.

Implant lenses, put in place following removal of cataracts, come in a variety of sizes, shapes, materials and optical powers. Calculations, based on the length and curvature of the eye, help doctors determine lens strength for the intraocular lens implant.

"With every patient we use two different techniques to determine the most ideal implant lens for each eye and compare results for consistency and accuracy," says Dr. O'Connor, "By doing that, we are able to give patients the best uncorrected vision after cataract surgery."

While the national average shows about 95 percent of implant lenses are within one diopter (a unit of measurement of the refractive power of lenses) the Center's implant results are about 98 percent due to the Center's advanced calculation techniques and methods.

A less invasive laser surgery utilized by Dr. O'Connor to help control glaucoma, endoscopic cytophotocoagulation (ECP) can be performed in conjunction with cataract surgery.

"It's a very safe procedure that is successful in about 90 percent of patients," adds Dr. O'Connor. "I'm performing it on patients that are on several glaucoma medications and/or who have poor glaucoma control."

The Center consistently receives the highest level of accreditation by the American Association of Ambulatory Health Care. This accreditation recognizes the surgical center's commitment to excellence.

"We all work hand in hand," Dr. Kadrmas says. "The surgical center is right next door to our eye center in Plymouth so in regard to patient convenience and flow, it's one location. Patients feel more comfortable when they are already familiar with the location and the people caring for them on the day of surgery and that's just what we want, for our patients to feel comfortable."

The relationship not only makes it easier for patients, it promotes more streamlined and comprehensive care.

"We can change hats quickly if we need to," Dr. Kadrmas points out. "If there's an emergency, I can care for that patient at the time without making them travel. Patients in this emergent situation really appreciate this during what could otherwise be a long and stressful ordeal especially if in other circumstances they would need to travel to Boston."

The team's philosophy extends beyond the walls of the Plymouth Laser & Surgical Center and Post, O'Connor & Kadrmas Eye Centers. Community optometrists and physicians have co-managed their medical and surgical patients with the Center creating a cohesive and comprehensive approach to caring for patients. With offices in Plymouth, Mashpee, Wareham, Dennis and Middleboro, they bring the expertise of the team directly to patients.

"We're here for our patients," shares Dr. O'Connor, "and we always put what's in their best interest first."

conversations with a portfolio manager. In fact, it is unlikely that you will know, on a current basis, what is even in the portfolio. These usually are not investment vehicles for individuals who want to have tighter control and review over their investment portfolios. For these investors, a separate account with an investment advisor can be a much better solution. The investor should expect that the advisor will explain why certain companies are in the individual portfolio, and which sectors are represented, as well as which have been avoided. And, because investment holdings are held in individual accounts at a major custodian firm, the individual can see holdings and trades as they are made.

Now, there is another dimension to achieving good investment returns, and that is the one concerning fees and commissions. Since many successful investors often seek the help of a professional investment advisor, it is important to understand all fees, commissions and transaction costs that might be incurred. There can be significant differences between fee-only, fee-based and commission-based investment advisors, brokers and agents. You should know exactly how your investment advisor is compensated and how to measure your performance net of fees and commissions.

Seek out an investment advisor who is genuinely sincere, especially well informed, and has the individual investor's best interest in mind. The investment advisor can help you become more aware of the many excellent opportunities that exist for financial gain and also will help you develop a better understanding and acceptance of the associated risks. If you do this, you might come to see the stock market in a much different light.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF FEB. 18, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Stop being the wool-gathering Lamb, and start turning that dream project into reality. You have the ideas, the drive and the charisma to persuade others to follow your lead. So do it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You've scored some big successes. But remember that all hardworking Ferdinands and Ferdinandas need some time to restore their energies and refresh their spirits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're gaining a stronger mental image of what you're trying to achieve. Now look for the facts that will help get this to develop from a concept into a solid proposal.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Some of you eager-to-please Moon Children might want to delay some decisions until midweek, when you can again think more with your head than your heart.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A new business venture seems to offer everything you've been looking for. But be careful that that rosy picture doesn't betray traces of red ink under the surface.

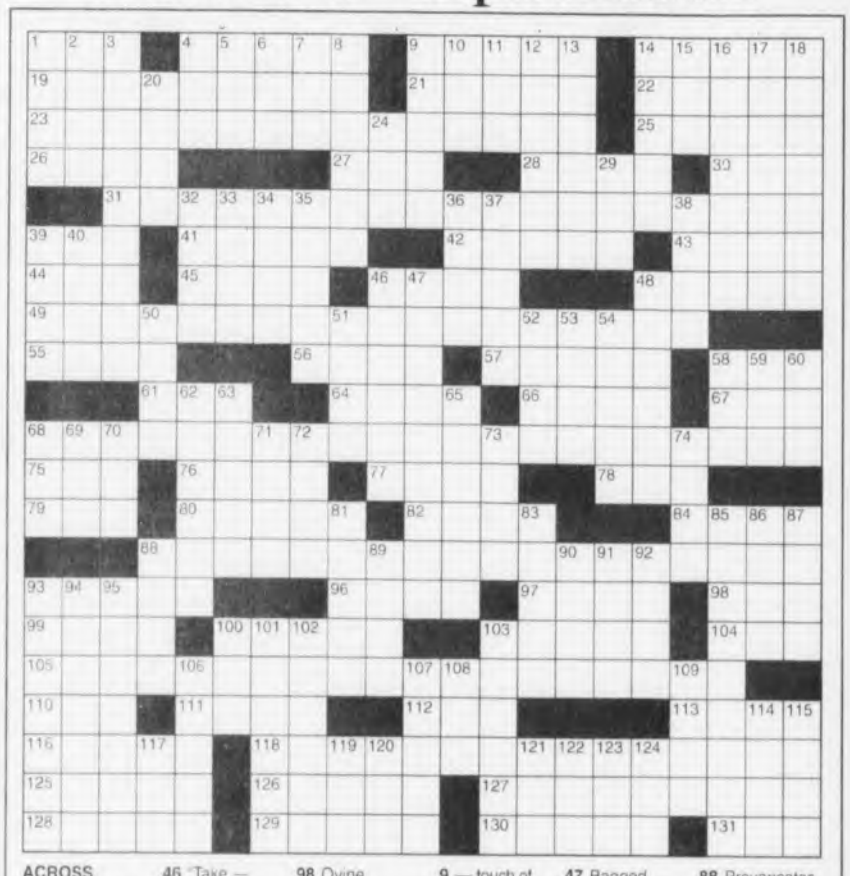
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A volatile situation needs the kind of thoughtful and considerate care you can provide right now. There'll be plenty of time later to analyze what might have gone wrong.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your loyalty to a friend in a tough situation earns you respect from people you care about. Those who criticize you don't understand what friendship is all about.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your strong work ethic is rewarded with the kind of challenging opportunity you love to tackle. Now, go ahead and celebrate with family and/or close friends.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A legal matter you thought had been finally resolved could require a second look. But don't make any moves without consulting your lawyer.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Taking charge is what you like to do, and since you do it so well, expect to be asked to lead a special group. This could open an exciting new vista for you.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An important matter might wind up being entrusted to you for handling. The responsibility is heavy, but you'll have support from people able and eager to help.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A spouse or partner might make an important, even life-changing, suggestion. Consider it carefully. It could hold some of the answers you've both been looking for.

BORN THIS WEEK: You always try to do the right thing, and for the right reasons. No wonder people have come to depend on you.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off. So sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9×9 grid, broken down into nine 3×3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the closer it gets to solve the puzzle!

Cohasset weathers the storm

Residents faced fallen trees, outages and water ban

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset was ready to tackle the Blizzard Nemo when it hit, and the mighty snowstorm dared to do its worst. The blizzard dumped 18 to 20 inches of snow on the coastal town — and left the entire town in the dark for four days.

Town officials and departments, from the schools to public safety and the Department of Public Works (DPW) were ready to face down the storm as it hit Cohasset on Friday afternoon. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo made the decision Thursday night to close the schools on Friday. The DPW got their plows and snow tires ready. And the public safety department, along with the Cohasset Emergency Response Team (CERT) and Board of Health, were standing by ready to help those who would be affected by the massive storm.

The blizzard ended up leaving around 650,000 Northeast homes and businesses without power, and Cohasset was no exception. For perhaps the first time in Cohasset history, a winter storm knocked the power out for the entire town.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia, who has been with the Cohasset fire department since the late 1970s, said of Nemo, "In my entire career here, we never had a situation where the entire town was without power for multiple days; not for a winter storm, not for the entire town to be without power for four days."

FALLEN TREES

Doane Street heroes

Neighbors help each other out

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After a storm like the Blizzard Nemo, every affected neighborhood has a story. But during the height of the snowstorm this past weekend, which toppled trees and telephone poles across Cohasset, one neighborhood ended up being cut off from the rest of town. Neighbors on Doane Street were brought together under unlikely circumstances and rallied to get through the power outage, fallen trees, and some of the heaviest snowfall the town has seen in years.

Two trees fell on Doane Street on Friday night; one crashed into a house (60 Doane Street, owned by David Kneeland); the other fell in the middle of the street, stranding many residents who were already missing their electricity.

Heroes next door

The Smiths were one family that was hoping to get out of town and out of their frigid house on Saturday. However, with the large tree blocking the road, they stood little chance of an easy escape. Their son, Jim, drove from East Bridgewater on Saturday to pick them up and bring them to warmth and safety, but he could not get his car close enough to their house.

"We were trapped," said Gini Smith, 71. "We couldn't get out of our driveway."

Gini and her husband, Kent, were ready to evacuate their home, suitcases and all. The fallen tree, however, which was wrapped in wires, was proving to be quite the impasse. Their neighbors, Daniel and Chrissy McCormack, came to the rescue.

"My wonderful neighbors got our suitcases, backed into our driveway, and pulled us

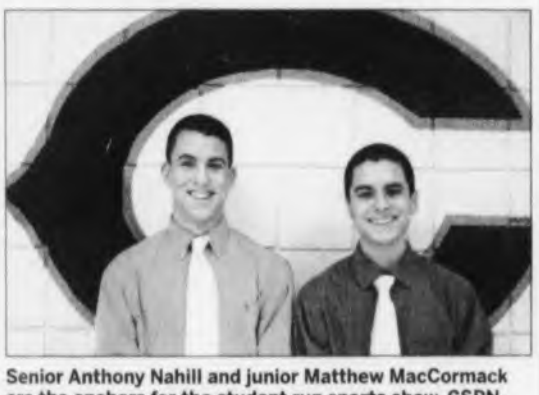
CHS CABLE GUYS

Students produce, film, star in show



By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Thanks to the town's very own cable TV station, Cohasset High School students are getting real-world work experience right in their own school— experience that many aspiring broadcasters get in college, if at all.

When Cohasset's cable station, Cohasset Community Television (CCTV), launched its new studio (located inside the CHS library) and corresponding channel, 143tv, last year, the cable company put out a call for Cohasset residents to pitch their ideas for local cable access TV shows. The station was hoping to expand its content, which includes shows like "Our Town," hosted by CCTV president Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo.

Upon learning that, first of all, a cable studio was coming to the high school and, secondly, the studio was looking for community

How does Nemo measure up?

23 inches in April Fools Blizzard of 1997.

25 inches locally in Blizzard of 2013 (Nemo).

28 inches in Blizzard of 1978.

29 inches in the five-day Blizzard of 1969 (Boston reported 108 inches of non-stop snowfall!).

All these blizzards took place in February with the exception of the April Fool's Blizzard.

"It was truly an historic storm this Blizzard of 2013 on Feb. 8 & 9. There have been few greater snowfall events in my 60-year career starting in 1953," Bob Skilling.

Bob Skilling has been a Mariner weather observer for more than 20 years. All his data is local.

The unsung heroes of this storm are the workers from facilities department. Butchie Litchfield and Derek Lincoln clear the pathway at police HQ.

POLICE BEAT

This 2002 VW Passat, operated by a newspaper deliveryman, became engulfed in flames due to an electrical issue. COURTESY PHOTO

Newspaper car is a total loss

A 25-year-old newspaper deliveryman had to call 9-1-1 last Wednesday morning (February 6) at 7:49am when his car began to fill with smoke while he was delivering papers on Carbone Lane. The man, who lives in Scituate, told the dispatcher that the car had been running fine and then suddenly smoke began to seep into the passenger compartment from under the dashboard.

When police officers and firefighters arrived, the vehicle, which was a 2002 Volkswagen Passat was fully engulfed in flames. The fire department quickly extinguished the fire, but the car was a total loss. The apparent cause of the fire was an electrical issue. The vehicle was towed to the owner's home.

Driverless car

A Sohier Street resident called police last Tuesday morning (February 5) at 8:05am to report that her neighbor's 2007 Nissan Altima rolled out of their driveway and into the woods. Officers responded to the scene and notified the owner that their car had rolled away. It appears the Nissan slipped out of gear during the night. There was no damage to the car, but it had to be towed out of the woods.

Water leak

A frantic caller requested assistance from the police and fire departments last Wednesday (February 6) at about 9:35am. The caller was reporting that a water valve broke off in her basement and that the basement was now filling with water. Cohasset firefighters were able to shut the valve off and notify Aquarion Water Company on the homeowners' behalf. There was minor damage to the basement of the home.

FBI visit

Two FBI Agents arrived at a Cohasset man's North Main Street home last Wednesday (February 6) looking to talk to him about a Federal Law Enforcement issue. The resident called Cohasset Police to verify the agent's credentials. Officers were able to attest to the fact that both men were FBI Special Agents.

Chimney fire

Police units were tied up directing traffic at a home on Forest Avenue last Tuesday (February 5) while the fire department extinguished a small chimney fire. There was minor smoke damage to the home and nobody was injured.

Temporary trash staging area

Police responded to a development that is under construction off of Norman Todd Road last Thursday morning (February 7) for a report of illegal dumping. Officers found a small truckload of furniture, computer monitors, and household items piled on the side of the street. Officers were able to determine that the items had come from a resident's home on Nichols Road. Officers went to Nichols Road and talked to the owner of the trash, who was identified as a 51-year-old female. The woman explained that her home is for sale and that she needed a temporary spot to leave her goods while she showed her home to a realtor. Officers were able to verify that she contracted with a local trash hauling service to pick the items up on Norman Todd Lane. It is still unclear why the woman did not have the trash removed directly from her home.

Sewerage leak

Police, fire, and health officials were called to a local supermarket last Thursday evening (February 7) for a reported sewer line break inside the store's basement. Officials were able to stem the leak and the manager of the store notified a plumber. No food was impacted and the store remained open.

Crashes

A 55-year-old Cohasset woman was uninjured in a single car accident on North Main Street between Cedar Street and the MBTA Station. The crash occurred last Friday (February 8) at about 2pm when the operator lost control of her 2010 Subaru, crossed the center line and hit 3 cement posts on the west side of the street. The vehicle had to be towed and the cement post will need to be replaced. The roads were snow covered at the time of the crash and no citation was issued.

Collision

A 21-year old Cohasset man was issued a citation last Friday (February 8) afternoon after he collided with a utility police on Atlantic Avenue near Cunningham Bridge. Police are alleging that he was traveling too fast for the poor road conditions. After the 21-year old hit the pole he bounced back into the roadway and was hit by a second vehicle being operated by a 16-year old Cohasset teen. As those two vehicles sat in the middle of the street, a third vehicle collided with them. A 21-year old Cohasset woman operated the third vehicle. There were no injuries reported. Vehicle one, which was a 2005 Chevrolet pick-up had to be towed, along with vehicle three, a 2004 Chevrolet sedan.

FIRESIDE

Car fire was stubborn one

On Wednesday (February 6) at 7:49 a.m., Engine 3, Engine 1 and Ambulance 1 were dispatched from fire headquarters to Carbone Lane for a reported motor vehicle fire. On arrival of the scene units found a motor vehicle fully involved in fire. The operator of the vehicle was already out of the vehicle and denied any injuries from the fire. The motor vehicle fire was a very stubborn fire to extinguish and required the units to use two hand lines to extinguish the fire and establish a water supply line from a hydrant on Church Street.

Water pipe

On Wednesday (Feb. 6) at 9:37 a.m. Engine 3 and Engine 1 were dispatched from fire headquarters to 800 Jerusalem Road for a broken water pipe. On arrival of the scene units found a broken water supply line to a single-family residence. Aquarion Water was requested to the scene to shut the water off at the street, which they did. A plumber from Alvin Hollis arrived on scene repaired the water line and Aquarion Water turned the water back on once the repair was done. Engine 3 and Engine 1 crewmembers assisted the resident on scene with diverting the water out of the basement onto the driveway with tarps while the water supply line was being repaired.

Hingham fire captains express concern about regional dispatch

"Again, we have been very patient and understanding up to this point but we feel it is time for the system to be investigated and for you to be informed."
Hingham Shift Commanders

Four shift commanders, all captains in the Hingham Fire Department, have penned a letter to the Hingham Board of Selectmen expressing concerns about the South Shore Regional Emergency Communications Center (S.S.R.E.C.C.).

Cohasset is also a member of the regional dispatch center along with Hull and Norwell. The Mariner obtained a copy of the letter, which is a public record, from the Hingham Selectmen's Office this week.

The captains stated said they have great concern for public safety.

"We, the Shift Commanders of the Hingham Fire Department (H.F.D) have been very patient from the start with the S.S.R.E.C.C. Problems and a learning curve were expected, however, currently we see no real progress with the quality of dispatch. We were not asked and therefore did not participate in the planning and set up of S.S.R.E.C.C.," they stated.

The captains stated under the old system when problems arose they could be dealt with directly between the dispatcher and captain. "Very few problems had to go beyond this simple procedure," they stated. "Under the regional system problems are e-mailed to the Fire Chief and Deputy then forwarded to S.S.R.E.C.C. Recently we have been getting replies but for quite some time most our e-mails didn't generate a response. This was disappointing to us and we felt it was a waste of our time and quite frankly caused a reduction in the amount of correspondence between the H.F.D. and S.S.R.E.C.C."

At a recent Hingham selectmen and advisory committee meetings, the S.S.R.E.C.C. has been referred to as a "Quality Product" that cost more than expected but was worth it because of the quality of its service. "Unfortunately, we feel this is far from the truth and the partial cause for us writing this letter. Our other major concern is the added time it takes them to dispatch us."

They explained as shift commanders that work directly with the S.S.R.E.C.C. daily, the errors that occur continue to create more work and additional stress.

"This requires us to monitor every dispatch and make constant corrections since we are the ones held accountable. Again, we have been very patient and understanding up to this point but we feel it is time for the system to be investigated and for you to be informed," they wrote.

The captains said they wrote this letter out of concern for the safety of the Hingham residents and for their ability to provide timely and quality service under this system. They request the opportunity to meet with the board to discuss these matters.

The letter was signed by Captain William A. Powers Sr., Captain Robert D. Keyes, Captain Louis LaChance and Captain John M. Haley.

ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

Meals Tax to be revisited

Could the third time be the charm?

The local option Meals and Hotel Tax, which has twice been defeated at Town Meeting, could make another appearance. Voters have twice rejected accepting the chapter of the state law that would allow the town to impose a meals tax and local rooms occupancy tax. The issue in the form of an article is slated to be before voters again at the annual Town Meeting in April.

The informational summary in the draft warrant, which is available at the selectmen's office, notes that Hingham, which has adopted the meals tax, has collected nearly $600,000 during the past four quarters on just its restaurant meals. The summary also notes that a significant amount of the funds collected would be generated by people who do not live in town.

part way up the hill," said Gini. "We couldn't walk all the way because the wires were so dangerous."

While Jim waited for his elderly parents on the other side of the street, Daniel McCormack gave Gini a lift on his snowmobile and drove her through Beechwood Cemetery to where Jim was waiting with his car. Meanwhile, Daniel's wife, Chrissy, escorted Gini's husband, Kent, through the cemetery to Jim's car. Gini said that she could not walk through the cemetery with them because of her arthritis.

Gini said that, looking back on the incident days later, after power had been restored in her home and the tree was finally removed, the whole thing was "hysterical." However, "at the time, I was so scared. They [the McCormacks] tried everything to get us out of our driveway, up the street, to our son waiting for us at the top of the street... It was comical, yet so serious on the other hand. They're heroes."

While the McCormacks could not be reached for comment, Gini said they probably would not relish all of the attention. However, word of their good deed has gotten around.

"They keep saying, 'Everybody's saying we're heroes; we're not,'" Gini said of the McCormacks. "In my eyes, they are. They'll do anything to help you out. Thank God for good neighbors."

Chrissy McCormack of Doane Street escorts her neighbor, Kent Smith, down the road where his son was waiting to pick them up. Stranded

During the height of the storm, one Cohasset firefighter found himself on the wrong side of Doane Street when a massive tree went down.

Joseph Pergola was out in his truck late Friday night, plowing the snow as it fell. The tree took down telephone poles and power lines with it and was much too massive to move, especially in the middle of the night. Pergola found himself stuck.

Despite enduring a cold night in his truck, Pergola was in good spirits later in the week and willing to chat about his "little sleepover on Doane Street."

"I was plowing down Doane Street and getting toward the end and saw the [telephone] wires were low. I was able to fit under them and made one push past that, turned around, and was looking for the low-hanging wires." That's when Pergola, who was plowing in a whiteout and could only see about 10 feet in front of him, realized that the tree had fallen, taking telephone polls down with it.

A friend of his who works at the DPW, Chris, checked on Pergola at some point but reported that he would not be able to cut the tree away to get him out due to the danger of the wires on the tree.

Pergola recalled how the sky lit up when the tree went down.

"The sky was just lighting up like nothing I'd ever seen before; it was a bright, bright blue. I don't know if it was lightning or transformers, but the sparks lit up the entire sky."

With no one able to reach him, Pergola was forced to spend the night in his car.

"I ended up sleeping in my truck on the end of Doane Street," the firefighter said. This was around 10 p.m. on Friday night, only a few hours before another big tree crashed into a resident's home nearby. Pergola left his truck's engine running with a window cracked, which kept him warm throughout the night as he fell asleep. However, when he woke up at 5 a.m. Saturday, his truck was freezing cold, and he had to go outside to break off ice that had covered the vehicle.

Pergola spent a productive morning plowing around the street and the nearby Beechwood Cemetery. "I pretty much spent the whole day there, figuring out what was going on," he said. Pergola, like the Doane Street neighbors, was waiting for the tree to be removed. He also assisted neighbors who were helping one another, checking on elderly residents and helping them get out of their houses. Concerned neighbors also made sure that Pergola was taken care of, bringing him food.

"Some lady brought breakfast to the truck, made us egg sandwiches," he said. "It's a pretty good community down there."

Pergola's Doane Street adventure came to an end around 6 p.m. Saturday evening, after he finished plowing as much of the neighborhood as he could and was able to leave the blocked-off street. His truck, however, stayed behind. Pergola's parents live on Beechwood Street, and his friend Chris gave him a ride there, where he was able to borrow his mother's car for the next few days. Pergola lives in Rockland and was going into work at the fire department on Sunday morning.

The tree was removed late Sunday night, and Pergola finally got a chance to pick his truck up on Tuesday.

The silver lining of Pergola's stranding? The side of Doane Street he was stuck on was very well-plowed.

"It was one of the best plowed streets in town because he had nothing else to do but go up and down," said Fire Chief Robert Silvia.

At least some good came out of a situation that could have been a lot worse, said Pergola. "I love plowing; I find it enjoyable and relaxing. But being stuck in my truck for the weekend? Not the Health insurance threshold looked at

In an ongoing effort to look at cost savings, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski raised the issue of whether the town should only provide health benefits to employees who work 30 or more hours a week. He explained currently the town pays $14,000 a year for an employee's family plan. He said there was not really policy for at what point health benefits should be offered. Milanoski said he was proposing the board look at offering benefits at 30 hours. Currently employees can get health insurance at 20 hours.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby suggested other towns be surveyed to see what their policies are. Selectman Diane Kennedy said she would like to know how many employees would be affected if they changed the policy.

Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., said not offering health insurance to someone currently receiving the benefit at 20 hours is tantamount to giving him or her a pay cut

"You may have solved the problem with the town but you've put it on the people," she said. "It's like saying cut Medicare but that just puts it on the people."

In a tense moment, Milanoski then asked McCann is she was advocating overrides to which she quipped "certainly." (Overrides can raise the tax levy over the 2-1/2 percent levy limit with a positive vote at Town Meeting and at the ballot box).

Peter Pescatore, 12 Lantern Lane, chairman of the Budget Planning Group, said this issue was discussed in great detail recently with the School Committee. He said employee eligibility for benefits should be reviewed. However personally, he would agree to go to 30 hours only if those working 20 hours are grandfathered.

Look for more on this issue in the weeks ahead in the Mariner.

most accommodating."

Although he was trapped in his truck overnight, running the vehicle the whole time to stay warm, the firefighter said that overall, he was pretty lucky.

"In a matter of minutes, I could've had a tree on top of my truck instead of just blocking me in," Pergola said.

Tree trouble

While some are singing the praises of the town departments and National Grid, who worked to remove the fallen trees, at least one neighbor was livid over the situation, waiting for both trees to be removed.

"There was no way for anybody to get out of that street," said one Doane Street resident who would like to remain anonymous. "There was no way to get fire engines or emergency vehicles there. We got four or five robo calls about the warming center [at the Deer Hill School on Sohier Street], but who could get there?"

The tree that fell on the Kneelands' home turned out to be a HazMat situation, which required more precision and time for the town's Department of Public Works (DPW), public safety department and the town's electricity provider, National Grid, to address.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained that since the tree, which the DPW said was likely town-owned, had wires wrapped around it, DPW was not allowed to remove it. National Grid also said that the tree could not be removed from the home since it was a "liability" issue.

"If there's a tree with wires in it, DPW can't touch it," said Milanoski. According to the town manager, the homeowners were asked by the fire department to sign a waiver and allow the town to cut down the tree. However, DPW did not have any cranes available. On Sunday, National Grid president Marcy Reed came to town and met with Milanoski. He told her that the trees on Doane Street were a priority issue; she had a crane sent to Cohasset from Rhode Island, and the trees were removed Sunday night.

Reed "determined it was a public safety issue," Milanoski said.

The Kneelands could not be reached for comment.

Doane Street also had two transformers go down during the storm, opening oilcans and causing a leak of hazardous materials. Clean Harbors had to be brought in to clean up the HazMat scene; they finished the job around 9 a.m. Monday morning. According to Milanoski, it was quite the clean-up job.

"Clean Harbors was there for over 24 hours," the town manager said. He called National Grid's response during the storm "phenomenal. Whenever we needed service, we had people there."

While DPW superintendent Carl Sestito said that his crew was still out clearing trees and limbs on Wednesday, one upset resident said she wished the fallen trees could have been higher on the town's priority list.

"The tree got cleared Sunday night, [but] the street didn't open till Monday," the anonymous neighbor said. "Considering the storm was essentially over mid-day Saturday, we would've thought we were a priority."

Acknowledging that DPW had to wait on National Grid, and Clean Harbors had to clean up the leaked oil, the neighbor conceded, "Maybe it couldn't have been done faster, but there could've been more information."

Fire Chief Silvia agreed that the felled trees proved to be a major challenge for the public safety team and DPW, but said that he was proud of the way the town departments came together and rose to the occasion.

"The DPW did a phenomenal job during whole storm," said Silvia. "We didn't have any trouble responding anywhere we needed to go. Their efforts make my guys doing their jobs even easier, to the point where we can travel. I can't say enough for those guys; they did yeoman's work and long hours...It was everybody; a collective effort from every single department."

Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Dodge Ball tourney signups

WHITNEY MALONE

The tournament will begin in March, but students interested in participating should get their teams together now and start practicing!

After a long (and cold) five-day weekend, it was difficult for CHS students to get back into the flow of things. Fortunately, February vacation begins today!

Some of us have already begun our winter break; Sunday night, the students on the French Exchange successfully landed in Paris. Originally planned to depart last Friday (in last week's article, I mistakenly noted that they would be leaving this Friday), the flight was pushed back to Sunday, due to the blizzard. Although their trip has been slightly shortened, I'm sure they will all enjoy their two weeks spent in France!

This week, students could officially sign-up for the 2013 Dodge Ball Tournament run by the senior class. The tournament will begin in March, but students interested in participating should get their teams together now and start practicing! For more details, see senior class president Andrew Barrett.

Well, that's it for this week at CHS. (With a short week comes much less activity.) Next week, CHS students will be enjoying their time off from school, so my next update will be two weeks from today. Enjoy the winter break!

Whitney Malone is a senior at CHS; her column runs weekly during the school year.

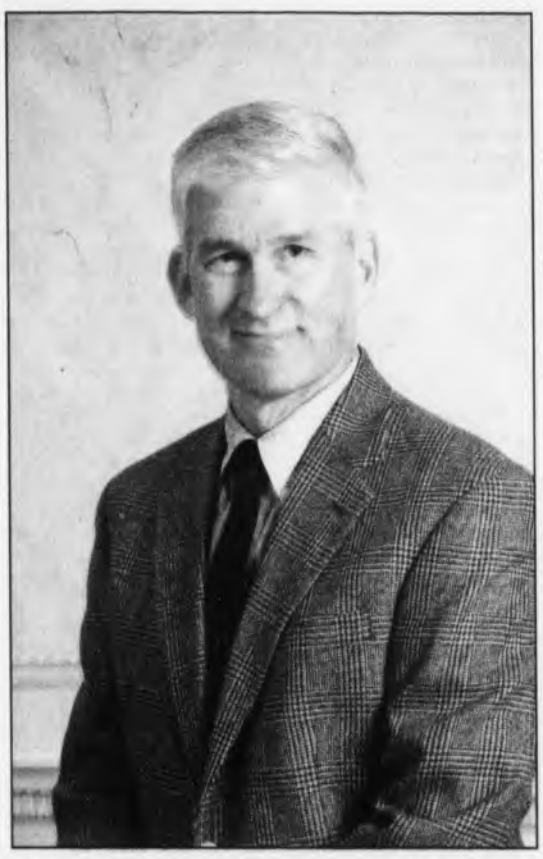
SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS

Eminent foreign policy expert featured



By Marylou Lawrence
special to the Mariner

In 1941, Henry Luce, owner of Life Magazine, wrote a long editorial asserting that the American Century had arrived and that America must assume the mantle of global leadership and "lift the life of mankind from the level of the beasts."

Andrew Bacevich's book, "The Short American Century," takes a hard look at the myth and truth of the decades that Luce's essay ushered in and how the rationale of foreign policy strategy following World War II continues to influence U.S. global relations today. Bacevich will speak about his book at Sunday AuthorTalks on Feb. 24 at 4 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Primarily because of the consequences of World War II, America's preeminence prevailed up to the 1960s. However, Bacevich contends that as conditions in the world have changed, U.S. hegemony has become vulnerable. Convinced that America's preeminence is over, Bacevich says we must come to terms with that reality and understand the perils of continued belief in American exceptionalism that still dominate U.S.foreign policy. By understanding that past and the illusions it nurtured we gain insight to deal with the critical crossroads at which the U.S. currently finds itself. To that end, Bacevich asked eight distinguished scholars to reflect on what the American Century was all about and what it signifies for us today. His book is a collection of those essays in addition to his own contributions.

Retired U.S. Army Colonel Andrew Bacevich is a professor of international relations at Boston University. He is the author of several books including Washington Rules: America's Path to Permanent War, The Limits of Power: the End of American Exceptionalism, and The New American Militarism: How Americans are Seduced by War. His oped pieces appear frequently in the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, and the Los Angeles Times among many other major newspapers; his essays can be found in publications including Foreign Affairs, Foreign Policy, The Nation, and The New Republic.

By understanding that past and the illusions it nurtured we gain insight to deal with the critical crossroads at which the U.S. currently finds itself.

A wine and cheese reception will follow Bacevich's talk, where his book will be available for purchase and signing. Admission is free, but seating is limited. To ensure a spot, reserve a seat online at cohassetlibrary.org or phone the library at 383-1348 ext 1 or pick up a ticket at the library's circulation desk.

Note: Watch for announcements for Cullen Murphy's rescheduled talk.

Sunday AuthorTalks is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and the Cook Estate. Bruce Sinclaire, owner of A Taste for Wine and spirits, donates the wines for post-talk receptions. For more information on authors scheduled for the remainder of the year, pickup a brochure at the library or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

GIMME SHELTER

Moira is a perfect little princess

PAULA J FATERSIK

Have you ever felt a little lost, missing someone special? One look at our Moira and you can see that she has enjoyed a wonderful life with someone very special who loved and cared for her with devotion and dedication. She is an absolutely beautiful princess. This petite, two-year-old has silky soft, long hair and the prettiest markings. A baby pink nose and a tiny freckle on her lower lip are just adorable, making her markings so unique.

Since Moira has just arrived at Hull Seaside, we see that she is a little shy and not used to being with other animals. It would probably be best for her to be in a loving home without other pets so that she can feel just as secure and loved as she has been since she was a kitten. A calm and relaxing atmosphere will help her move forward in a new forever home.

There is no doubt that she loves attention and when petting her, you will suddenly hear her gentle purr coming forth as she makes herself more and more comfortable. Moira is a playful little girl, and once she feels at ease, she is eager to become involved with toys and colorful string.

At just two years old, she is still very much a kitten and since she is a small cat, she will probably always look like a baby. Certainly, her pretty little face will capture someone's heart this week. What a fabulous Valentine she will be for one lucky person or family. Can you make her your sweetheart? Moira is sure to fill your heart and home with love and companionship.

If you think that Moira would be the perfect addition to your home, please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on her and other available cats. You can also visit during Open Hours on Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. or Saturday from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. Our phone number is 781-925-3121. You can visit our website, www.hsar.org, to view other available pets in our shelter who are featured on Petfinder.com.

As we clean up from the blizzard, we cannot thank our volunteers enough. An empty laundry bin means people with power took bedding home to keep things clean and dry in the shelter. Thank you to all of the dedicated board members and volunteers who made it to the shelter to continue providing for the daily needs of our residents during the worst storm of the year. We were very fortunate at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue and came through the three days without too much disruption.

Certainly, her pretty little face will capture someone's heart this week. What a fabulous Valentine she will be for one lucky person or family.

We continue to have great support from so many people in Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and surrounding towns and are grateful for all of your help. It is a pleasure to meet and see you at our door with help and donations for the cats in our care.

There is always the need for more help and if you love cats and kittens, and are interested in helping HSAR, please stop by and pick up an application, or call Nancy, our volunteer coordinator, at 781-925-3638 for more information.

Every week brings us closer to our next Gimme Shelter fundraiser and if you or your business would like to help out with a raffle item or gift certificate, please contact us. All of the money from our fundraisers helps us to provide safe and comfortable accommodations for deserving pets who are waiting here for their forever homes.

While Valentine's Day came upon us quickly yesterday, it seems that we will be celebrating it for another week as we continue to get back to normal on the South Shore. To all of our friends, adoptive families and supporters, we hope that you enjoy your celebrations and sweets. Perhaps a warm and purring feline would be the sweetest gift of all.

Neighbors, Land Trust told to work it out

Fox Run access to conservation land at issue

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

These illustrations were provided by the Leffels and Bensons.

If neighborly peace cannot be restored, there is another option: Land Court. Charles Higginson, a member of the Land Trust, suggested during Tuesday's night discussion that could be the place to settle the matter.

Living next to conservation land can be a good thing – unless you fear dog walkers are going to be traipsing through your yard at all hours.

That is the crux of the issue for a small Cohasset neighborhood off Forest Avenue on a private way, dubbed Fox Run.

The neighbors, in particular the Bensons and Leffels, realize taxpayer participation in ensuring the 34 acres, currently owned by the White family, has a conservation restriction and will be preserved as open space – got the go-ahead from last year's Town Meeting.

But the neighbors assert that access to the 34 acres was not properly addressed during last year's approval process. Recently alarms went off for them when surveying took place, property bounds were installed and the Leffels got a letter directing them to remove their lampposts which have stood for more than 20 years since the neighborhood was developed. The survey apparently revealed that some of their property is not theirs at all, but actually part of the White land.

The neighbors also stressed they fear the land will become a mini-Wheelwright Park with 24-hour access to the public.

Cohasset Conservation Trust, a private non-profit group, which is about to close on the purchase the land, will ante up the bulk of the purchase price through private fundraising. The town's participation through the Community Preservation Act to the tune of $100,000 will buy the conservation restriction for the town. The Land Trust has said purchasing the property would save it from potential development and preserve a wildlife corridor from Cedar Street to Wheelwright Park, Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary and Holly Hill Farm.

Fox Run has been in the news for several weeks ever since Selectman Leland Jenkins, who is the selectmen's representative on the Community Preservation Committee that makes recommendations on Community Preservation Act expenditures to Town Meeting, joined the neighbors' cause.

Jenkins feels the neighbors' rights have been trampled upon and thinks they deserve a public hearing on the entire issue. "There is no reason not to have a public hearing," he said.

However, anyone expecting a drawn-out drama about what can now be described as a dispute at the selectmen's meeting this week – would have been disappointed. At the meeting during which Fox Run was listed as a 10-minute agenda item, Chairman Paul Carlson put his board's involvement to rest after hearing relatively brief statements from both sides.

Carlson said there was nothing that the selectmen could do and asked the neighbors and Land Trust try to come up with a neighborly solution that satisfies everyone.

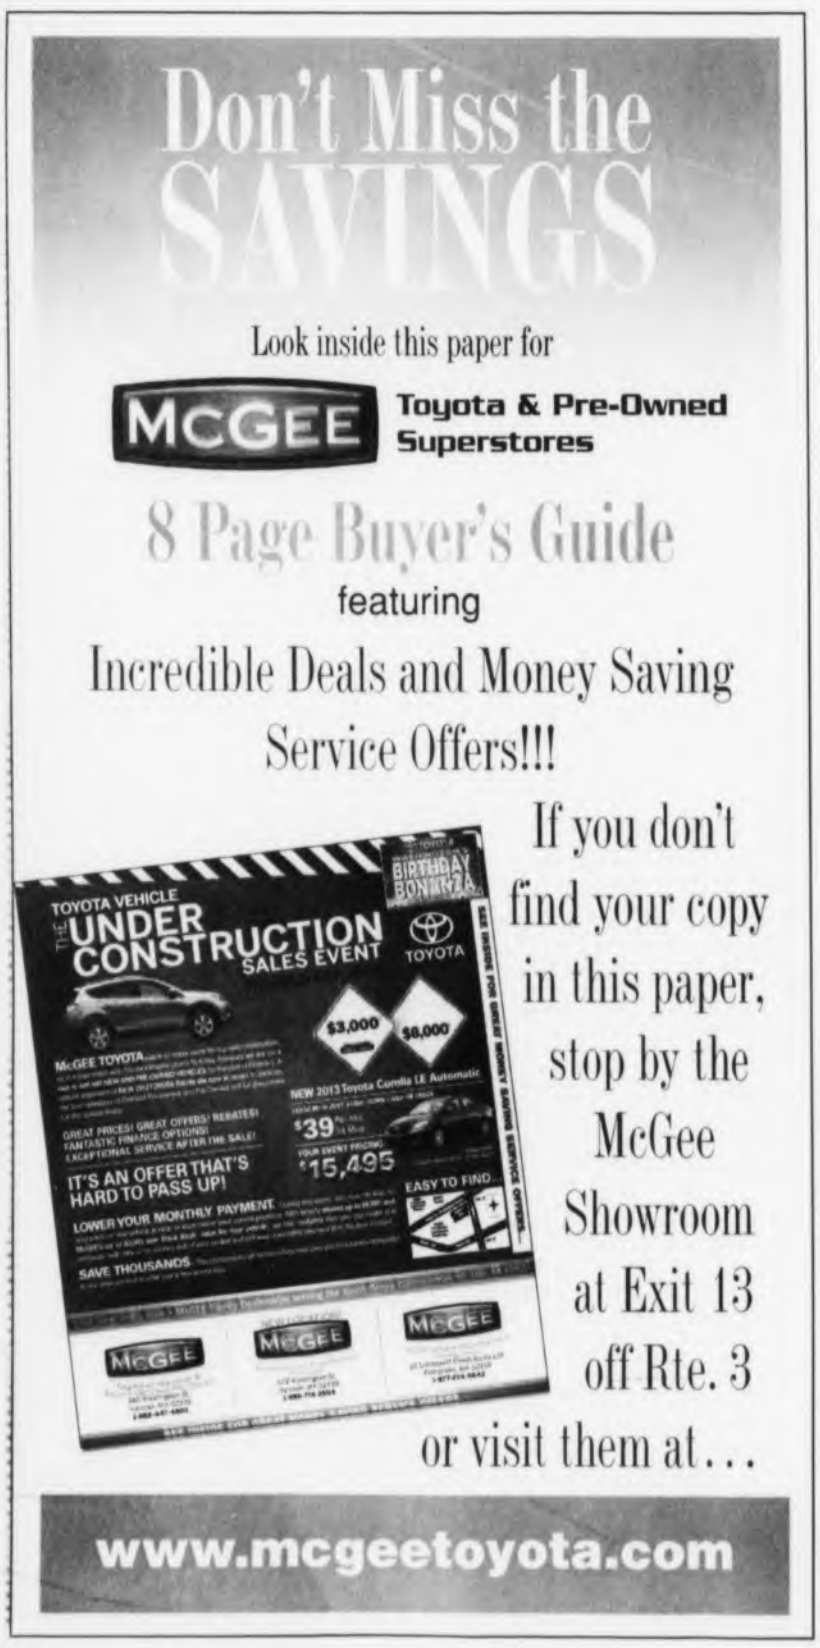
"Work something out in the interest of neighborly relations," he said.

If neighborly peace cannot be restored, there is another option: Land Court. Charles Higginson, a member of the Land Trust, suggested during Tuesday's night discussion that could be the place to settle the matter.

Leffel told selectmen he thought he had a gentlemen's agreement with the Land Trust's Jeffrey Waal that they reached informally in September that the preferred access to the 34-acres would be off Surry Drive, a public way.

Waal explained that the CCT was conducting a title search and surveyed the land, putting in the property bounds, as part of their due diligence in purchasing the property. "We are not infringing on anyone's rights," Waal said.

Jenkins then raised the lamppost issue to which Waal replied "wouldn't you ask to remove it if it were on your land?"



Leffel stated in a letter with a copy provided to selectmen that he and his predecessors have used the land now in dispute openly and without interruption or objection for more than 20 years. He stated he believes he has ownership rights in the areas he has used by adverse possession.

Community Preservation Committee Chairman Russ Bonetti stressed the people on both sides should not confuse the CPC with the CCT, which are totally different. With that being said he pointed out that purchasing open space was the main reason the Community Preservation Act was created. He also said before last year's Town Meeting, there were several meetings on the proposal including presentations before the advisory committee and selectmen.

The neighbors said that the Land Trust and the CPC never addressed questions of public access.

content, a couple of Cohasset students jumped at the chance to launch their very own show.

This is how "CSPN" – the Cohasset Sports Programming Network – was born.

CHS junior Matthew MacCormack, 16, and senior Anthony Nahill, 18, are both sports fans and avid ESPN viewers; so, for them, creating their own, Cohassetized version of ESPN (the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network) was a no-brainer.

"I've always been interested in sports, and Matt loves sports as much as I do," said Anthony.

The two pitched their idea to 143tv program director Don Roine.

"Don was all for it," said Matthew. "We jumped right in."

While the boys could talk endlessly about their love of sports in general and certain professional teams in particular, their TV show focuses on Cohasset sports.

"We decided to cover the sports most relevant to the community," Anthony explained.

While the guys cover school sporting events, the show is not a school program. "It's totally independent of the schools," said CSPN's technical director and co-producer, CHS senior Colin Bell, 17.

"There is no school affiliation," Anthony concurred.

"Except for the fact that [the studio] is in the building," Colin added.

While the crew does spend a good deal of time in the studio, writing scripts and filming episodes, they also do plenty of field reporting, filming at games and conducting interviews with players and coaches on the spot.

The show is filmed biweekly, but the guys say that they work on it in some capacity "every single day."

"After school, we're doing interviews and writing scripts," said Anthony. "We're video chatting on Facebook in the wee hours of the night, organizing our lines. When we're not interviewing, we're either filming for upcoming episodes or evaluating previous shows, what went wrong and what to work on."

It's a major endeavor and time investment for a small group of students, but the men behind CSPN are committed to their product. When the school day ends around 2 p.m., the guys often head straight to the studio, and can often be found there well past dinner time planning, filming, and editing away.

"What takes up the majority of the time – outside of laughing and outtakes – is technical stuff," explained Colin. "Teaching people who aren't very technical how to use the equipment; filming, lighting, sound — the whole spectrum of tech stuff."

"Since we're rookies, we have a lot of bloopers," said Anthony, which the guys like to share with their friends and fans online through CSPN's Facebook and YouTube pages.

Matthew said of their silliness, "Everything's loose. We try to have a humorous tone to the show."

While big on humor, the CSPN cast and crew are also big on building solid foundations for their future careers. Colin hopes to attend Emerson College next year and study film or TV production.

Matthew wants to be "one of two things," a sports broadcaster or sports journalist. He is getting his start with an upcoming sports column in the Mariner.

Anthony, while undecided on where he would like to go to college, knows that he wants to study sports management or broadcasting. "This is a great way to get pre-college experience," he said of the show.

Colin agreed that the experience he's gained working for CCTV "is unparalleled to what some could find in schools... We have access to really nice, advanced equipment... We're out on the field; we have a lot of freedom and get tons of experience. We're going to be more prepared than someone doing this as a school program or taking a class."

Matthew added, "We're lucky we have people like Don [Roine] invested in us producing this show. We're getting a jump on what we want to do in life. It's just something that's invaluable; you can't put a price on it."

Roine demurred, saying that while the cable station helped get the ball rolling, the kids really run the show. "We're the facilitators; they're the talent and the work force."

"We produce the show, all three of us," Matthew said of himself, Anthony and Colin.

Besides experience, achieving local fame is another award for the CSPN guys. The show has garnered praise at local town board meetings, including the school committee and selectmen. There is also an active following on the CSPN Facebook, Twitter and YouTube accounts, where the guys say the majority of their classmates go to watch the show. New episodes are uploaded online after they've already aired on the cable channel.

"We're getting tons of positive feedback," said Colin. "People love it."

"It's been phenomenal," Anthony agreed. "You go around town and people say they saw the show... It's definitely rewarding for the hard work. When everybody comes together, it's fun to see."

While the producers and anchormen are enjoying life in the limelight, they are also quick to name-drop the rest of the crew that helps them create each episode of CSPN. This includes cameramen and sometimes field reporters Bryce Avila, Steve Maher, Jack Stanganelli and Reed Westcott, all seniors.

Matthew said that the show would not be possible without the "dedication of our crew... All of those kids come in to see if we need help but don't get the credit we get; they're not on camera. They're the unsung heroes."

Anthony added, "They deserve as much attention as we do."

Noting that nearly everyone involved in CSPN, from the tech crew to the reporters, are seniors (save for Matthew) begs the question: What happens to the show after everyone graduates this spring?

"Hopefully someone will pass the torch," said Colin. "I definitely hope it continues next year."

"It definitely will," said Matthew.

"Hopefully for years to come," added Anthony.

Senior Conor Bell adjusts one of the rigs they use to keep the camera steady while filming in the field. He is a director, editor, and associate producer of CSPN.

OUR VIEW

The week that was

OK, it was not a full week – but it seemed like a year. We suddenly feel older than we did last Friday before super blizzard Nemo came to our region.

Cohasset saw some of the worst of Nemo, partly do to its geography, along with our neighbors to the south, Scituate and Marshfield.

Cohasset planned for the worst and it is comforting to know that so many of our town employees and officials are looking out for us.

We think this week's Mariner captures the tremendous effort on all levels from town and public safety employees, DPW crews, town officials, neighbors and many more to ensure that we weathered the storm.

This was the first time anyone can recall when Cohasset completely lost power.

Living without lights and heat can be a scary thing, especially if you are trapped inside with snowdrifts against doors or trees down in driveways. The stories of neighbor helping neighbor in the Doane Street neighborhood made us feel really good about human nature.

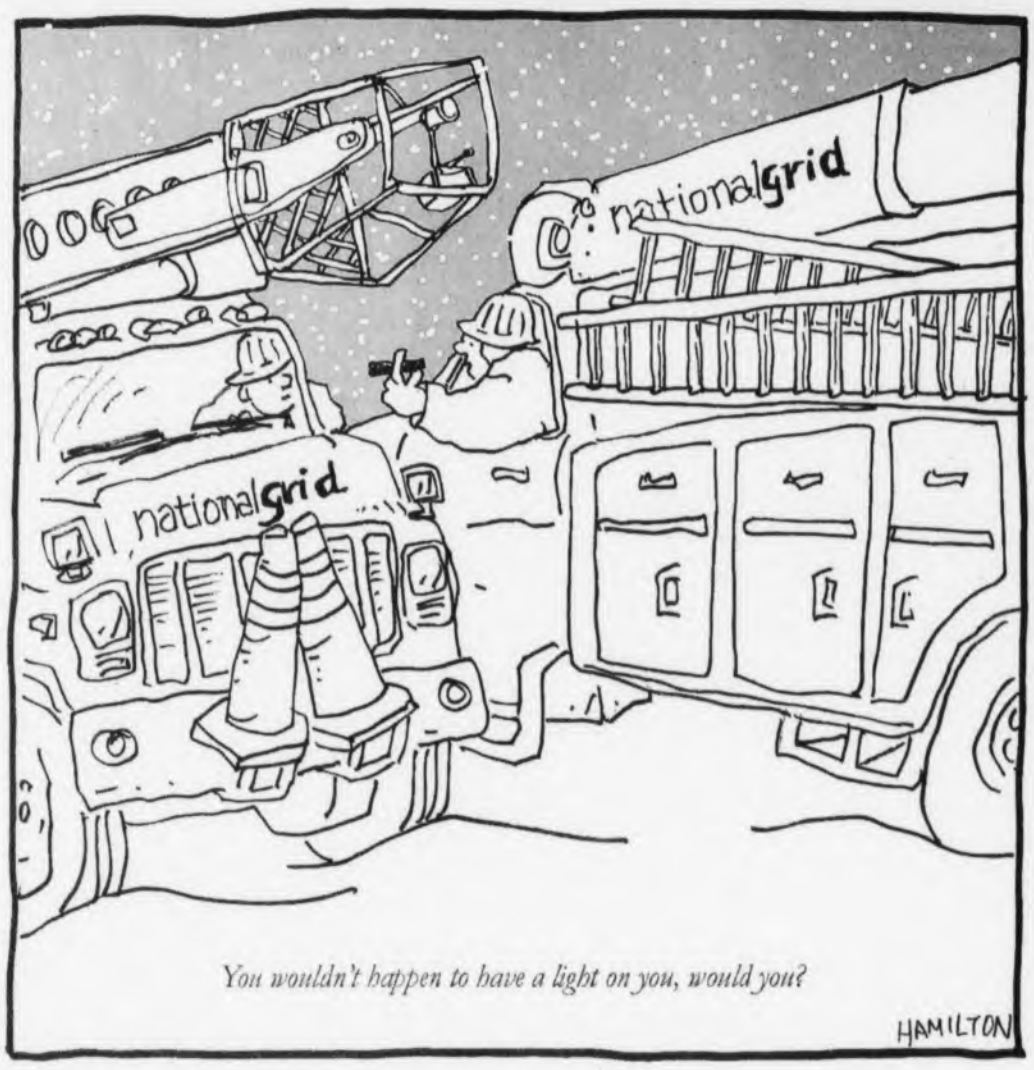
Now that things have settled down, we urge everyone to check their carbon monoxide detectors to ensure they are in good working order. If for some reason, you do not have a carbon monoxide detector, please buy one. The fire department can help you with where they should be placed and how many your home needs.

Residents also need to check where the gas vent is on their house. Make sure it is clear of any snow and check it again if we should get "hit" with another big storm! Please also make sure your tailpipe is clear if your car is idling.

Please also dig out at least the top of your fire hydrant. Firefighters need to be able to see its exact location when responding to a fire.

Our hearts go out to the family on East Street in Hingham that lost their home Monday morning in a 3-alarm fire. We are grateful that two off-duty, out-of town firefighters happened by, spotted the smoke and were able to rescue the woman inside.

Thankfully, house fires are fairly rare in this day and age. But when one does occur – we are thankful for well-trained firefighters whose bravery is awe-inspiring.



We also give a shout out to National Grid for their excellent response. National Grid seems to have gotten the message loudly and clearly since Tropical Storm Irene that there is no substitute for great service and communication.

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Parking issue at West Corner

We have a small antique store in the old North Cohasset Library.

Recently some people or possibly new abutters have complained about the parking for this store's customers.

Apparently someone doesn't want parking on Route 228 near them. Possibly some abutters on Jerusalem Road also may have complained.

Heck, so many complaints from some people have forced their customers to park in a very limited space on Jerusalem Road. Now people are complaining about customers parking "on the sidewalk" – there is no curbing on this small stretch. Of course parking on the sidewalk is not a good idea.

Let's remember this – in the years past, while a library, people could park in these same spots.

It reminds me of moving in beside a farm and complaining about the smell or moving in beside commercial property and complaining about the use of the land when it becomes actively commercial again.

I don't even know the owners of this store but something isn't fair.

Bill Chisholm, 605 Jerusalem Road

Congratulations on a job well done

Congratulations and well done the Police, Fire, and DPW teams who worked tirelessly to help keep Cohasset safe during the historic winter storm. I can't think of a more dedicated team in the state who ensures we have the information readily available and protects our residents from harm's way.

Department heads (Chief Silvia, Deputy Chief Quigley, and Carl Sestito), Town Manager Michael Milanoski, and all of their team members should be commended for a job well done. We are lucky to have them on our side.

Governance Committee seeks community feedback

This is from the Governance Committee:

Dear Citizens:

In the Fall of 2011 the Board of Selectmen created the Governance Committee to review governance in the Town of Cohasset. Our charge was to "Identify any area of the Cohasset Governance Structure that may be improved to provide better governance including accountability and effective/efficient use of limited tax payer dollars".

Since the spring of 2012 the committee has been reviewing the Town Manager Act. The Act defines the role and the powers of the Selectmen and the Town Manager in the performance of their duties. We have completed the review and have attached a draft of the Act with our proposed changes for your review.

The objectives of the review were:

- to clearly define the responsibilities of the Town Manager relative to the Board of Selectmen and the citizens of Cohasset
- to simplify and organize the Act so it is a clear and logical document
- to correct errors in content or language
- align the language of the Act with Massachusetts General Law and the town's bylaws

The next important step in revising the Town Manager Act is to solicit feedback from the community so that your comments and suggestions can be considered in the final draft, which will be presented at the Annual Town Meeting on April 22nd for a vote.

Due to the complexity of the document and the anticipated number of comments we expect to receive from the community, we are asking that all comments and suggested changes to the draft be submitted in writing to the Chairman. You may submit your written comments to governance@townofcohasset.org or to the drop box located at Town Hall (Clerk's Office, 1st Floor). The last day for submission of comments to be considered for inclusion in the article is 5pm Monday, March 11th.

We have scheduled two public forums on February 28th and March 7th at the High School community room at 7 pm to review the changes to the Act and to answer any questions you may have.

The draft of the Town Manager Act published here is also posted on the town website, along with the Town Manager Act of 1997 for comparison.

We welcome all comments and look forward to seeing you at the public hearings on February 28th and March 7th.

Christine Cunning, Chairman

CDTC to host movie night Feb. 15

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will resume its movie nights at 7 p.m., on Friday, Feb. 15, at Paul Pratt Library.. This month's movie is a special feature, "Red Tails," starring Cuba Gooding Jr. The movie tells the story of a crew of African American pilots in the Tuskegee Training Program, who faced segregation and were kept mostly on the ground in World War II. They are finally called to duty under the guidance of Col. A.J. Bullard, played by Terrance Howard. This movie tells the story of the African American, US Army Air Forces aerial combat unit, better know as the Tuskegee Airmen. "Red Tails" is a George Lucas film and was his "passion project" on which he spent $58 million of his own money. The Tuskegee Airmen, the first all African American aerial combat unit, paved the way for the integration of the U.S. armed services. As always CDTC movie nights are free of charge. All are welcome.

Making the evening viewing of "Red Tails" extra special will be an introduction to the movie by Cohasset's own Tuskegee Airman, Jack Bryant. Bryant will speak briefly about the Tuskegee Airman and answer audience questions about his experiences as an Airman. Come and meet Bryant and enjoy "living history."

Director Anthony Hemingway said for him "making the movie carried enormous responsibility." "I went to Tuskegee, Alabama, and actually had the chance to look into the eyes of living history and when I looked into their eyes and connected with them (the Airmen) it registered and the weight of the world was on my shoulders at that point."

THE WINE'D DOWN

Mid-Winter Night's Dream: Wines from the Rhone Valley

It is a great time to be shopping for Rhone wines. While they are never cheap, there are always some good values.

PHIL EDMONDSON

Shakespeare offered us advice about mid-summer dreams but little for mid-winter. Perhaps that was because in the early 1500s the English were focused on Aquitaine and its fine all-season Bordeaux wines. Had English dominance spread a bit further east, Shakespeare might well have written a fine tale about dreams of the Rhone Valley.

The Rhone River runs 500 miles mostly north-south from Swiss mountains to the French Mediterranean, entering the sea in a marshy area called the Camargue (home of more than a few thousand flamingoes among other tropical ornithological delights). In its midsection, it holds on its banks one of the greatest wine regions in the world, an area full of delights for mid-winter evenings.

Wine lovers separate France's Rhone Valley into its North and South regions. Most of the wines that reach the United States come from the southern Rhone and that is due mostly to the larger production in these areas.

The southern Rhone is known prominently for the eponymous wines of the town of Chateauneuf du Pape. The name of the town, literally the New Palace of the Popes, dates to the time when Catholics had two popes, one in Rome and another in France at Avignon, further down the river. The papal party often summered in this village, cooler than Avignon. Its famous castle is just a ruin now and often shown as a wretched-looking tower on wine labels from the area. This agricultural town boasts soils that sometimes look so rocky that it is hard to imagine that anything, never mind mind-boggling grapes, can grow in the area.

Chateauneuf du Pape wines are a blend of grape varietals such as Grenache, Mourvedre, Carignan and Cinsault. Together they produce wines that are deep, strong, smoky and spicy. Some of my favorite CDP winemakers include Vieux Donjon, La Nerthe and Clos des Papes. Many other towns of the southern Rhone also produce wines either with the names of their villages or often with the name Cotes du Rhone (literally from the banks of the Rhone) or the slightly higher-ranked Cotes du Rhone Village designation (government controlled and tradition-bound in typical French style). These offer better values, particularly in good vintage years.

The northern Rhone is dominated by a different grape, Syrah, that also produces a smoky, spicy flavor but in a wine that is a bit less hearty. Some of the most expensive wines in all of France come from northern Rhone towns such as Cote-Rotie, Hermitage and Condrieu. Be prepared to spend for a special occasion should you venture into these scrumptious beauties.

It is a great time to be shopping for Rhone wines. While they are never cheap, there are always some good values. Top vintage years include 2009, 2010 and 2011 with the middle of the three the best choice in my opinion.

Not to be outdone, California's vintners have been experimenting with grape varietals from the Rhone for decades. Collectively, these American winemakers are referred to as Rhone Rangers and they have produced some great American takes on the Old World answer to winter wine pairings for stews, beef and pork dishes. Some of my favorites include Qupe and Sean Thackery, recommended by Howie Rubin at Bauer Wines in Boston. I think that The Bard of Avon would be pleased with some of these New World versions, as well.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Nature's fertilizer and people's sustenance

The snow is plentiful, thick and wonderful for the patient fields.

JON BELBER

With seed packets arranged alphabetically, by plant variety, with wood stacked neatly by the greenhouse stove and with plenty of snow on and next to the propagation greenhouse (fancy term for plastic hoop house where the farmer sows seeds), the farmer is ready to begin the growing season with the likes of shallots and delphinium.

But wait, the plow on the old black truck has many passes to take. The chicken yard needs a good shoveling, not to mention the fencing wire needs a good shake, so the sun can stream in and let the increasing daylight give hope to those still without power – and chickens the sense of comfort so they in turn might produce more eggs.

All of this is in light of the potentially weary farmer (before the season begins), who has shoveled, plowed, and heaved just to get to these locations. The snow is plentiful, thick and wonderful for the patient fields.

Nature's fertilizer is not just an old myth. Unlike rain that will find rivulets and make trenches in the fields and flow towards brooks to overflow, the snow will take on a slow melt. I like to think of it slowly settling into the ground, deep into the well-composted, fertile bed rows.

Once in there, the water can be drawn later on a hot summer day, by slowly establishing roots. The heavy snow will also hold that soil and prevent it from eroding, as it is so precious and valuable. The topsoil in the fields, upon which the plants depend so much of their growing and fruit producing life, is vital to the success of the underground carrot, the field level arugula and the tall, staked tomato.

In the greenhouse, which serves as the nursery for all the tiny seedlings, the farmer can sow and observe the baby plants in rich, balanced, healthy (organic) starter soil for the best laid results. In the fields, one is left to greater chance. In the greenhouse, there is more control for the farmer, and the willing, maybe many, volunteers to prepare hardy seedlings.

As for these past few days, control and preparedness are two terms that hit close to home. When a tree falls in the woods and a farmer does not hear it, there is a good chance she will see it on a trail walk, which is a great excuse anyway for an outing and a break from staring at the seed catalogues and spreadsheets of planting plans and calculating yields per bed feet.

That fallen tree needs to be cleared for other walkers, both two- and four-footed explorers, and for a greater purpose back in the farmyard. A well-fed wood stove can warm a farmer, a greenhouse full of eager seedlings and even an old, drafty house. However, the ability to build a fire in the fireplace is greatly hampered and impaired when faced with dreadful flooding, dangerous tides and a frightening storm surge, which many have had to endure.

There are long lines of cold folks and willing residents who will seek out many means to connect a generator to the electronic only, latest model furnace burner. But it is the slowly turned fire that has sustained many of us over the chilly days and frigid nights, when all things power were out of our control. A carefully monitored fire and a well-located candle (beware the restless cats) can serve as enough to provide some warmth and shimmering glow for putting a pen to paper.

With many a report on the computer, emails on hiatus and texting potential out of juice, it seemed OK to reflect on thankful sources of sustenance available at the farm in the form of prepared farmers and nicely chopped, split wood. As for the pen and paper, it is good for jotting ideas about what to do when the power is restored, great for keeping track of a Scrabble game and terrific for writing a letter to put in an envelope, with a stamp, thanking a wise friend about how sound the advice is to stack some wood for the next storm when we lose power and control.

VIEW FROM THE (SNOW-COVERED) FRONT PORCH

Nemo, neighbors and the net

Have you ever noticed that the aftermath of a storm seems to be the perfect magnet to draw people out of their homes?

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Anyone else tired?

Well, there's no getting around it for a storm with a ridiculous name, Nemo packed a mighty big wallop. While I have a feeling Cohasset will be remembering this one for quite a while, I'm not sure that looking back on 'Blizzard Nemo' will be as cool as looking back on 'The Blizzard of 78."

Despite its lack luster name Nemo's impact was decisive, although one could argue (and I shall be that one) that the outcome wasn't all negative. Sure, we were all put out by the power outages, the cold, the treacherous driving and the arduous task of getting roughly two feet of precipitation off of our walks and driveways, but in many ways its times like these that genuinely bring out the best in folks.

Have you ever noticed that the aftermath of a storm seems to be the perfect magnet to draw people out of their homes? Living on Fairoaks Lane I was front in center in seeing people pull together to help others and would like to share two examples. Christopher Lund (no not the father, he's still giving his baseball awards speech) and his friends stepped up to help shovel driveways of those who needed assistance. Steve McElhinney played a crucial and calming role in the effort to help a 92-year-old neighbor who was huddled under blankets in her frigid home get to a place she could stay until the power came back on.

Stories of shoveling, helping or inviting people to share a warm spot by a fire were common place all across town as many put their own struggles aside to assist others. I am sure several of you have stories you could share and encourage you to do so. Helping each other, it's what good neighbors do and it was on full display last weekend.

Additionally, we all should tip our hats to all the people who worked countless hours to get us through this storm. From the DPW team, to our police and fire departments to the volunteers who helped with the shelter, to the businesses who donated their services and the power crews who worked tirelessly, they all have earned our gratitude. Town Manager Michael Milanoski and Acting (can we drop this?) Police Chief William Quigley both showed strong leadership working exhausting hours to get us on the right track. Next time you see any of them, take a moment and say thank you, they've earned it.

I was especially impressed with Chief Quigley and his team in the way they utilized Facebook to share any latest updates with the community. Continuously through the storm and its aftermath, the Cohasset Police Department (CPD) communicated power updates, latest concerns and other pertinent information through their Facebook page.

The greatest part of the CPD's use of Facebook wasn't just the information that they shared, it was that Cohasset citizens were interacting and relaying situations with the police, helping them better identify those in need. It was remarkable to see the give and take unfold. If you have a Facebook account, I strongly recommend you follow the Cohasset Police Department page and the Cohasset Mariner page for that matter too.

If anything, the events of the past week should leave us with two things:

1. Memories; memories of Mother Nature's sheer dominance and memories of neighbors pulling together to help each other through.

2. The value of social media; outlets such as Facebook and Twitter will continue to grow in their importance to get key messages out; watch the role they play the next time we have an impactful storm. Oh there will be another storm, but maybe next time the folks who are in charge of naming storms will come up with a more fitting name; perhaps 'Blizzard Nigel' or 'Blizzard Nick'.

Thanks for reading and stay warm.

FOR THE RECORD

Weathering another storm

Hopefully you're reading this by some sort of artificial light generated by a switch or plug and not candlelight or flashlight.

GREGORY MATHIS

Nemo may not have been the biggest winter storm to blast through the Northeast, but it was certainly fearsome in many ways.

For us on the South Shore and Cape Cod, we dealt with ferocious winds that knocked down trees, sent branches flying, downed power lines and utility poles.

Over time, though, it's unlikely the Blizzard of 2013 will be mentioned in the same breath as the Blizzard of '78, which still stands as the measuring stick for all winter storms in the Boston region.

And '78 isn't even the storm with the most snowfall recorded in Boston. That honor goes to the Feb. 17-18, 2003 storm that produced 27.6 inches of snow at the airport. '78 is second with 27.1 inches.

Where did Nemo end up? It'll crack the top five in terms of snowfall amount in Boston, which puts it in good company in these parts as far as storms and rankings go.

But for those of us who experienced the recent drama, Nemo or the Blizzard of 2013 will be remembered for more than just the 24.9 inches of snow that fell at Logan Airport. There will be stories of howling, damaging winds that sounded like a freight train and shook our homes. And of course people will remember the power outages. Recent storms have been measured by how long people have been without electricity and hot water.

Hopefully you're reading this by some sort of artificial light generated by a switch or plug and not candlelight or flashlight.

We're hearty New Englanders and can handle a lot when it comes to winter weather.

But being without power for any extended period of time is not good for anyone. Just ask my wife.

We've all become so dependent on technology, therefore electricity. We may even take it for granted.

I think we've set the expectations high in terms of the coverage we provide during storms and big stories, and you've come to expect a lot from us.

We expect a lot from ourselves in keeping you informed.

That's where power outages can be a real challenge, especially when weather causes havoc.

Take this winter storm, for instance.

Editors, reporters and photographers reported to work as expected on Friday, but by mid-to- late afternoon we were all heading home ahead of the "worst" of the storm.

We knew there was going to be some weekend work ahead of us, but we were counting on electricity to keep the devices juiced.

But the best laid plans often go astray.

I'm not sure if anyone had power past 9 p.m. Friday night. I know I didn't.

So as we headed into the height of the storm and into Saturday, when information was essential, many of us were on borrowed time as laptop battery power drained and mobile devices and tablets became the tools to communicate.

We were able to post updates through Facebook and Twitter on smart phones and some were able to update websites with waning power on laptops and tablets. Of course a visit to the car every couple of hours to charge the smart phone or tablet helped keep us in business throughout much of the storm.

When it was all said and done, the colleagues I work with once again went above and beyond to make sure we were passing on vital information. Hopefully you were connected to notice.

Until the next big story...

DON'T MISS THIS

Carole Bolsey exhibition at SSAC

Kingston artist Carole Bolsey will show her paintings of horses at South Shore Art Center, opening from 6 to 8 p.m., on Friday, Feb. 22. The exhibition is titled "Levitations: Horsing Around."

These works aren't "about" horses. They're "of" horses. And space, and movement. And drawing and paint. Without narratives, they're "riffs" on horses, creatures being themselves – unbridled, unsaddled, un-ridden and apparently untrained. Too wild or too young to behave. Jumping straight into the air, all their power bunched into a jump for no reason, a kind of weighty flight; high jinks. Horsing around.

For more information, visit www.ssac.org.

Police Officer Chris Dias loads food out of 5 South Main's building. The owners of 5 South Main, Mr. Dooley's, and Fresh Feast donated thousands of dollars in food to the Cohasset Warming Center. Hot meals were provided to anyone who asked. Cohasset Police Detective James McLean, who is an accomplished chef, cooked for the masses. Stop and Shop also donated food. COURTESY PHOTOS

NEMO

According to National Grid, most Cohasset residents had power restored by Monday night, ahead of the utility company's promise to have the lights – and heat – turned on by Tuesday night. To help facilitate the repowering, National Grid sent in crews from as far away as South Carolina, Alabama and Colorado.

Cohasset's Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski had nothing but good things to say about National Grid. "In this storm, they were phenomenal," he said. National Grid president Marcy Reed toured communities over the weekend, and met with Milanoski twice in Cohasset on Sunday and Monday, asking for a priority list to help get Cohasset back on its feet.

And while the kids had a five-day weekend off from school (Cohasset schools stayed closed Monday and Tuesday while the town cleaned up, and the Deer Hill School was converted into a warming center), it was hardly a time for just fun and games. While children could be seen making snowmen and snow angels, skiing and enjoying the winter wonderland, many folks were in the dark and cold, waiting and wondering when the lights would come back on.

While some Cohasseters fled the area after the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) issued a recommended evacuation of coastal areas, others toughed it out despite the difficulties. Many neighbors banded together to endure the aftereffects of Nemo (see related story on Doane Street heroics).

Warming up

A heartwarming example of community coming together took place in the Deer Hill warming center. Police Detective James McLean took on head chef duties for the weekend – perhaps taking only a few hours off each day for quick naps, according to Milanoski – serving up burgers, pizza, chicken, soup and more to cold and hungry residents, with food and other items generously donated from Cohasset's Stop & Shop, Mr. Dooley's Irish Pub, 5 South Main, and Fresh Feast. Mr. Dooley's and 5 South Main even sent a few cooks over to help in the warming center's kitchen.

The warming center served as a place for residents to recharge their cell phones, bodies and spirits with complimentary meals, electrical outlets to charge up their devices, and a place to get in from out of the cold.

While not a full emergency shelter by the Red Cross's definition, the center gave residents a chance to bounce back from the storm. Milanoski said that over 600 residents came through the Deer Hill doors over the weekend. Those who needed medical assistance or a place to sleep over were transported to the nearest Red Cross shelter in Weymouth (only 10 or so residents sought shelter there).

Board of Health Administrator Felix Zemel and public health nurse Mary Goodwin oversaw the warming center, checking everyone in and making sure those who needed it received basic medical care. Volunteers from the town CERT (Cohasset Emergency Response Team) and the Board of Health's medical reserve corp. also provided assistance.

Walking the line

Over the weekend, following a mechanical failure of a generator at the water plant, the town issued a water ban. While the water was still deemed safe to drink, residents were asked to conserve water as much as possible.

Milanoski explained that a lightning strike during the height of the storm was believed to cause the problem, essentially shutting the plant down. The town manager reached out to Cohasset's Emergency Management director Glenn Pratt, who was in Florida at the time; Pratt coordinated with MEMA and the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to get a backup generator sent to power up the water plant. After being told the generator might not arrive until Wednesday, help arrived Saturday night. Pratt was back in Cohasset to oversee the connection.

National Grid was part of this adventure, too. The crew from South Carolina was assigned to getting the water plant up and running again, said Milanoski. Chief Silvia said he admired their grit and bravery as they trudged through snowdrifts for hours to follow the power line from the water plant on King Street to Wompatuck State Park.

"The South Carolina crew walked from King Street all the way to Doane Street, a mile or two, in three to four foot deep snow," said Silvia. "It took them almost four hours to follow the line and make sure everything was proper."

Milnaoski noted that another town official helped to power up another Cohasset building; Sewer Commissioner Wayne Sawchuk had a generator from the sewer department brought to the Council on Aging in the town's Community Center.

Town Hall and Deer Hill also ran on generator power while waiting for electricity to be fully restored by National Grid.

The DPW had the arduous task of tree and limb cutting and clearing, along with plenty of snow plowing to keep them busy for days.

"The DPW ran for 48 hours straight," Milanoski said on Monday. "We sent them home Sunday night; they were able to get six hours of sleep and came back this morning. They're working their tails off."

The public safety team also assisted in plowing and clearing tasks, along with directing traffic.

"It was a crazy weekend," said Deputy Police Chief William Quigley. "All of the police, firefighters, DPW, Board of Health and other town departments have been working around the clock since Friday. We doubled the staff on the police department to handle the influx of calls."

Silvia could vouch for the fact that his department was plenty busy. "Between Friday afternoon and yesterday [Tuesday] at 6 p.m., we responded to 166 calls, most of which were storm related. In a normal four to five day period, we would've responded to less than a third of that number. Every piece of equipment we had was on the road at different times."

With all of its engines tied up, the fire department was unable to respond to a call for a fire at East Street in Hingham, close to the Cohasset town line, on Monday afternoon.

Both public safety departments were invested in keeping Cohasset residents safe during and after the massive storm.

"Everybody is operating to the best of their abilities," said Silvia. "In these situations, I always say, 'Sleep is highly overrated.'"

Despite the long hours, lack of sleep and dire weather conditions, Cohasset managed to rally. "As difficult as it's been, the community really pulled together," said Quigley.

Silvia summed it up with, "An event like this really brings out the best in everyone."

Cohasset Engine 2 and a police car were damaged by a falling tree (same incident) during Nemo. Thankfully the firefighters and officer were not injured. You can see the smashed windshield on the engine. CFD duct taped it up and continued to respond to emergencies all weekend. The cruiser will be needing a new door.

Police Detective James McLean took on head chef duties for the weekend serving up burgers, pizza, chicken, soup and more to cold and hungry residents, with food and other items generously donated from Cohasset's Stop & Shop, Mr. Dooley's Irish Pub, 5 South Main, and Fresh Feast. Mr. Dooley's and 5 South Main even sent a few cooks over to help in the warming center's kitchen.

TOWN ELECTION

Two running for selectmen

Lee Jenkins, Steve Gaumer pull papers

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

There are two open seats on the Board of Selectmen and so far, two officials have put their names in the ring for the May 11 Town Election.

Current selectman Leland Jenkins, whose first term is up this spring, pulled nomination papers on Tuesday, Feb. 12, the first day papers were available; Steve Gaumer, who currently serves on the Capital Budget and Budget Planning committees, pulled papers the same day.

Jenkins issued the following statement on why he plans to run again: "I am a candidate for Selectman running to safeguard the progress we have made and to initiate plans for future improvements that will continue the ultimate goal of financial health of the town. We can no longer afford to have our taxes increase 10 percent every three-plus years. Cohasset families want their town to be in the 'Top Ten' in education but not in real estate taxes."

Gaumer could not be reached for comment before press time.

So far, a handful of residents have pulled papers to run in the Town Election.

Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre reported that along with Jenkins and Gaumer, papers were pulled for seats on the Housing Authority, Board of Assessors, and Library Trustees.

James Sheerin has pulled papers to fill an unexpired term on the Housing Authority. Elsa Miller will run for reelection to the Board of Assessors, while Teresa Polhemus pulled papers for the Library board. Both Miller and Polhemus are incumbents on their boards.

Election date

The Town Election is scheduled for Saturday, May 11. While some towns are scheduling their local elections to coincide with the state senate primary (April 30), Cohasset is not planning to move its date.

"We're keeping them separate," the Town Clerk explained, a decision that she reached along with Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski and selectmen chair Paul Carlson.

While other towns are expecting to save money by grouping the elections together, St. Pierre explained that this is not necessarily the case.

"They're dual elections; three ballots, Democrat, Republican and town election," said St. Pierre. "We still have to pay for the programming of the AutoMARK [voting machine] and the tabulators. You would have to hire more election workers... you would have to change the time of the town election."

Cohasset has a candidate running for the US Senate: Gabriel Gomez, a businessman and former Navy SEAL, announced his candidacy for the GOP ticket on Tuesday.

Look for more on the town and senate elections in upcoming editions of the Mariner.

Fitting end to season

Cohasset/Norwell hits season high in final meet

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The Norwell/Cohasset gymnastics team finished its 2012/13 season in impressive fashion, beating Thayer Academy, 126.05-118.15.

"(Coach) Nancy (Durkin) and I were really excited about this win. It was a season high," Coach Ruthan Ardizzoni said. "We also realized in the past four years of coaching the team, it is the highest team score that we have gotten."

Junior Christina Tedeschi competed in the all-around and finished with a score of 30.85. Her teammate, Elizabeth Coletta, earned a 31.15 in the all-around.

The night began on the bars, and the Norwell/Cohasset gymnasts turned in quite a performance to take a 1.7-point lead right away.

Leading Norwell/Cohasset were Emma Basso and Alex Oremus, who both scored a 7.6 Tedeschi scored a 7.5, and Coletta earned a 7.3.

In the second event of the night – the vault – Norwell/Cohasset had one of its top performances of the season. Basso and Oremus both scored an 8.2, and Tedeschi scored an 8.0. After two events, Norwell/Cohasset led Thayer Academy by nearly four points.

"A good lead, but then you never know what is going to happen on that four-inch wide balance beam," Ardizzoni said. "(But) every gymnast stuck the beam."

Basso and Mimi Waters both earned an 8.2, followed by Coletta (8.0), Kelsey McCunney (7.8), Tedeschi (7.35), and Madison Sheldon (7.2). Norwell/Cohasset had a comfortable five-point lead heading into the final event of the night – the floor exercise.

Huge stretch run

Cohasset quest comes down to final game

By William Wassersug

No matter how it ends, the Cohasset girls basketball team can call this season a success.

With a three-game win streak over Monomoy, Mashpee and a tough one at Nantucket, Cohasset kept itself right in the chase for an MIAA Tournament invitation not long after it looked impossible with a 6-10 record.

With a 48-31 win at Mashpee, and 46-27 win at Nantucket, Cohasset improved to 9-10, leaving the playoff future down to one game, at East Bridgewater on Friday night.

It will be a big challenege, as E.B. is 12-6 this season.

Still, with Cohasset's defense, anything is possible.

Against Mashpee, Senior Kristen Alexander led the charge with 20 points, while freshman Emily Rosano added 10 points and freshman Megan Rosano chipped in 6 points and some excellent defense.

Mashpee gave Cohasset a very physical game both teams turning the ball over a lot.

A game earlier, Cohasset turned in a terrific defensive effort in a 46-25 home win against Monomoy in a contest played a day early to get it in before the weekend's blizzard.

Defense has been the key factor in Cohasset's run, and if the current group of players sticks around, the future, immediate and beyond, bode well.

Education the recruiting trick for Foster

Former SciCoh star

By Dick Trust
For the Scituate Mariner

Cornell University is getting the complete package in John Foster.

The Ivy League institution of higher learning will welcome the Scituate High School student-athlete to its Ithaca, N.Y., campus in late summer and find a young man with excellent grades, a talent for football and basketball, strong leadership qualities, and limitless potential in his future endeavors

"First off, I'm going to college for an education," the Scituate High senior and former Sci-Co football player said. "I figured I couldn't go wrong with an Ivy League education."

Foster committed to Cornell on his official visit two weeks after Thanksgiving. While he will concentrate on his studies as an economics major, he said he has been "offered a spot on the football team" and has gladly accepted.

"Something about the coaching staff and the (gridiron) program as a whole and the school itself all struck me as the place to be," said Foster, a 6-4½, 250-pounder who played left guard and defensive tackle at Scituate and will serve on the offensive line in college.

He has done a thorough review of Cornell's educational opportunities, but also has previewed the Big Red football team.

"I know they have a really good returning quarterback in Jeff Matthews," Foster said of the All-Ivy League selection who has been looked at by NFL scouts. "And there's a new head coach, David Archer, who is the youngest head football coach in Division 1 football."

Archer was 30 years and 2 months old when he was named coach Jan. 3.

A 2005 Cornell graduate and a former Big Red football captain, Archer strikes some common ground with Foster. Archer majored in economics and was an offensive lineman. They should have plenty to talk about.

"I'm not sure what to expect, but I have high hopes," Foster said. "I'm really looking forward to being with the team."

Foster's sister, Sarah, is a junior at Cornell, "so she'll be a senior when I'm a freshman and she'll be able to show me the ropes," John said.

Foster showed his brother, Dan, the ropes this past season. Dan was a sophomore cornerback on the junior varsity football team, but the jayvees shared practice time with the varsity – which meant meaningful moments with big brother John.

"It was an unbelievable experience (being on the field) with my little brother," Foster said. "We made some memories. There are things I'll never forget."

Flibotte debut a big one

Former Cohasset star nets game-winner in college debut

Bucknell freshman midfielder and former Cohasset star Thomas Flibotte had a memorable collegiate debut in a 9-8 win at Delaware on Saturday, and today he picked up the first Patriot League Rookie of the Week award of the 2013 season.

Flibotte scored two goals in the victory, including the game-winner with 3:30 left in the game.

Bucknell, ranked 18th in both national polls, darted out to a 5-0 lead against the Blue Hens, who already had a victory under their belts. Delaware scored three straight times to pull within 5-3, but late in the second quarter Flibotte scored a big goal to halt the momentum and give the Bison a 6-3 lead at intermission.

Delaware eventually rallied to take its first lead at 8-7 in the fourth quarter, but Bison freshman Brock Ghelfi tied the game with 6:12 to play, and then Flibotte won it with an unassisted goal with 3:30 left.

Now 1-0 on the season, the Bison return to action on Sunday at Mount St. Mary's at 1 p.m.

"We have seven wins. We need three more. It might come down to the last game," Cohasset coach John LeVangie said after the Monomoy win, while calling the scenario correctly. "For us to be at this point in the season, especially with our age, is great. We started three freshmen and a sophomore."

No matter how it turns out, the positives are there, for now and the future.

"We'll be alright," he said. "Sometimes I forget they're freshmen and sophomores. Defensively we're one of the best in the league. Since the fourth game of the season, noone has scored more than 42 points."

LeVangie is pleased with his young team.

"Kristen Alexander is spectacular," he said. "Alexa Bleicken is doing well. Kerry Dunn, Megan Rosano, Emily Rosano. They're all doing well. They're a hard working team."

Cohasset's Lily McCarthy brings the ball up against Monomoy.

In the Nantucket victory, Alexander led the Skippers with 15 points. Emily Rosario scored 8 points, and Alexa Bleicken had 7 points and 13 rebounds.

Emily Foster is John's other sibling; she's a Northeastern student.

John made such an impression in football that he was named to the 15th annual Super26 All-State All-Star football team, sponsored by the Gridiron Club of Greater Boston and selected by the Massachusetts High School Football Coaches Association.

The team and a host of individual award winners will be honored March 3 at the Lantana in Randolph.

Scituate High head football coach Herb Devine applauded Foster's prestigious award. Devine pointed to Foster's leadership and passion for the game as one of the Sailors' four captains this past season.

"Johnny has the knack of being a leader and guys follow him," Devine said. "He's a motivator. He's enthusiastic. He's competitive, but he does it in a way where he invites people in. I see it with the younger guys. John has a younger brother and I think that's very beneficial because he's used to dealing with having a younger brother and his friends.

"What separates Johnny from the others is he can relate to all ages. His personality is that of a natural born leader."

Devine said that one of the captains' responsibilities "is to be a right-hand man for the coaches. It's great to have good leadership in the offseason and that's what John and the other captains provided."

Describing Foster as a "great student-athlete," Devine said he wants his players "to know and understand that this is a steppingstone to college, and John is right up there as our leader, going to Cornell. We don't want kids just playing football and not being students.

"Johnny is very well-rounded athlete. He takes some honors classes, does some things in the community. Academically he's exceptional, very bright and intelligent, with a high GPA. He's going to have a ton of success when he graduates. I can just see him as a business owner. I know he had his own little landscaping business. He's a little entrepreneur, which is great to see at a young age. That's John. He does it all."

Among Foster's activities is varsity basketball, and he's the starting center on the Scituate boys team that has qualified for the Division 2 South Sectional of the MIAA's postseason tournament.

"I'm focusing on basketball right now," Foster said. "We've got a great chance to get some home games and make a run at the state tournament. After basketball, I'll begin my workouts and get ready for football."

If Foster plays basketball at all at Cornell, he said it would be on the club level. Football will be his primary sport.

If the opportunity presents itself, would Foster consider a career in pro football?

"I have a real passion for football," said Foster, who has played the game since third grade. "I've always dreamed about it and thought about it, but I'm going to school for the education. I know you can get to the NFL from the Ivy League, but I'm preparing for my education rather than the NFL. I'll study economics and see where it takes me."

While Foster has worked hard to get where he is, he credits his coaches for much of his success.

"One of the big reasons I got to this level to go to Cornell and play Division 1 football is Coach Devine and all my other coaches at Scituate High School," Foster said.

"When I was in eighth grade, I contemplated going to private school, figuring that would take me to the next level. But as a family we decided I'd stay at Scituate. Going to a Division 1 school is a big deal for me and I'm happy for myself, but I think it had a lot to do with the coaching staff. Scituate High School is no slouch of a program for football or as a school. The teachers, coaches, everyone, brought me to this level. I have a lot of them to thank."

Devine thanks Foster for staying in Scituate for his high school years.

"I love seeing more of the local kids stay in Scituate and Johnny's the perfect example of staying in your hometown," Devine said. "He's doing great in school, excelling on the football field and the basketball court and able to go to a school like Cornell.

"Playing in your hometown, developing the program, seeing the young kids wanting to play for your hometown team, that goes a long way. Teams like Duxbury don't lose a lot of kids to private schools because what they're doing is working.

"Private schools obviously are great," Devine said, "but they're fit for some, maybe not everybody. Whether it's football, hockey, soccer, baseball, basketball, I'd like to see more kids stay home."

At least until they go to college. And for John Foster, Cornell is calling.

"The girls demonstrated great poise, grace, and high amplitude on their floor routines," Ardizzoni said.

Tedeschi and Coletta both scored an 8.0, followed by Waters and McCunney (7.85 each), and Micaela Durkin (7.4).

Other Norwell/Cohasset gymnasts that contributed to the win included captain Emily Kuhn, and Julia Richardson. Ardizzoni also praised team manager Courtney Smith, a team member that was sidelined with an injury. Ardizzoni also hoped to see the return of Livie Rober, who's missed a majority of the season with a back injury.

The All-League Meet was scheduled for Tuesday at Spectrum Gymnastics in Brockton. Cohasset/Norwell will be in Session I and was ranked second place out of the six that were set to compete.

"Hopefully we will have another strong performance," Ardizzoni said prior to the meet.

Reiki Master to visit Second Congregational

By Laura DeSisto
Special to the Mariner

"Reiki practitioners have been taught to allow the universal life force energy to flow through their own bodies into others in a very beneficial way."
Ann Finnie

Ann Finnie of Scituate is a practical type. While raising two children as a single mother, she spent years working in corporate accounting. Yet, a lunch meeting with a former colleague caused Ann to call into question many of her left-brained assumptions.

Ann's former co-worker at an investment firm had suffered for years with chronic allergies, bronchitis and back pain. At the lunch, Ann was shocked to see the woman in perfect health and naturally questioned her about what she had done to achieve it. As it turns out, Ann's friend had been participating in a form of energy healing known as Reiki (Ray-kee).

"If I hadn't seen it with my own eyes, I wouldn't have believed it," says Finnie. "This woman suffered for years and had tried everything to get better. I was shocked that something that seemed so 'out there' to me had been the thing to help her."

Her curiosity piqued, Finnie began to look into Reiki. She learned that Reiki is an ancient form of energy healing that originated in Japan. During a Reiki session, trained Reiki practitioners offer a gentle "laying on of hands" to the client. The theory is that energy blockages — physical and/or emotional — are what cause pain and disease. By moving energy through the client, the practitioner seeks to break up the blockages and restore health.

"We all contain and are composed of energy," says Finnie. "Further, we are all conduits of a larger life force energy, God if you will. Reiki practitioners have been taught to allow the universal life force energy to flow through their own bodies into others in a very beneficial way."

Ultimately, Finnie became so convinced of Reiki's effectiveness, that she decided to undergo the training to become a practitioner and in so doing, experienced her own personal healing.

Now, having advanced through all the training levels, Finnie is considered a Reiki Master Teacher and is certified to train others in the healing art. She has been practicing and teaching for over 8 years and has trained a number of people. During that time, she has witnessed healing occur for a variety of conditions, both physical and emotional.

"Clients come to me to experience relief from a variety of conditions from chronic pain to migraines, depression, diabetes, you name it. Reiki is not meant to replace conventional medicine, but rather to work in tandem with it. The nice thing though is that sometimes where other treatments fail, we offer clients hope and a different approach when the doctors have told them there is nothing else they can do. I have been witness to some incredible healing."

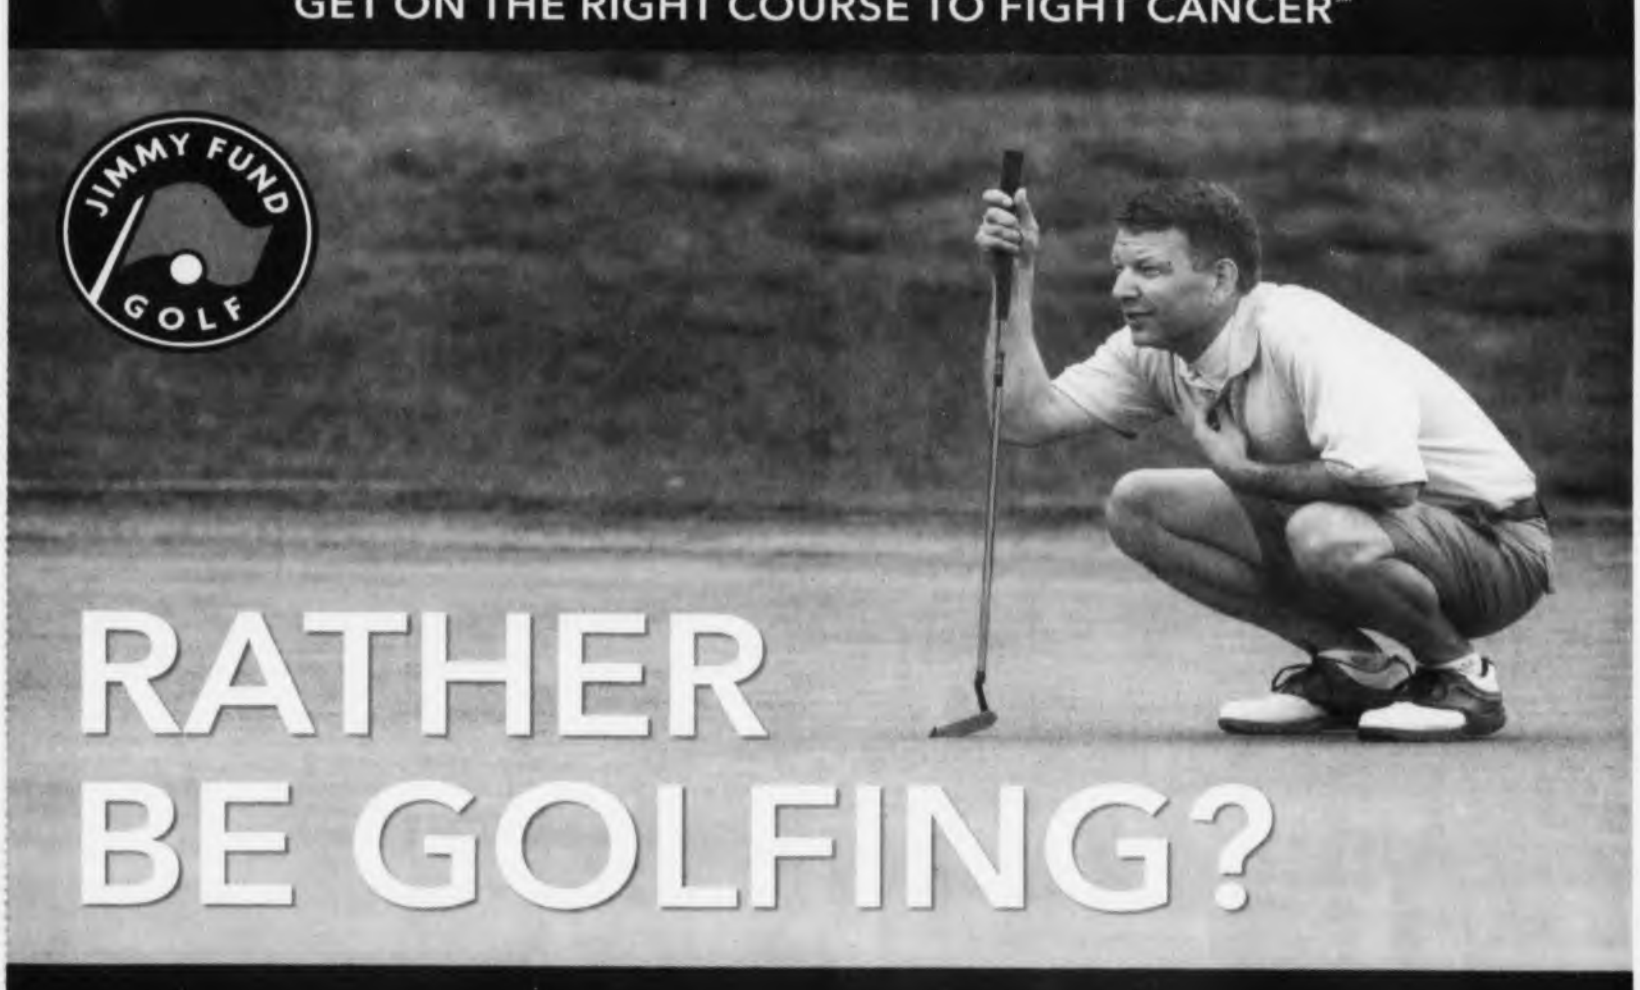
Since the time Finnie first started her training, Reiki has gained popularity and more widespread acceptance and legitimacy.

Notes Finnie, "When I began my training, many people were highly skeptical of something that seemed so 'woo-woo'. Now, Reiki has become so recognized for its healing potential, that I believe we will see insurance companies cover the cost as they now do with chiropractic care."

In fact, many hospitals including South Shore, Brigham and Women's, and Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center now offer Reiki services to patients. On its website, the new Dana-Farber/Brigham and Women's Cancer Center at South Shore Hospital describes Reiki as "...an ancient healing technique (that)...promotes healing and relaxation by stimulating the immune system." (southshorehospital.org)



In 2004, Ann opened "Footprints Holistic" in Scituate, a center where she offers Reiki sessions, reflexology and other healing modalities as well as spiritual/wellness counseling.

On Wednesday evening, February 27th, 7-9 pm the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset will be host "Introduction to Reiki" with Ann Finnie.

Finnie will give participants a brief introduction to Reiki followed by abbreviated Reiki healing sessions with trained practitioners.

The church expects this workshop to fill up quickly. To sign up, please email scc@2ndcc.org or call the church office at 781.383.0345. The workshop is open to all. There is no charge for the event, however there is a suggested voluntary donation of $10.

Members of Crew 18, 72 and 420 enjoying a Midnight Madness break.

Venturing Crew 18 in action

We are planning more trips later in the year and if they're anything like the ones we've done already, they will be a blast.

Venturing Crew 18, a co-ed high adventure organization recently founded in Cohasset, has gotten off to an exciting start. Organized by the BSA Old Colony council for their venturing crews, our first big adventure was a trip to Crotched Mountain in New Hampshire for some "Midnight Madness" skiing. Members of Crew 420 and Crew 72 also participated. We hit the slopes at 9pm on January 12th for some night skiing that went on until 3am. After camping out in the lodge with our fellow crews from eastern Massachusetts, we went out for some more skiing and boarding before wrapping up with a karaoke session featuring the musical stylings of Evan Ackley and our fearless leader, Rob Hillman. The skiing, Pictionary, and karaoke were great and we really enjoyed spending time with our new friends in other crews.

Sunday February 3rd saw our second activity as a crew, an excursion to The Archery Center in Pembroke, Mass. where youth and their advisors played games like archery tic-tac-toe and arrow darts.

Our crew is up and running with youth handling the various leadership positions and Mr. Pascal Marat as our adult crew advisor. We are planning more trips later in the year and if they're anything like the ones we've done already, they will be a blast.

Venturing is for young adults boys and girls aged 14 to 20. Its purpose is to offer youth practical experience in leadership, outdoor and social activities, service and citizenship that will affect their positive development. Crew 18 is a sister unit of Troop 28 and Pack 38, registered with the Boy Scouts of America and chartered by the Rotary Club of Cohasset. For more information on how to get in on the action, please contact Mr. Marat or Rob Hillman at info.crew18@ gmail.com.

DeScenza family takes plunge for Special Olympics

Three generations of DeScenza's took the Plunge on Sunday for Special Olympics and Farmsteads of NE, with the Farmsteads of NE team raising thousands of dollars for Special Olympics. "When your 85-year-old grandfather says 'Let's take a dip in February and raise some money,' it's hard to say no," says Jake Herth, Cohasset senior.

Micaela Herth, freshman at Cohasset and brother Jake Herth, senior and 2012 Football Captain at Cohasset took the plunge in 43 degree water on Sunday and raised $1,665 for Special Olympics and Farmsteads of NE, a special residence for special people with developmental disabilities.

Pictured with 85 year old Fred DeScenza, the oldest plunger for Special Olympics by 15 years, who still works weekly at his company DeScenza Diamonds, surrounded by his children including Founder/Executive Director of Farmsteads of NE and grandchildren including Cohasset High School senior Jake Herth (second from right) and sister, Cohasset freshman Micaela Herth (far right).

You can help the Special Olympics!

As athletes or their families are not charged to participate, these funds are important in providing year-round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for the 13,000 athletes statewide.

March Madness starts early, on Saturday, Feb. 23, this year. It's the 15th Polar Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts. Those looking for a great event to take part in, or to watch and cheer on the Plungers, this is it. There will be a costume parade at 11:15 a.m., followed by the mad dash of the 500+ plungers into the cold surf at noon at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Beach.

Last year, close to 1,000 plungers jumped into the Atlantic Ocean, about half at Nantasket. They raised $360,000 for SOMA (8 percent of the annual budget). As athletes or their families are not charged to participate, these funds are important in providing year-round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for the 13,000 athletes statewide. They range in age from 2 (Young Athletes Program) to 100 (yes, our centenarian still competes).

In addition to sports training and competition, these donations support Special Olympics' worldwide Healthy Athletes Program, founded in Massachusetts in 1994, providing free screening in medical and dental issues for athletes. Of 803 athletes screened in 2012, many were referred for treatment. In 2011, one was sent directly to the hospital after finding he'd recently had a heart attack (he's now alive and competing). Joint-ventures with UMass Medical School and Regis College train medical students, residents, nurses and doctors in working with people with Intellectual Disabilities, which will lead to quality healthcare for a host of others with ID in the future.

Jay Nothnagle, plunging for his 13th time, is a 15-sport athlete, and captain of the South Shore Mariners Team, which will include Cohasset plungers Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Geoff Chamberlain, Phil Faulkner, Steve Myers, Jeff Nothnagle (past board chairman), Graham, Nick and Charlotte Sida, and Doug Yeager, plus many from other South Shore towns. The funds they raise come back to the local Mariners program, which has 100 athletes from age 6 through 74 from seven area towns.

So come on down to Nantasket Beach on Feb. 23, and support the athletes with a pledge. People can do this with a check to their favorite plunger (payable to Special Olympics), or online at www.SpecialOlympics-MA.org/sponsorPlunger, a secure site. Those who are interested in taking part in the plunge can register at that same site.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

AVOIDING THE ER

Two Cohasset doctors own urgent-care clinic

Cohasset residents, Dr. Michael Hughes, left, and Dr. Christopher Whelan, opened Health Express in Weymouth last year. They are opening a second location in Pembroke next month. COURTESY PHOTO

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Two Cohasset doctors worked together to open an express urgent care clinic last year, helping patients save time and money by avoiding trips to the emergency room.

Dr. Michael Hughes and Dr. Christopher Whelan, both Emergency Room physicians who work at Cape Cod Hospital, co-founded Health Express in Weymouth last March. Less than a year later, business is booming. The co-owners will open a second location in Pembroke next month, in time for the clinic's one-year anniversary.

Hughes said that the clinic sees 35 to 40 patients each day in their office at 330 Washington Street. The doctor explained that at Health Express, patients can "avoid the ER, save money, and be seen right away."

The 3,400 square-foot facility boasts an open floor plan and décor that more closely resembles a spa than a doctor's office or ER. In addition to a triage room, x-ray room, dedicated laceration room for suturing and a room for OBGYN care, there is also a kid-friendly pediatrics room filled with stuffed animals that looks like it belongs in a daycare center.

Office manager Todd Nunes said that the layout and design of the space is important to help patients feel comfortable.

"It's a doctor's office setting, but it looks like a salon in here," he said during a tour of the facility. "We want that feeling... We want to make your stay the best we possibly can, and make it

Officials take special training

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In the event that tragedy comes to Cohasset, school and town officials are prepared to face disaster as best they can.

Six top Cohasset officials recently attended a two-day training on how to save lives in the event of a school shooting, hosted by Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey.

The training, which took place on Feb. 5 and 6 in Canton and Dedham, was provided by Response Options, a Texas-based school safety firm utilizing the program ALICE, which stands for "Alert, Lockdown, Inform, Counter, Evacuate." The program was developed by a former SWAT officer and a school principal, Greg and Lisa Crane.

"The strict lockdown model has become almost a default protocol to any violent intruder incident," Morrissey said in a press release. "But there is a growing conversation nationally whether a more flexible response, including evacuating the building, barricading the doors and other actions, might not save lives. We wanted to bring Norfolk County schools and police into that conversation, so that they can weigh all of the options available to keep their students safe."

The group from Cohasset – Acting Police Chief William Quigley, Acting Town manager Michael Milanoski, Superintendent Barbara Cataldo and school principals Jennifer deChiara, Robert LeCount and Carolyn Connolly – joined more than 100 others in training from across the county.

Hoarding show filmed here

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When TLC contacted the Cohasset Mariner to announce that an episode of the reality show "Hoarding: Buried Alive" was filmed in Cohasset and would be airing on the network this past week, it was a bit of a surprise. While Cohasset has gotten Hollywood's attention in the past, providing the setting for films like "The Witches of Eastwick" and a few cooking shows, for Cohasset, the filming of a hoarder's home was a first.

The Mariner learned that Cohasset resident David, 65, moved in with his elderly mother Louise, 93, and gradually cluttered up her home. According to TLC, David had dreams of becoming a rock star that never came to fruition; he coped by filling his life with other things. David's vast collection of seemingly random stuff is astounding, from a battered phone booth to box collections piled up to the ceiling.

David's compulsive penchant for collecting just about any and everything became so extreme that his family members feared for

POLICE BEAT

South Boston man to be charged with rape

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset police are seeking an arrest warrant for a South Boston man for the alleged rape and assault and battery of a Cohasset woman last spring.

Police said Christopher P. Rudack, 42, of 880 E. Broadway, S. Boston, who is currently incarcerated at the Plymouth House of Correction on unrelated charges, raped and beat a woman who lived on Jerusalem Road. The alleged victim is no longer a resident of Cohasset, police said.

The alleged victim went to the police station last October to report she had been raped and beaten by Rudack the previous April in her Jerusalem Road home. Rudack was an acquaintance of hers, police said.

Cohasset police detectives have been investigating the allegations since October. Police said the information provided could be corroborated through independent sources, which led them to seek charges. They said the woman did not immediately come forward because she was afraid of Rudack, police said.

MV crash

At 7:21 p.m. on Tuesday (Feb. 12), police and fire responded to a two-car crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Hingham Lumber. Police said a 1991 Toyota pickup truck slid on the ice when exiting the driveway at Hingham Lumber and went into the path of a 2002 Chrysler Sebring that was headed south on 3A.

The pickup was being operated by a 62-year-old Scituate man and the Sebring was being operated by a 32-year-old Rockland man. There was moderate damage to the side of the Sebring and the front of the pickup truck. The Sebring had to be towed. There were no injuries and police did not issue any citations due to the icy conditions.

Threats

The mother of a 15-year-old boy, who attends school out of town, reported that he had been receiving bullying text messages from a 15-year-old girl who attends the same school. The teens are both ninth-graders. Police said she called police after being frustrated with the school's initial response. Police officers are following up with the school.

Broken glass

Police responded to a call from a home on S. Main Street last Thursday (Feb. 14) at around 2:21 a.m. about a disturbance. Upon arrival, the Cohasset woman, who called police, explained a tenant broke the window in the common door to the home when trying to gain entry after having been accidentally locked out of his apartment. By the time she got to the door to let him in, he had left. She did not want to press charges, just wanted the incident logged, police said.

Tantrum

A police officer responded to the Avalon complex at 5:46 a.m. on Thursday (Feb. 14) after receiving a call from a neighbor about hearing doors slamming and people screaming next door. Investigation revealed the 12-year-old girl, who was home with her mother next door, had thrown a tantrum after waking up late, police said.

MV crash

Police investigated a two-vehicle crash at 2:27 p.m. on Friday (Feb. 15) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) by lower King Street. Police said a 2004 Ford pickup truck, operated by a 50-year-old Hull man, did not yield when pulling out from King Street onto 3A to head north. A 1997 Nissan SUV, operated by a 48-year-old Hull man, could not stop and struck the rear of the pickup truck. The driver of the pickup was given a verbal warning for failure to yield the right of way. There were not injuries and neither vehicle was towed, police said.

Alleged larceny

Police detectives are investigation allegations reported law weekend by the owner of the Red Lion Inn that former employee has stolen $5,000 in office and kitchen equipment from the establishment.

B&E to MVs

Police said a 82-year-old Cohasset man reported last Saturday that someone had entered the two unlocked vehicles in his driveway overnight (a 2000 Ford Explorer and a 2000 Ford pickup truck). Missing is about $60 in currency and $60 in change, police said. The incident is under investigation.

Hit & run

A 72-year-old Scituate woman reported on Saturday (Feb. 16) around noontime that someone had struck her vehicle parked at Tedeschi Plaza and left the scene. Police said there was damage to the front right bumper and it appeared another vehicle had backed into her 2008 Honda sedan. Police do not have a lot to go on, as there is no video surveillance in that area.

Fraud

An 87-year-old Cohasset woman may be the victim of check fraud, police said. Her 54-year-old daughter reported to police last Sunday (Feb. 17) that she had found discrepancies in her mother's checking account. On different dates and times since December personal checks totalling $12,000 had been signed by her mother and made out either to cash or in the name of her caregiver, a 57-year-old Hingham woman. Cohasset detectives are investigating the matter, police said.

Juvenile arrest

A 16-year-old Linden Drive Cohasset boy, who attends a private school out of town, apparently invited some friends over on Sunday night (Feb. 17) to have a get-together while his parents were in Puerto Rico, police said. Things apparently got out of hand. A neighbor became suspicious when seeing a "ton" of cars parked at the house and called police.

When police arrived, they found the 16-year-old was hosting a large underage drinking party. Several of the party guests fled through doors and windows, police said.

The house was littered with beer cans and liquor bottles. There was also the strong odor of marijuana.

The party host was arrested and charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol and keeping a disorderly house. He left a voicemail for his parents. Juvenile probation agreed he could be release to a family friend, police said.

An officer remained at the scene while the parents of the party guests were notified and came to pick them up, some from as far away as Dedham and Framingham. Due to the amount of people involved, Hull police provided mutual aid.

Protective custody

A 24-year-old Weymouth man was taken into protective custody on Sunday night at 11:47 p.m. after a police detail officer at a wedding at the Red Lion Inn received a noise complaint. On the way to a room, the officer encountered the intoxicated man who became hostile, shouting loudly, when questioned. He allegedly told the officer that he was at a wedding and people at weddings make noise. He was placed in protective custody and held overnight until 7:30 a.m. at the station, police said.

Winter parking

Winter parking regulations are in effect through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. is allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators are subject to a fine of $25.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Familiarize yourself and your family with the additional safety features of your car. For example, this car had side curtain air bags, which are designed to compliment traditional front air bags. In side impact crashes, they offer protection, by keeping out intrusions such as metal, broken glass, and other crash debris as well as cutting down on injuries such as broken bones, cuts and bruises. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, side-impact passenger vehicle crashes are often severe. They account for 28 percent of all fatalities, the majority of which involve a brain injury. For this reason, beginning in 2013, they are required standard equipment in all new vehicles. DOCTORS easy for you."

While the space looks pretty, Nunes reminded that the level of care is serious business.

"Just about anything that can be done in an ER can be done here," Nunes said. "Every doctor in here is an ER physician with 15 years' experience."

Hughes and Whelan have worked in the area for 20 years, said Nunes. Hughes explained that he and Whelan first met working at South Shore Hospital, where they became friends. They both later moved to Cape Cod Hospital.

"It's really about being able to get the highest quality of service to people, and have it be convenient, quick and cost-effective."
Dr. Michael Hughes

It was Whelan who first caught on to the urgent care trend that has been sweeping the nation, hearing about it during medical conferences he attended and sharing his idea to open a business with Hughes.

"Chris got excited about the idea, and it went from there," said Hughes.

In the south and Midwest, said Hughes, clinics like these are commonplace. In Massachusetts, they are a relatively new venture. Hughes explained that it took insurance companies in the Commonwealth a while to get onboard. Insurance companies required patients get referrals from primary care physicians in order to be seen by an urgent care physician, which slowed the process. Mass. insurance companies eventually lifted that requirement.

"Up until April 2011, Blue Cross, the largest insurer in Massachusetts, wasn't paying for urgent care," said Hughes. "Once they changed their policy, it opened up the opportunity for urgent care."

Hughes explained that it saves both the patient and insurer money, since ERs charge both a doctor's fee and a hospital facility fee. When visiting an urgent care clinic like Health Express, patients pay a co-pay amount rather than ER amount.

While there are similar walk-in clinics around, what sets Health Express apart is the fact that its staff consists of ER physicians, not nurses or physician's assistants.

"We wanted to open the highest level of urgent care possible and staff it with only ER doctors," Hughes said of the Health Express mission. "It's really about being able to get the highest quality of service to people, and have it be convenient, quick and cost-effective."

Another trait that sets Health Express apart? It's not only staffed with ER docs — it's owned by them. While the trend for urgent care clinics continues to grow nationally, with new chains sprouting up, Hughes explained that Health Express is different.

"We're owned by doctors, not business people," Hughes said. "We're not like McDonald's; we're like your local, good restaurant that you like to go to."

HOARDER

Louise's health and safety. Her insurance company even revoked her homeowner's insurance due to the liabilities that David's hoarding presented. It was time for an intervention.

David's sister Christine, 61, is the one who made the call. Christine had seen "Hoarding" before and clicked on the show's website out of curiosity. She came across a link for those who thought they, or someone they knew, had a hoarding problem, and Christine had her "aha" moment.

"It sort of rang a bell," she said in a phone call. "Some things were similar to our situation, although I would imagine all of these circumstances are unique."

David, who collects "just about anything," according to his sister, has held on to his rock star dreams since his twenties and moved back into his childhood home around 18 years ago. It was around nine years ago that he started hoarding. The problem began after Louise had taken ill and left the house for five months. When she came back home, she found it full of David's stuff.

"At first it was just antique things," said Christine. "He loves bicycles, vintage clothing, vintage furniture..."

But the compulsive collecting only escalated, to the point where it became hazardous to Louise's health. Christine said she felt helpless watching the problem worsen over the years.

"It was my mother, too, and the house I grew up in, but I had no say in what was going on," she said. Enough was enough.

Christine, who lives "a few towns away" from Cohasset on the South Shore, submitted an application to TLC and heard from the network two weeks later. She approached David about being on the show.

"At first, he said no," said Christine. "I kind of just let it go. I thought there was no solution at all."

Around six months later, David surprised his sister by asking her if she was still in touch with TLC.

"Out of the blue, it came up again," said Christine. "Two weeks after that, I heard from TLC and they asked me if [David] might reconsider. To my knowledge, there was no communication between them."

Christine called it "divine intervention" and an "answer to prayer" that David was finally admitting he needed help, and that TLC happened to come calling.

Camera crews, along with psychologist Dr. Julie Pike, came to the home David shares with Louise and filmed the episode in June 2012. Christine was there throughout the initial filming, which took around five days. The film crew returned several weeks later to check on David's progress.

While admitting that it was hard to see her brother lose his temper as the crew brought in a dumpster and began to discard his collected belongings, Christine said that she felt it was necessary to help him work toward healing.

"It was a difficult process for him," said Christine. "The lack of control, all the people around, the family is there... It's a big trigger, and then all of a sudden the dumpster arrives. It's sort of a reality check that it's going to get filled, that you're going to throw my stuff away."

Christine said that going through this process taught her more about her brother, and the compulsion that causes him to hoard.

Clutter inside the Cohasset home of Louise, 93, whose son David, 65, is a hoarder. COURTESY PHOTOS

David collects "just about anything" and has filled his 93-year-old mother's home with his collections. His sister Christine turned to the TLC show "Hoarding: Buried Alive" for help.

"It helped me understand my brother a little better," she said of being on the show. "I can understand and relate to seeing the value in things. We are a pretty disposable society and have a tendency to discard things that are no longer useful," Christine said. "I would say our entire family, under the right circumstances, might have done the same thing; we all have a tendency to save things and become attached to things."

Without spoiling the end of the episode featuring her brother, Christine reported that her brother is doing better having gone through this process.

"He's definitely further along. Maybe he's learned a little more about how it's affected his entire family," she shared. "It started, but it's still a process, and it's still hard. I still struggle with my relationship with my brother, and that's tough.

Christine said that TLC was "professional, supportive and sensitive" to her family during the whole process.

"It was hard on us but at the same time fun," she said of filming. "I know my mom had a lot of fun. The crew was just marvelous and made us feel at ease. It's pretty incredible, but you don't realize a camera's involved, or microphones... You get so involved in the process, you forget it's on film. It's amazing how you don't realize they're there; they're very good at their job."

Christine said that she would be watching the episode at home with her husband that night. While some family members who weren't on film wanted to have a home viewing party, Christine said she preferred watching the episode in private.

"To me, it isn't a party," she explained. "I think it will be difficult to watch."

And while the rest of America is watching the struggle she and her family have gone through, Christine has no regrets.

"It's hard airing dirty laundry," she admitted. "But I think it's better to let everybody know what's going on... I just put it out there."

The episode of "Hoarding: Buried Alive," featuring David and filmed in Cohasset, aired Wed., Feb. 20 at 9 p.m. on TLC.

About TLC's HOARDING: BURIED ALIVE

"Hoarding: Buried Alive" takes an inside look at extreme hoarders and the psychology behind their compulsion to accumulate and store large quantities of nonessential things. Each episode tells the stories of hoarders struggling with behavior that has made daily existence unbearable for them and their loved ones. With the help of expert therapists and organizers, the hoarders will attempt to unlock the key to their obsessions in hope of reclaiming their lives.

ALICE (Alert, Lockdown, Inform, Counter, Evacuate), a training program for educators and first responders, is a tactics course provided by the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office. The program was held in a vacant school in Dedham on Feb. 6. GATEHOUSE PHOTO/GREG DERR

SECURITY

Quigley said that the training provided good information and helped spark a conversation between officials. The biggest takeaway for him was learning that the first responders in a school shooting are actually the teachers.

"We all had the same training, so we're all on the same page," Quigley explained. "We know the advantages of this program and learned some of the disadvantages, and it's all food for thought. It's nice to come up with a comprehensive plan to build on our current plan."

"It was nice to see the leadership of the schools, town manager and police department come together to look at this very real problem."
Deputy Police Chief William Quigley

The classroom training was held in donated seminar space at the headquarters of the Bank of Canton; a live-action demonstration was held in the now-vacant Avery School in Dedham. The classroom training included an analysis of 25 years of school shooting incidents, and which actions helped end the incidents more quickly with fewer lives lost.

Morrissey said in the press release that the DA's office hosted a similar training the month before the Sandy Hook shooting in Connecticut last year, "but obviously that event has put a new focus on the issue. Our towns are all looking at their safety protocols. I think it is important that as we do that, we base our decisions on solid research, lessons learned from previous incidents, and the widest array of information we can collect," said the DA, who used drug forfeiture money to finance the training.

Morrissey added that he hopes the information provided can help towns with future planning. "Every community should have a plan, but that plan must be developed at the local level, with input from the police and school community."

Quigley said that while Cohasset does have a plan in place, "things become dated and there's always room for improvement, especially when it comes to safety."

After two days of training, which Quigley said that the DA's office was gracious enough to allow six Cohasset officials to attend, the acting police chief said officials had the opportunity to come together and dialogue about school safety.

"It was nice to see the leadership of the schools, town manager and police department come together to look at this very real problem," said Quigley. "Not that the ALICE training is the be all, end all, but it gives us information on what's out there, so we can make the appropriate decision when it comes with everybody at the table."

Milanoski agreed that the training was beneficial. "I think it was a good opportunity for the schools, town and public safety to work together as we all come to grips with the new world that we're in," the acting town manager said. "We've worked an awful lot through these training programs and will be evaluating the pros and cons of them with the superintendent and principals through the foreseeable future."

A possibility in the foreseeable future for towns like Cohasset: having a resource officer in every school. A group of South Shore parents and other concerned residents called the Citizens for Children's Safety announced its intent last month to see an officer placed in every public school, locally and nationally. Quigley said that while Cohasset is not there yet, it's a possibility that has not been ruled out.

"I would love to have an officer in every school, but the reality is we have a budget and have to live within it," said Quigley, adding that, however, "If there's any type of school safety grant, I can assure you Cohasset police would be the first to apply."

Some information in this report was obtained from a DA's office press release.

Grads, honors and more

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

St. Sebastian's

William L. Burke III, headmaster of St. Sebastian's School in Needham, announced the honor roll recipients for the second quarter of the 2012-2013 school year. Among the recipients was Cohasset resident James D. Dietrich, grade eight, honors, son of Francis and Heidi Dietrich.

Recipients of honors maintain a B- or above in all subjects.

Master's degree

Rachel Doyle, CHS Class of 2004, recently earned her master's degree in history from the College of Arts and Humanities at the University of Texas-Pan American. Her parents, Jody and Gregory, attended the fall commencement and are proud to report that she is in her fifth year of teaching history in the Rio Grande Valley area of Texas and the head of the history department at Thomas Jefferson High School in Pharr, Texas.

UVM

The following Cohasset students have been named to the dean's list for the 2012 fall semester at the University of Vermont: Lauren A. Allen, a senior majoring in elementary education K-6 in the College of Education & Social Services; Patrick E. Hurley, a senior majoring in natural resources in the Rubenstein School of Environment & Natural Resources; and Chase A. Manifase, a junior majoring in religion in the College of Arts & Sciences.

To be named to the dean's lists, students must have a grade point average of 3.0 or better and rank in the top 20 percent of their class in their respective college or school.

Doctorate

Robert Hickey, who graduated from Cohasset High School, received his doctorate degree in chemistry at UPenn on Feb. 6.

He will leave May 1 for Korea with his fiancée, Danielle, to start up a chemistry lab for four months. He will then attend the University of Minnesota to start his post doctorate degree in chemistry.

Merrimack College

Julia Thompson, a resident of Cohasset was named to the 2012 fall dean's list at Merrimack College in North Andover. Julia is a freshman in the School of Education.

To be eligible, a student must achieve a 3.25 grade point average or higher, based on a 4.0 grading system.

UMass-Amherst

Dean of Students Enku Gelaye has announced the names of Cohasset students who qualified for dean's list for the 2012 fall semester at UMASS-Amherst. Carley Elizabeth Zappolo, Carly McCall Salerno, Elizabeth Marie Crawford, Geoffrey Lawrence Evans, James Emerson Earle, Johanna Elizabeth Brophy, Kristina Solita D'Antonio, Lauren Elizabeth Mack, Margaret Christine Goodwin and Philip Jay Pergola.

In order to qualify, an undergraduate student must receive a 3.5 grade point average or better on a four-point scale.

Heartfelt appreciation

Conservation Chair Jack Creighton's parents died in the beginning of February. Although they had been divorced for 40 years they remained close. Joe Creighton, Harvard Law Review and retired General Counsel of Harris Corporation passed on February 2nd in Port Orange Florida followed by Margaret Creighton, Oberlin "41", on February 8th at Friends Village in Woodstown NJ. She was born in The Woodstown Friends Infirmary so the cycle was complete. Both were 93.

Jack, and his wife Lisa, wish to thank their many friends for the kind words of sympathy.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

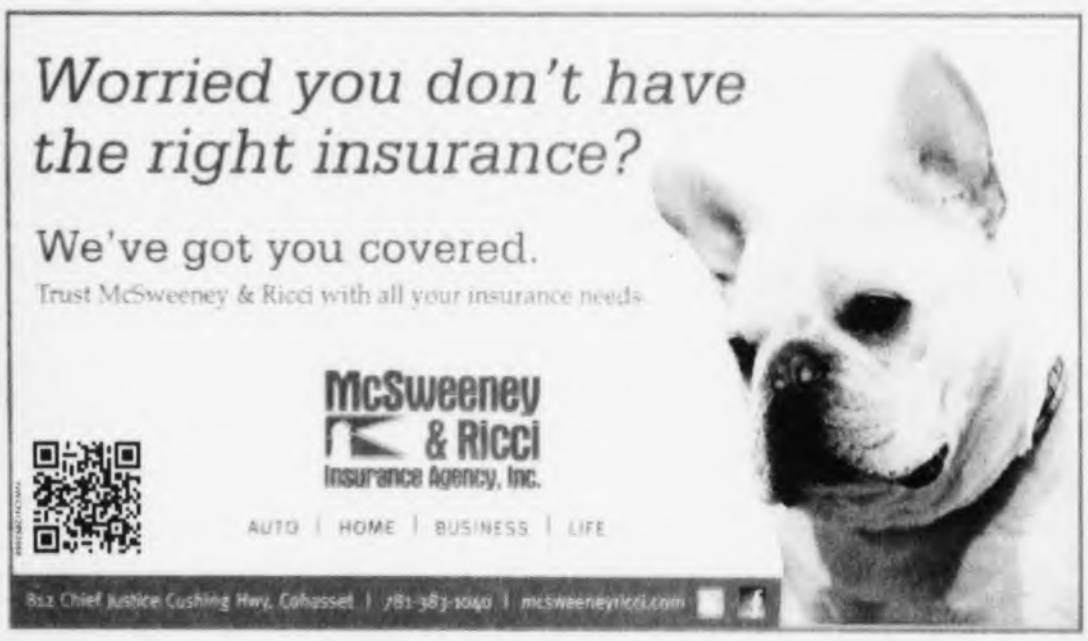
SUPPORTS THE SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Polar Plunge is Saturday!

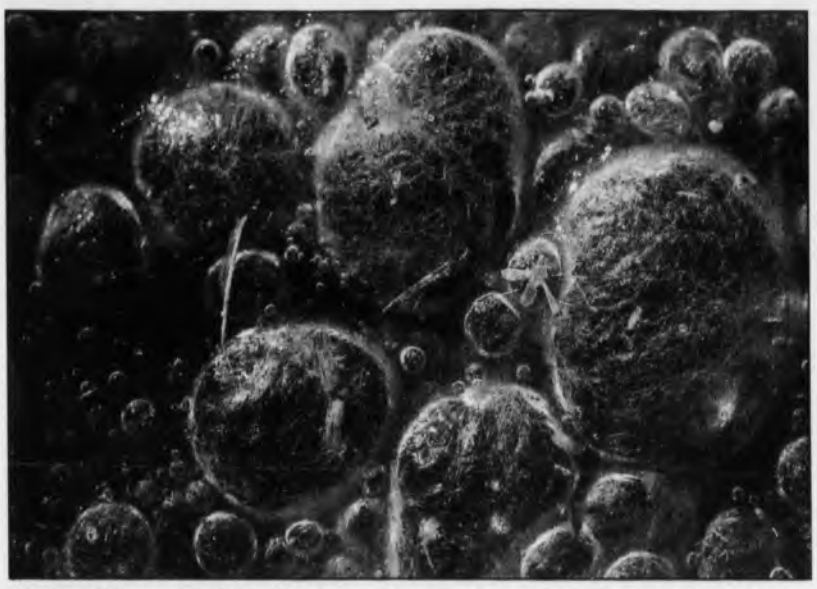


March Madness starts early, on Saturday, Feb. 23, this year. It's the 15th Polar Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts. Those looking for a great event to take part in, or to watch and cheer on the Plungers, this is it. There will be a costume parade at 11:15 a.m., followed by the mad dash of the 500+ plungers into the cold surf at noon at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Beach.

Last year, close to 1,000 plungers jumped into the Atlantic Ocean, about half at Nantasket. They raised $360,000 for SOMA (8 percent of the annual budget). As athletes or their families are not charged to participate, these funds are important in providing year-round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for the 13,000 athletes statewide. They range in age from 2 (Young Athletes Program) to 100 (yes, our centenarian still competes).

As athletes or their families are not charged to participate, these funds are important in providing year-round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for the 13,000 athletes statewide.

Jay Nothnagle, plunging for his 13th time, is a 15-sport athlete, and captain of the South Shore Mariners Team, which will include Cohasset plungers Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Geoff Chamberlain, Phil Faulkner, Steve Myers, Jeff Nothnagle (past board chairman), Graham, Nick and Charlotte Sida, and Doug Yeager, plus many from other South Shore towns. The funds they raise come back to the local Mariners program, which has 100 athletes from age 6 through 74 from seven area towns.



So come on down to Nantasket Beach on Feb. 23, and support the athletes with a pledge. People can do this with a check to their favorite plunger (payable to Special Olympics), or online at www.SpecialOlympicsMA.org/sponsorPlunger, a secure site. Those who are interested in taking part in the plunge can register at that same site.

Cohasset Mariner wins two journalism awards

GateHouse journalists honored for excellence

Winter Storm Nemo cut into attendance but the show did go on at the Boston Park Plaza Feb. 9 when the New England Newspaper and Press Association handed out awards for excellence in journalism in its annual Better Newspaper Competition.

This year's contest drew close to 3,000 entries in a host of writing, photography, multimedia and advertising categories by journalists in daily, weekly and specialty newspapers throughout the six-state New England region.

GateHouse Media New England's South Unit which produces 27 weekly newspapers and 30 websites from offices in Marshfield, Hingham, Plymouth, Randolph and Raynham had another great showing this year — bringing home 21 awards.

The Cohasset Mariner won a third place award in the category "Right to Know" for a body of work including news stories, editorial, and Jim Hamilton's cartoon for the paper's coverage of being billed $7,000 by Town Hall for a public records request seeking a month's worth of emails. Since the bulk of mail comes via email nowadays, the Mariner was seeking to have emails included in the weekly public correspondence packet in the selectmen's office. The Secretary of State's Office has determined that email is a public record unless the content of the email falls with one of the stated exemptions under the Massachusetts Public Records Laws.

Photographer Robin Chan won third place for a pictorial photo in the Cohasset Mariner of the algae in Meetinghouse Pond, which the judges found particularly intriguing. The judge, who majored in botany, quipped that algae never looked so good!

Chan also won three first-place awards in other Mariners newspapers – in the Sports Video, Photo Series and Pictorial Photo categories.

Editor-in chief-Gregory Mathis was proud of the South Unit's success.

"Our editorial staff continues to produce quality work as evident by the number of awards, as well as the breadth of categories, won by our reporters, photographers, sports editors and editors," said Mathis. "It's always rewarding to be recognized by our peers through the annual NENPA Better Newspaper Competition and certainly validates the hard work all of our journalists put in year-round in each community we cover."

OUR VIEW

Call fire department

Many of our readers, who may not frequent the "blogosphere" online at wickedlocalcohasset, should know that the subject of transitioning Cohasset to a call fire department to save money has been raised.

To our knowledge this subject has not come up at a selectmen's meeting so we are not sure where the genesis of the idea is coming from. However, some bloggers – who appear to be "in the know" (in that they cite information that only those close to the town budget process would be aware of) – think it should be considered. After all, they say, call fire departments work in other places.

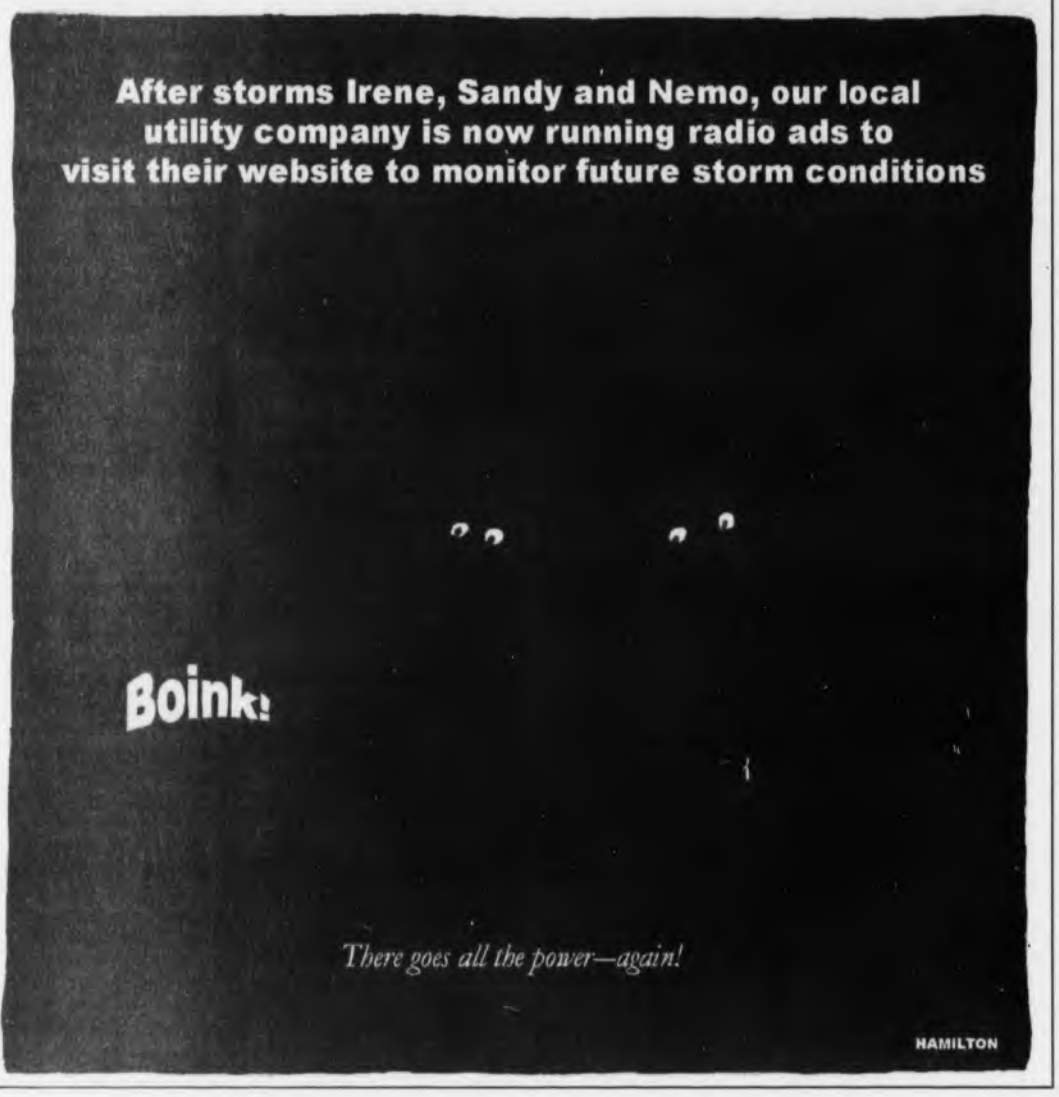
We hope talk of a call fire department is just that: talk. Call fire departments do exist and successfully so, in other areas but it is very likely they started that way and have remained call departments all along.

Looking at cost savings by obtaining efficiencies in public safety is nothing new. In the early 1990s Cohasset joined with other seaside area towns in a study to look at providing regional fire service. The report is sitting somewhere now at Town Hall, collecting dust. As we recall one of the major sticking points was, in order to have a regional service, the firehouses would have to be located on Route 3A – resulting in a capital expenditure that the towns did not want to shoulder. There would also be issues in melding the various town fire departments, unions and so on.

Call fire departments were once the norm. For them to be successful, the call firefighters have to work in town and be able to leave their job at a moment's notice to rush to the station and/or fire scene.

Fire departments provide more medical service than ever before and that will likely continue, especially as baby-boomers join the ranks of senior citizens. Paramedics are now the norm; they can provide Advanced Life Support service that saves lives every day.

Fires, while not as common as in years past, do occur. In the past two weeks, Hingham and Marshfield each saw a three-alarm fire.



We are all for efficiencies. But let's not raise the possibility of a call fire department. It won't work here and it will put lives and property at risk.

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

EARTH AND SPIRIT

Speaking up our planet

REV. KEN READ-BROWN

Editor's note: Editor Mary Ford thought this column would be of interest to Cohasset readers, some of whom attend Old Ship in Hingham.

About 20 youth and adults from Old Ship Church have been in our nation's capital this week on a service trip. I took the train down to join them for one of their first activities, which was to take part in this past Sunday's "Forward on Climate" rally at the Washington Monument. Led by Sierra Club, 350.org, and many other organizations, we were just a few of the over 40,000 people of many backgrounds from across the nation who were inspired by speakers from the sponsoring organizations, clean energy investors, civil rights leaders, and indigenous leaders from the United States and Canada. Following the rally, we marched to the White House to implore President Obama to say "no" to the Keystone XL pipeline which would bring highly polluting tar sands oil from Alberta to the Gulf Coast. NASA climate scientist James Hansen has said that it would be "game over" for the climate if the Canadian tar sands were to be fully tapped. Well, the president affirmed in his inaugural address that we must address the challenge of climate change; and when it comes to the Keystone pipeline he can begin to do that right away by executive order.

I returned from Washington leaving late on Sunday on the overnight train. Early Monday morning, as the sun rose beautifully over Long Island Sound, the train's engine came to an unscheduled halt. After a false re-start or two we limped into Providence. Our engine was apparently exhausted, busted, kaput. The good news for those of us who were looking forward to returning home to the Boston area sometime that day was that an MBTA commuter rail train on the next track could take us the rest of the way. We grabbed our bags, crossed the platform, and crowded into the double-decker car at the head of the train. Off we went, the inconvenience a pretty mild one.

As we rode north, it occurred to me that unlike Amtrak or MBTA riders, we passengers on planet earth have no back-up planet to rescue us once we've exhausted the engines of a sustainable way of life. This is the only home we have. What then would we rather do? Continue barreling along at an unsustainable rate or change to a way of life that will keep us going for the long haul?

One of the handmade signs at the "Forward on Climate" rally read "Make Fossil Fuels Ancient History." Our challenge is that we must do this, and though it would have been better to have done it yesterday, it will be better late than never. After all, who could deny that we and all life on earth would be better off if we derived all our energy from wind and solar as opposed to oil and coal and natural gas? And who, really, could honestly deny that the sooner the better? And doesn't it make sense too that we will have more time for this essential transition if at the same time we slow the engine of modern civilization down, use less energy along the way, seek a way of life more closely rooted to the pleasures of slow, of less, of staying put and enjoying what's right in front of us instead of always seeking satisfaction in the lure of more, more, more? Who, in short, could deny that what's truly good for our spirits is also good for the earth?

This is the only home we have. What then would we rather do? Continue barreling along at an unsustainable rate or change to a way of life that will keep us going for the long haul?

The youth who attended the "Forward on Climate" rally will be about my age in the decade of the 2060s. Keeping this in mind, the moral dimension of the climate change challenge that pulls at my heart the most fiercely rests in a simple question: What sort of world do we hope they – and their children and grandchildren – will be living in then? Well, we can only answer that question with the ways we choose to live and act and speak now.

Rev. Read-Brown has been the minister of First Parish in Hingham (Old Ship Church), Unitarian Universalist, since 1987. He is also a member of REACH (Responsible Energy Alternatives Coalition of Hingham – hinghamreach.org). He can be reached at oldshipkrb@comcast.net.

YOUR REP

Update on budget, bills

GARRETT BRADLEY

As part of that effort, on Thursday, March 7, from 6 to 7 p.m., I will be holding hours at my district office located at the Hingham Sons of Italy Lodge, 88 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy.

As we begin a new year and legislative session, I wanted to take this opportunity to keep you informed on a number of issues that the Legislature will soon be taking up. Chief among these is the Commonwealth's fiscal year 2014 budget. The Governor recently released his budget and the House will soon follow suit. I will be reviewing both very carefully. The continuing difficulties being faced by so many families as a result of the economy are sobering and are uppermost in my mind as I debate how I will vote on these pieces of legislation. I hear from constituents every day who are unemployed or underemployed and who are struggling to make ends meet. As a husband and father, I understand the sacrifices people are making and remain dedicated to finding solutions.

I believe in being as accessible as possible to my constituents and with this in mind I want to invite you to visit either my State House or district office. I am also happy to discuss any issue of interest or concern via the phone or email. Additionally, I conduct monthly senior office hours and welcome your thoughts and feedback.

As part of that effort, on Thursday, March 7, from 6 to 7 p.m., I will be holding hours at my district office located at the Hingham Sons of Italy Lodge, 88 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. Please enter the door on the Route 3A-side of the building. I look forward to seeing you there.

I may also be reached by calling either the State House at 617-722-2520 or the district office at 781-749-3331. Please call ahead to schedule an appointment. You may also send me a message via email at Garrett.Bradley@MAHouse.gov or through my Facebook and Twitter accounts.

Thousands of residents and businesses were severely impacted by the blizzard of Feb. 8/9. Power outages, burst water pipes, flooding, and other property damage occurred, requiring ongoing cleanup. A telephone hotline is available by calling 2-1-1 for non-emergency issues. You may also contact my office with questions and concerns, and I will try to provide whatever assistance or information I can. During the immediate aftermath of the storm, I joined Governor Deval Patrick, my colleague Rep. James Cantwell and local officials in touring parts of Scituate to highlight the need for action and assistance for residents and small businesses.

For the 2013/2014 Legislative Session, I filed a total of 73 pieces of legislation dealing with a variety of subjects from education and public safety to local aid funding, Chapter 40B housing developments and health insurance. Over the coming weeks and months, I will highlight a selection of bills through regular submissions to this newspaper. The following is a sample of several such pieces of legislation:

• Increasing penalties for hit and run drivers — Under this proposed bill, those convicted would be sentenced to not less than 6 months nor more than 2 and one half years in jail or at least two and one half years, up to 10 years in a state prison, and by a fine of not less than $2,500 nor more than $10,000. This bill was filed in response to a local constituent who was severely injured after being hit by a drunk driver who then failed to stop.

• Standardizing zoning appeals process – Amends the Chapter 40B law to give local officials additional power to regulate proposed affordable housing developments. Provisions include requiring developers to file a single comprehensive permit with the city or town, to be reviewed by the planning board, which would have 65 days (rather than current 30) to hold a public hearing. The local board would then have up to 90 days to render a decision. Permits issued under this procedure would lapse within two years if the developer had not started construction.

• Increasing penalties for assault and battery on a police officer – Makes assault and battery on a police officer, firefighter or emergency medical provider a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than 3 nor more than 5 years, or by imprisonment for not less than 1 year nor more than 2 and one-half years in a house of correction and a fine of between $5,000 and $10,000. This legislation was suggested by a former police officer from Hull.

Autism Commission Update

As one of two House members appointed by Speaker DeLeo to the Autism Commission I am looking forward to next month's release of the Commission's report. The commission, whose 31 members bring vast knowledge and expertise in the area of Autism/Aspergers Syndrome, represent various organizations and state human services agencies. This commission has been working diligently for close to three years to investigate and study current supports and services, identify gaps in service and make recommendations that will result in improvement of supports and services across the lifespan of individuals with autistic spectrum disorders. With one in 75 children born with autism, it is critical that individuals receive the full support and services they require to be able to function productively and contribute to society to their fullest capabilities.

On behalf of the Autism Commission I am pleased to be the lead sponsor for several of their priority bills which I filed for consideration during the new legislative session. Legislators have been very supportive with 70 legislators signing on as co-sponsors of the commission's top priority bill.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley serves the Third Plymouth District, comprising the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Precinct 3 Scituate.

THOSE FAR AWAY PLACES

Nicaragua hopes for more tourism

MARY KENNEDY

Managua, Nicaragua, is a wonderful spot,
There's coffee and bananas and a temperature hot...

Or so goes one of the "big hit" songs of the late 1940s when most of Latin America seemed a carefree land of music and dance for war-weary Americans. Today, the leading economic activity in this second poorest nation in the Western Hemisphere (after Haiti) is farming: Coffee and bananas as well as cotton, corn, rice and sugarcane.

Managua, Nicaragua – in that city so quaint
You live like you're a millionaire, though that's what you ain't...

With a population of almost 6 million, almost a third of all Nicaraguans are poor farmers, even though only about 9 percent of the land is suitable for cultivation. In some rural areas, mules and oxcarts are still used for transport. The literacy rate is 67 percent, and almost one third of the population is under age 15.

Every day is made for play and fun,
Cause every day is fiesta –
They only work from twelve o'clock to one...

Since 1821 when Nicaragua declared independence from Spain, the country has been a "hotspot" in more than just temperature. Natural disasters, civil war and foreign intervention have done much to destroy the country's cultural heritage. In 1972, an earthquake severely damaged Managua, killed about 5,000 people and reduced much of the capital to rubble. Hurricane Mitch swept through in 1998, resulting in thousands of deaths and widespread damage to crops and villages.

Beginning in 1934, the country's political upheavals included assassinations, dictatorships, foreign interventions, strikes and revolts. Many Americans are at least somewhat familiar with the controversy raging in the halls of Congress during the 1980s when the U.S. supported anti-government forces. In 1990 Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, widow of an assassinated newspaper editor, was elected president, the first female president in Central America. Today, the president of the Federal Republic of Nicaragua is (again) Daniel Ortega.

You have never tasted "frijoleez"
Till you have dined in Managua,
While Senorita's hand you squeeze...

Not gourmet, but nourishing, the national dish, gallo pinto, is a blend of rice and beans. Typical foods include fried bananas and enchiladas. Street vendors sell drinks like tiste, made from cacao and corn. Nicaraguans are proud of their national rum drink, flor de cana, in production since 1890.

While the 1940s lighthearted tune popularized Nicaragua, the war-torn country was never considered a tourism paradise. Backpackers and surfers enjoyed hiking among the howler monkeys and riding the waves of the Pacific beaches, but the well-to-do and celebrities stayed away. How to lure the Four Seasons and Ritz Carlton crowd, the 500 dollars per night traveler?

FOR THE RECORD

On being government watchdogs

GREGORY MATHIS

The recent New England Better Newspaper Competition hosted annually by the New England Newspaper & Press Association (NENPA) is further evidence that local papers are still ready, willing and able to keep a close eye on town government.

As I've written in past columns, part of a newspaper's role (and the media in general) is to be a watchdog of government. That doesn't just mean the President of the United States, national or state government. In our world, it means keeping tabs on local government.

The recent newspaper competition highlighted three excellent examples of watchdog journalism.

There was a first and second place in the Government Reporting category for stories and coverage on an Office of Campaign and Political Finance issue in Marshfield and an Open Meeting Law question in Scituate. There was also a third place award in the Right to Know category for coverage of a Public Records Law request in Cohasset.

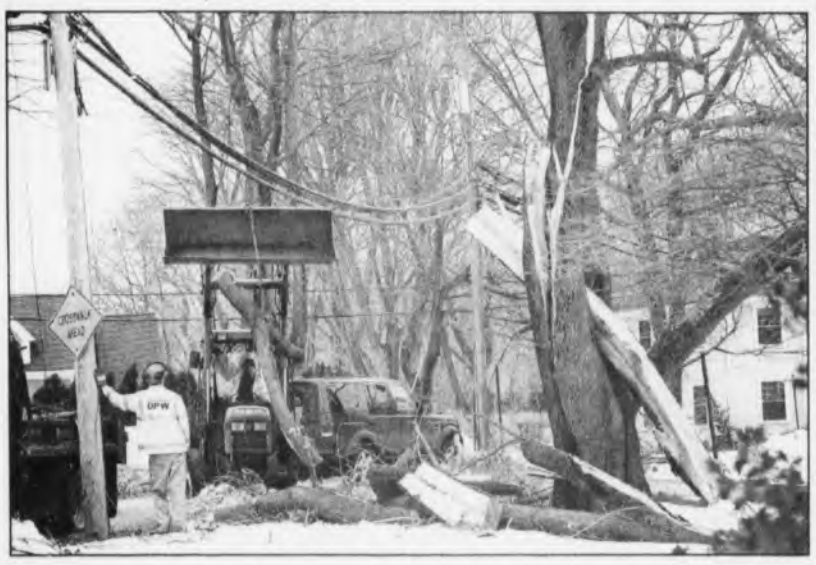
Those judging the Right to Know category said this about the Mariner's entry: "This entry includes news, editorial and a wonderful cartoon to show the craziness of Cohasset government by trying to charge $7,000 for basic records. What is the town hiding?"

For more than 20 years, the Cohasset Mariner has perused a weekly correspondence packet that includes letters, minutes, correspondence from other town boards, and more. The information, which should be accessible to any citizen, was suddenly no longer available. When the editor filed a public records request to inspect a month's worth of emails, the Mariner received an estimated bill of more than $7,000. In the past we paid 20 cents per page for photocopies. That response resulted in a series of stories, as well as assistance from a law firm specializing in municipal government and public records.

The Government Reporting awards were also based on the public's right to know.

Back in February 2012, a school building committee in Marshfield was found in violation of campaign finance law over a brochure sent out to all residents about the new Marshfield High School project. The Marshfield Mariner filed a request with the Office of Campaign and Political Finance in November 2011 alleging that public resources were used to reproduce and distribute the brochure, which addressed the proposed project and the Proposition 2-1/2 debt exclusion proposed to fund the project.

The OCPF decision cited case law dating back to 1978 where the Supreme Judicial Court concluded that a municipality could not appropriate funds, or use funds previously appropriated for other purposes, to influence a ballot question submitted to the voters at a state election.



In May 2012 the Scituate Mariner filed an Open Meeting Law violation complaint against the board of selectmen regarding discussions and deliberations, which took place in late 2011 allegedly behind closed doors in executive session regarding the performance, salary increase and subsequent extension of the contract of the town administrator. The Attorney General has yet to render a ruling on the complaint.

Readers — whether they read a big daily newspaper, a small town weekly newspaper or get their news from the Web — want to know how their tax money is being spent and how decisions are made.

Regardless of awards or the towns mentioned above, we'll continue to do our part and make sure local government in each community is conducted above board.

Neighbor helping neighbors

Gammons Road man helps elderly couples

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

As Cohasset continues to recover from the biggest blizzard the town has seen in decades, stories have emerged of neighbors helping one another through the height of the storm.

Last weekend, one man, Lee Stone, 49, single-handedly went door to door to check on his elderly neighbors on Gammons Road. A few of these neighbors shared their stories, and explained why they're so grateful for one person in town who, as one man put it, exemplified the phrase "love thy neighbor."

When the blizzard known as Nemo was doing its worst, dumping over 20 feet of snow on Cohasset and knocking out the power of every home in town, Stone made his way out of his home, through large snow drifts, to check on his neighbors. He had a generator and invited those without power to stay with him and his family.

Martha Hurtig said, "Lee went around and checked on the old folks here because he did have power, and that's a good feeling that there's someone in the neighborhood like that."

Hurtig explained that she and her husband, Carl, are both in their eighties and could not get out of their house after a large tree went down during the storm.

"People could not get in, and we could not get out," she explained. Stone checked on the Hurtigs on Saturday, Feb. 9 and offered to let them stay with him. But their son, Paul, was driving in from Sudbury to pick his parents up. However, Paul could only drive partway to his parent's home, since the tree still blocked off Gammons Road. With their son by their side and logs burning in their fireplace, Martha and Carl "decided to tough it out."

The next morning, Stone was back at their door. He knew the Hurtigs were going to attempt to leave their cold house and offered his assistance.

Stone used his snow blower to create a walking path for the Hurtigs through another neighbor's property; however, they came across an entire staircase covered in snow. It was too hard for Carl to walk across, said Martha.

The Hurtigs had to improvise.

"My son put his jacket down, and we used it as a sled," said Martha. "Paul was walking backwards, pulling my husband on his jacket. He was able to pull him all the way down to Gammons Road and the car... We were all laughing."

Martha said that she and the group "wished we'd had a camera" to capture the snowy adventure, but added, "It was the last thing on our minds. We just wanted to get out. It was so cold [in the house]. We were living on hot cider and hot water."

Martha was concerned Carl would contract hypothermia if they didn't vacate their home. They made their way to Paul's home in Sudbury on Sunday, but Martha said she was touched by Stone's hospitable offer.

"It was so kind for Lee to come over and offer his guest room for the night," she said.

Estelle Weedon witnessed Stone helping the Hurtigs make their way to their son's car on Sunday, and was also a recipient of her neighbor's help.

The tree that fell across Gammons Road blocked off the Weedons' driveway. Estelle and her husband, Reid, were also stuck in their house.

"We stayed because we don't have children locally and couldn't get out," said Estelle. "We had no phone, no nothing." And while the Weedons had a generator, it "only kept the heat at about 50 [degrees] and not at night... the house was 38 degrees on Sunday."

Stone checked on the Weedons on Saturday and then again on Sunday. He first helped by getting their generator started and making sure it had enough gas.

On Sunday, the Weedons' generator died. Stone visited again and relayed some information he'd gotten from emergency notification calls from the public safety department. The Weedons hadn't received these messages since they had no access to a phone, and "no cell phone service, either." Stone suggested that they leave.

Another neighbor, Larry Genovese, plowed the Weedon's driveway enough so that they could get their car out and avoid the telephone wires that had fallen on the road. The Weedons were able to head to Reid's daughter's house in Seekonk. Another family, the Kornets, along with the Hurtigs, was also able to drive out.

Their escape would not have been possible without Stone, said Estelle.

"Lee was just wonderful, the fact that he checked on people and kept coming back," she said. "The three couples that left were probably the ones that needed to leave, and he just made sure we got out; he made it possible."

When another Gammons Road resident, David Replogle, was asked about Stone, he said, simply, "What a guy."

David described what he and his wife, Jean, were up against because of damage from the storm.

"We had drifts that were oh, six feet high in places and everything was unpassable [sic], and there was no electricity so there was no heat and no phones or anything," David said. Stone "went out and walked and shoveled his way to check everyone's home and say we could come and stay at their place and so on; he had a generator. We didn't have a generator and other neighbors didn't.

"We did have a few logs for our fireplace and it was down to freezing, of course. We had a total of six logs and every two hours, I'd light one so my wife and I could sit by there and keep from freezing," David continued, noting that he and his wife are in their eighties.

Stone also invited the Replogles to stay at his place, but the couple was unable to walk up to the Stone residence because of the massive snowdrifts. After another neighbor did some plowing, the Replogles were able to leave their house and were picked up by their son, who lives in another town.

Still, they are grateful for Stone's assistance.

"If it hadn't been for Lee, all of us on Gammons would've been stuck," said David. "It was amazing, the way he went around to care for everyone and invited us to his home. That was really caring to work your way through those high drifts on that long, narrow road with trees down all over it. He is a great human being. He certainly epitomized 'love your neighbor.'"

Estelle said she was grateful to have a neighbor who "went beyond neighborly."

"The whole neighborhood pulled together, and Lee Stone was the leader," said Estelle.

All ended well for the neighborhood of Gammons Road, despite the difficult – and dangerous – circumstances, added Martha.

"It was kind of scary, but it worked out well, and we have stories to tell now."

After the storm

Acting Town Manager said that he and around 30 Cohasset officials and emergency volunteers participated in two after-action meetings last week following the epic snowstorm, during which they discussed "any and all issues, what went well and what could go better next time."

"Everyone agreed that this was a very unusual storm, a once in 20-year storm that hit in the middle of winter," Milanoski explained. "We had 100 percent power outage. Although we came out well, there are always things we can improve on."

The town will look into applying for reimbursements for storm costs from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), the town manager said. However, the numbers for how much the storm cost Cohasset are still being finalized.

"We're still crunching all the numbers on the storm," said Milanoski. "It could take another week or two."

The town manager also said that he is proud of the way Cohasseters banded together to get through the difficult blizzard and its after-effects.

"I think the community as a whole came together to work with their neighbors and help out. It was nice to see them coming together. There were many heroes during the storm and I'm sure those stories will come out."

GOOD GOVERNANCE

Committee drafts new Town Manager Act

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Governance Committee has issued a working draft of its revision of the Town Manager Act. The town adopted the act in 1997 following a positive vote at the Annual Town Meeting; it was approved by the state legislature that summer.

The governance committee (GC) was created in late 2011 by the Board of Selectmen and charged with reviewing all town boards, committees, and governing documents to find the most effective and efficient use of taxpayer dollars.

One of the chief documents the GC has been poring over is the Town Manager Act (TMA). The committee held its first public forum in October on the subject and discussed their recommended changes. At the time, the group's concern was getting the TMA to match up with Cohasset town bylaws, identifying discrepancies between the two documents. The biggest problem, according to GC chair Christine Cunning, was ambiguity on the roles of the town manager and selectmen.

At that point, the GC recommended a language change in one paragraph of the TMA: paragraph 3, section "i." Currently, the TMA does not allow appointed or elected town officials to become a permanent town manager; the language change would have allowed this. The change was pitched to the Dec. 10 Special Town Meeting but was voted down.

Currently, Cohasset has an Acting Town Manager, Michael Milanoski, that many officials, including a majority of the selectmen, would like to see become the permanent town manager. Milanoski's current contract with the town has him employed through June 2013.

While a majority of Cohasset voters were not in favor of changing the TMA last fall, some officials felt that it was because many voters did not want to vote for one minor change while the rest of the document is still being reviewed.

Now, the GC has a draft of the new and improved TMA, and is seeking community feedback. While typically meeting every other Thursday at 7:30 a.m. in Town Hall, the committee will hold a few evening public forums in the months leading up to Town Meeting (April 22).

Cunning said, "We're trying to get at least a final draft so we can have a starting point for everybody" to review. "We're going to put it out there and get as much input as we can... We've spent a lot of time and collective consensus getting this thing together, and hope to take in some of the public's thoughts."

The draft warrant for the Town Meeting has an amendment to the Town Manager Act as the first article. Cunning said that prior to Town Meeting, her committee wants to get as much information to the public as possible.

"We'd prefer to have people get this [the TMA draft] now instead of trying to push it through on the town meeting floor," said Cunning, adding that the GC did not come to the recommended changes lightly, but spent around 40 meetings carefully reviewing the document.

Voters who consider the GC's recommended changes to the TMA will "either like it the way it is now, or want to try to fine-tune and update it for the 2000s."

While the TMA was enacted nearly 16 years ago, not all that long ago in the scheme of things, one GC member last year pointed out that the TMA is now a sophomore in high school.

"It surprised me that the act was written almost 20 years ago," said Cunning. "We've seen what the town has been through."

Since the TMA was enacted, Cohasset has had three permanent town managers and a few interim or acting town managers that bridged the gap in between permanent employees. The most recent town manager, Michael Coughlin, was removed last March after only six months on the job; Milanoski was appointed to take his place.

A majority of the selectmen has stated that they are confident in Milanoski's abilities and want to find a way to keep him on as a permanent town manager; however, since Milanoski held two appointed positions prior to taking the helm, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis has said Milanoski is exempt from consideration for a permanent position.

Nevertheless, Milanoski's newest contract, signed by the selectmen last month, boosted his salary from $132,000 to $150,000. Selectmen, including vice chair Diane Kennedy, have stated the need for stability in town government, which, she said, can be achieved by keeping Milanoski onboard.

"You have to get stability in management," Kennedy said at the Jan. 8 selectmen meeting. "To have a seemingly revolving door among the staff in town, to constantly come into work and to not know what's going to hit you that day... I feel horribly; this board has failed for a while in controlling the narrative of this town."

Members of the GC, however, have said that they "agnostic" on the issue of how altering the TMA may or may not affect Milanoski's position. According to Cunning, the committee is only concerned with clearing up any confusion in the current version of the act.

"Our goal is to be very concise and clear on the roles of all the parties involved in the governance of the town," she said. "We're not looking to make any philosophical changes; we want less room for interpretation," to make the TMA "more well-defined."

TOWN ELECTION

Update: Two more pull papers

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"I think the role of selectmen is to make sure you listen carefully, guide with principal, and execute with some efficiency; I think I'm quite capable of doing that."
Steve Gaumer, candidate for selectman

Nomination papers for the Town Election have been available since Tuesday, Feb. 12. So far, seven Cohasset residents have pulled papers.

This week, Jeanne Astino pulled nomination papers for the school committee while Elizabeth Kirkpatrick pulled papers for the Board of Health. Kirkpatrick was appointed to fill the position vacated by former long-term member Steve Bobo late last year, knowing that Bobo's position would be up in the spring.

Astino, who has served one three-year term on the school committee and currently serves as chair, said that she is running again because she feels that one term is not enough.

"You're just hitting your speed after the second year, and the third year is kind of a slippery slope sometimes," Astino explained. "In the first year you learn the budget process and the different ways municipalities govern themselves... There's a lot of learning that goes on in that first year. The budget is very complex; after three years some people still don't understand the cost centers in the budget... I think I've done a really good job of learning that piece of my job and am looking forward to continuing another three years."

There are two open seats on the Board of Selectmen and so far, two officials have put their names in the ring for the May 11 Town Election.

Current selectman Leland Jenkins, whose first term is up this spring, pulled nomination papers on Tuesday, Feb. 12, the first day papers were available; Steve Gaumer, who currently serves on the Capital Budget and Budget Planning committees, pulled papers the same day.

Jenkins issued the following statement on why he plans to run again: "I am a candidate for Selectman running to safeguard the progress we have made and to initiate plans for future improvements that will continue the ultimate goal of financial health of the town. We can no longer afford to have our taxes increase 10 percent every three-plus years. Cohasset families want their town to be in the 'Top Ten' in education but not in real estate taxes."

Gaumer explained his reasons for running in a phone call last week. "There's been tremendous progress made in a variety of areas within town government over the past several years; they haven't always been smooth or without controversy. The result, however, is a government that is beginning to run more efficiently and learning quickly what the voters want from it. I think the role of selectmen is to make sure you listen carefully, guide with principal, and execute with some efficiency; I think I'm quite capable of doing that."

Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre reported that along with Jenkins and Gaumer, papers were pulled for seats on the Housing Authority, Board of Assessors, and Library Trustees.

James Sheerin has pulled papers to fill an unexpired term on the Housing Authority. Elsa Miller will run for reelection to the Board of Assessors, while Teresa Polhemus pulled papers for the Library board. Both Miller and Polhemus are incumbents on their boards.

Positions Available for the Annual Town Election

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election are available at the Town Clerk's Office.

The last day to obtain nomination papers will be Thurs., March 21, 2013. The last day to submit nomination papers to the Board of Registrars for certification is Tues., April 2, 2013.

In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. Please note that you are not running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB

Warming winter's days with fresh flowers

JAN TODD

Flower arranging is a pleasant therapy that encourages exercising the fingers and hands. This activity is also full of sensual pleasure for the patients as it activates at least four of their five senses.

Cohasset's Golden Living Center for rehabilitation and nursing care is fortunate to have several volunteers who donate their time in addition to supplying home baked goods, encouraging bird life by filling the garden's feeders, or by providing the much petted dog, "Cooper," to interact with the patients. These are happy moments. Yet, both patients and staff have said that the one activity no one wants to miss is the day when the Community Garden Club of Cohasset arrives for its monthly craft project with lots of fresh flowers. On that day, all who wish to engage with the activity walk alone or with a walker or are pushed in a wheelchair to the large room where the volunteers from CGCC are waiting. This month the craft of the day was all about Valentines.

Dolores is the current leader of this activity. Both the number of club volunteers and patients differs from time to time, but often there are around 10 CGCC members. The Center's Activity Director said that the number of patients can fluctuate from 15 to 30 depending upon the availability of the patients as well as the abilities of those in the facility at that time. In many instances, the patients require one-on-one attention and are given that by the volunteers. Last week CGCC arrived about a half an hour before the start of the session. The club members carried in boxes of small containers to hold the individual arrangements to be made, buckets of fresh flowers, plus scissors, secateurs, oasis, and all that would be needed for the floral arrangements.

Dolores gave limited guidance to the volunteers. Several of them have been volunteering at Golden Living Center for many years. They removed leaves from the flowers, gave fresh cuts to individual flowers, spread newspapers on top of the many small tables and prepared waste bags.

When the residents arrived and were seated, each was given a 4-inch clay pot that Dolores had sprayed silver earlier in the week. Each person was given fresh flowers: Sweet smelling red and pink carnations, a bunch of white baby's breath, and hot pink mums. Of course at this time of the year, Dolores is forced to rely on what is available on the flower market. Thus, this is an expensive time of year whereas, when Cohasset's gardens are heavy with flowers, it is often possible to share those with the residents of Golden Living. Even in February, one of the most dependable of volunteers, Jeanne, cut pails of fresh green boxwood from her winter garden for use that day and also had spent time forming a small red bow for each arrangement. The final element was a pink valentine heart on a stick.

Patients said that working with the flowers made them feel "Awesome!" "It's fun! It makes me feel young," said another. The Activities Director, Cindy, and her assistant, Ann, reiterated some of those same feelings. "It removes the winter grays and lifts their spirits," said Director Cindy. Also mentioned was that some people have difficulty with small motor skills. The benefits of sensory learning have been studied closely and have shown that hands on crafts and activities create benefits to patients. Flower arranging is a pleasant therapy that encourages exercising the fingers and hands. This activity is also full of sensual pleasure for the patients as it activates at least four of their five senses. They enjoy the colors. They are touching new life of varied textures. Also the residents enjoy the social contact with people from the town, hearing local chat and laughter. They like the fragrance of flowers and plant material and often want to place the arrangement in a place where they can see it and smell it many times each day. Having the arrangement in their rooms means that it reminds them of a pleasant day and encourages a smile or two.

Certainly, there were smiles all around as each patient carried away a bright, cheery, red and pink floral arrangement with a valentine heart reading "Be My Valentine." Everyone who shared in the project, not only the patients, but Community Garden Club of Cohasset's volunteers and staff of Golden Living Center, seemed to feel in their own hearts that each had received a gift.

Jan Todd is a member of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset.

Community Garden Club to meet Tuesday

Members of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset can start planning for spring if they attend next Tuesday's meeting at the Second Congregational Church at 9:30 a.m. Guest speaker will be Gail E. Anderson.

Anderson is a Master Gardener and landscape designer from Ipswich. She was a staff horticulturalist at Long Hill in Beverly for six years. At Long Hill, her roles included educator, general gardener, plant propagator and plant nomenclature researcher. In addition, she wrote informational handouts that she has recently updated and will distribute to members at Tuesday's meeting. The title of her presentation will be Right Plant, Wrong Place. Anderson will give tips for landscaping yards as spring and summer approach.

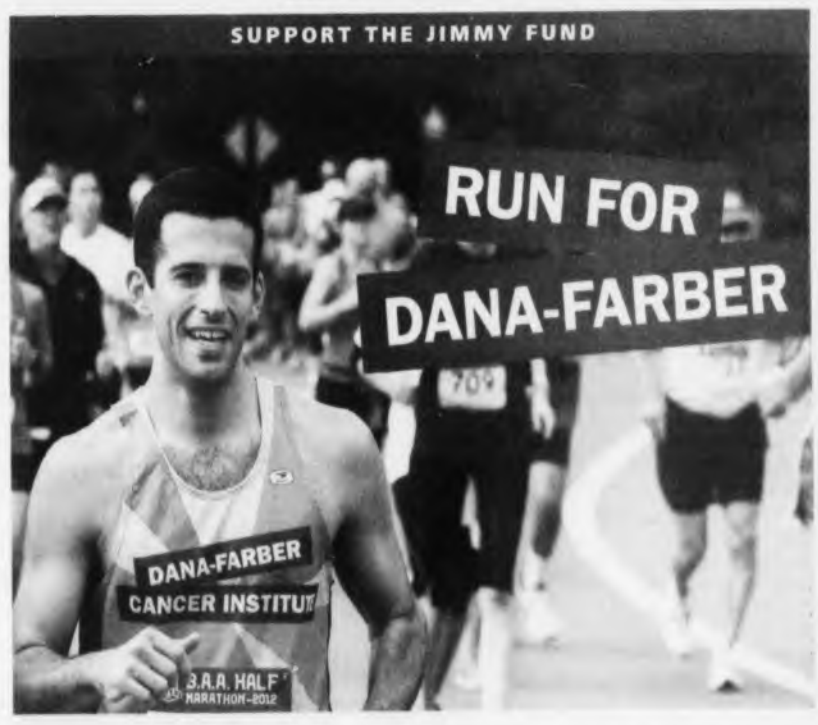
BRIEFLY

Town Hall HR update

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski is hoping that the Board of Selectmen will agree to hire special counsel to conduct a Human Resources audit of town departments. Milanoski suggested the Boston firm Koppelman and Paige, which offers a special HR service.

The matter was raised again during the Feb. 12 selectmen's meeting, and the board has asked to see proposals from other firms. The issue could be addressed again at the next selectmen's meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 26.

Milanoski said that while the selectmen have yet to vote on the issue, he believes the board understands why HR policies and procedures should be put in place.



"They want to go forward and realize the need, but want to make sure they have some additional quotes and analysis," said Milanoski. "Some thought counsel was the way to go, while others want an HR firm. But everyone realizes something needs to be done."

Refusing to quit

Skippers fight for playoff lives

The Cohasset Mariner

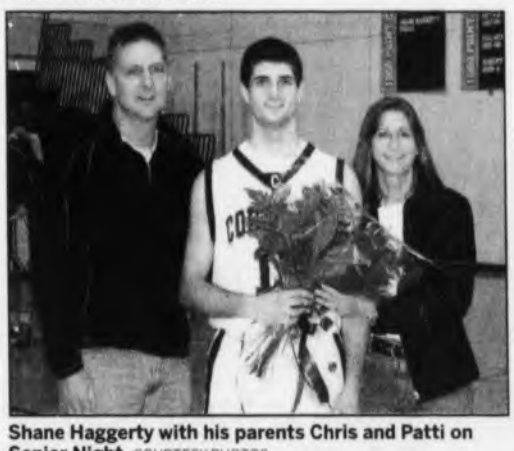
Still fighting for their hockey lives, the (9-9) Cohasset "Skippers" refused to give up the ghost beating the No. 3 ranked (13-4-2) Silver Lake "Lakers" 6-1 on Saturday night at the Connell Memorial Rink in Weymouth, giving the team two precious points in the chase for an MIAA Tournament invitation.

Cohasset, who recently won the 2013 South Shore League Sportsmanship Award, opened it up first with a goal scored by junior assisant captain Colin Whelan, assisted by juniors Terence Doonan and Tommy Powers.

Not to be denied, the Lakers came back two minutes later when senior Shane Flaherty blasted a slapshot by Cohasset's junior goal tender Brandon Winn, knotting the score at the end of the first period at 1-1.

During the break, Cohasset had time to re-focus and managed to grind out two more goals. The first scored by Doonan assisted by linemate, junior Chris Cohen and Adam Benson; the second scored by senior Brendon Queenan assisted by Benson once again.

"The goal by Doonan was a great show of protecting the puck from the defender and sliding it far side on the Laker's goalie. Alex Crone, (Laker's goalie) was a tough kid to score on tonight," remarked Cohasset coach Bob Walsh. "I don't know what the shot count totalled but we peppered the kid all night.



"The Laker's are well coached by Brandon Hall. He gets a lot out of his guys and they're tough to play

Cohasset routs Nauset, readies for Tourney

The Skippers pulled off a great win on Senior Night which recognized Captains Christian Davis and Shane Haggerty.

The Cohasset Mariner

Last Friday night the Cohasset boys basketball team defeated Nauset 65-22.

The Skippers pulled off a great win on Senior Night which recognized Captains Christian Davis and Shane Haggerty.

By the end of the first period, Cohasset was up 15-4 with key baskets from Shane Haggerty and Henry Brown. Cohasset's strong defense kept Nauset from scoring for a majority of the game.

The scoring really took off after the half.

Cohasset took a 30-10 lead into halftime, keyed by buckets from Laugelle and Joe Buckley

Rocco Laugelle added 6 points and Joe Buckley contributed 4 points in the second period to continue the lead.

By the end of the game Cohasset had over a 40 point lead.

Haggerty led all scorers with 14 points, Laugelle added 12 points, and Chris Haggerty and Henry Brown each scored 8 points.

For Cohasset, the game was an exemption game against a Division 2 team to get the Skippers a little extra competition.

Cohasset finished the regular season with an impressive 17-4 record and a No. 4 seed in the upcoming MIAA Divison 4 South Sectional Tournament.

That should guarantee at least one home game in the tourney.

Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero likes what he's seen from his team this season.

"I never have low expectations," Ruggiero said. "But after losing the three seniors we lost, I have been pleasantly pleased. I suspect we may have overachieved a bit. I have faith in the guys. They have a great work ethic. They're hard working kids."

Ruggiero said the 17-4 record was the second best in his five years at the school.

This year's team was led by senior captain Shane Haggerty, who averaged 22 points per game.

Tourney bound

Cohasset girls win way into MIAA Tournament

The Cohasset Girls Varsity basketball defeated East Bridgewater 42-37 in a pivotal game for Cohasset, Friday night

The Lady Skippers came to East Bridgewater with a 9-10 record, knowing a win here will give them an unexpected cede in the MIAA tournament.

Freshman, Megan Rosano sparked the offense with 14 points and freshman, Kerry Dunn was clutch in the fourth quarter scoring 8 of her 9 points.

This young Cohasset team played with a lot of heart and held E.B. to just 19 points in first half.

Cohasset ranks in the top 3 in the South Shore League for their defense and this game was no different.

It was all about the press and turnovers in this barnburner.

Alexa Bleicken was huge on the boards and contributed 6 key points.

The girls won their last five games to qualify for the tournament after a 5-10 start.

WRESTLING

Good show

Seven grapplers qualify for States

By William Wassersug
The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset wrestling team had a record-tying season as it notched 18 wins in the regular season.

The success continued into the MIAA Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament with seven wrestlers placing in the top four to qualify for the MIAA Div. 3 State Championship Tournament.

Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney predicted how some of his wrestlers might fare a few weeks back, and his predictions were pretty solid, especially in the lower weight classes, which favored Cohasset's young and talented wrestlers.

Cohasset's qualifiers were freshman Drew Skolnick with a fourth-place at 106, junior Harry Helbock with a fourth-place finish at 113.

Helbock won four matches over the weekend, including two pins. Both of his losses were to Pembroke's Stephen Vercollone.

Senior Greg Berube was fourth at 120, while freshman Sean Mavilia and senior Mike Livingstone were Cohasset's top finishers with Mavilia second at 126 and Livingstone second at 195.

Sophomore Matt Froio had a big tournament, finishing third at 170.

In 132 pound action, Joe Sestito notched a fourth-place finish.

At the Division 3 State Tournament, Tuesday and Wednesday at Wakefield High School, Livingstone turned in Cohasset's top performance with a fifth-place finish, winning three matches and losing two to qualify as an alternate for the All-State Tournament at Salem High School today and tomorrow.

The All-State Tournament was pushed forward to avoid a potential storm coming in over the weekend.

Mavilia notched an eighth-place finish, with a 2-3 record in the tournament.

Helbock, Sestito and Froio all won matches at States, each finishing 1-2.

Skolnick and Berube were both 0-2.

Curran scores big game-winner

Former Cohasset star Vin Curran, a senior midfielder at Lynchburg College, and son of former Cohasset coach Stew Curran was an instrumental part in the Hornets 13-12 upset over two-time defending national champion and No. 1-ranked Salisbury University. Curran handled the majority of the faceoffs for the first time in his career, and won 60% of them against last year's first team All-American faceoff man. In addition he scooped up four groundballs. He also scored two goals, with the second one coming with 15 seconds remaining which proved to be the game-winner as Lynchburg caused a turnover to prevent a potential game-tying goal. The victory marked the first for Lynchburg over Salisbury since 2003.

His big game helped him become an Old Dominion Athletic Conference Player of the Week.

Andrew was one of the 21 BC High scholar-athletes who signed letters of intent on National Signing Day, committing to compete in college-level lacrosse, soccer, football or baseball at some of the nation's top universities and colleges.

All the athletes were warmly applauded by faculty, coaches, parents, fellow students and the press at this memorable occasion at BC High.

Great careers

Cohasset Swimmers Hope Kissick and Clarke Indek competed MIAA Division 2 State meets this past weekend.

Hope had a tremendous day at the MIAA Division 2 State meet at Springfield College on Saturday. She took 5th in the 100m breaststroke and finished 13th in 50m freestyle. Hope completed a tremendous swimming career at CHS in which she has qualified for states all four years and was a state champion in the 100m breaststroke as a sophomore.

Clarke, a junior, had a great day on Sunday at the MIAA Division 2 State Meet with two top ten finishes. Clarke took ninth in the 200m Freestyle and finished sixth in the 100m Backstroke. He took one second off his backstroke time from last year's State meet.

BASKETBALL

"We don't set up that many plays for him," Ruggiero said. "But he's great on the fast break. He gets good shots. That leaves other guys able to do some scoring."

Fellow senior captain Christian Davis has also had a big year.

"Christian has had a fabulous year," Ruggiero said. "He's done a great job leading as a point guard. He's first in assists on the team. He has also done a great job with his turnover to assist ratio."

Davis has also done a great job picking up the scoring when it's needed.

"Christian had 20 against Rockland, 20 against East Bridgewater and 19 against SE Regional."

Joe Buckley is a 6-2 center who has shown great technique and hard work in holding bigger opponents at bay under the rim.

"Joe does a great job keeping the big kids under control," Ruggiero said. "He averages 6 ppg and leads the team in rebounds."

Buckley's emergence has taken much of the impact off the loss of rebounding monster Robbie Mahoney, one of the team's graduates.

Rocco Laugelle is another player who has considerably cut back on mistakes this season.

• Rocco has also cut down his turnover to assist ratio.

"Rocco is second on the team is assists and first in steals," Ruggiero said. "He averages 7 points per game and he's shooting 61 percent from the free throw line."

Patrick Federle and Henry Brown have been invaluable.

"Patrick and Henry share the 4 spot," Ruggiero said. "Together they're scoring 12 ppg, and spelling each other. Having Henry come off the bench at the four or five minute mark has given us some latitude and extra energy."

Brown is a junior, while Federle is a sophomore.

Chris Haggerty, a 6-1 junior has provided a few spot starts while adding 6 ppg. He's also knocking down 90 percent of his free throws.

Sophomore Jack Chamberlain has provided some lift backing up Buckley, and Alex Norton, a 6-2 freshman has been improving constantly.

"Alex is still learning to play basketball," Ruggiero said. "He's 6-2 and 195 pounds. He can dunk. He's a big boy."

Ruggiero said he's not surprised by the success.

"I'm pleasantly pleased, but not shocked," he reiterated. "I think we overachieved with our record, but not with our attitude or work ethic."

As for the playoffs, Ruggiero is ready.

"The boys are excited," he said. "It's been a fun year. I'm hoping it continues in the tournament as long as it an. It won't be pleasant not going to practice. We love practice."

Tuesday and Wednesday, the team had some fun with a Youth Basketball clinic for grades 3-6.

"The varsity had some fun with the kids," Ruggiero said. "It's great to see. For the younger kids, Shane Haggerty is as big as LeBron. It's all good."

The tournament seedings come out today, and games should start Tuesday or Wednesday.

against, especially on the power play, they really move the puck well."

With Cohasset holding a two goal lead going into the third, the Skipper's Colin Whelan scored his second of the night assisted by sophomore Jeff Powers. Less than two minutes later, Adam Benson tallied his first of the night assisted by junior captain, defenseman Chris Lund. The final goal for Cohasset was scored, once again by Terence Doonan assisted by Adam Benson.

The Skippers lost a tough 3-2 game against Abington on Monday, giving the team two chances for two points with games against South Shore Vo Tech (yesterday, result was unavailable at press time) and today at 1:10 p.m. against a Scituate squad that has been playing very well the past few weeks.

The game is at the Bog in Kingston.

BUSINESS NOTES

Lapels Dry Cleaning opens in Cohasset

Lapels Dry Cleaning, an environmentally friendly dry cleaning company headquartered in Hanover, recently opened a new store at 827 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Route 3A, Cohasset.

The new Lapels Dry Cleaning store is owned and operated by South Shore resident William Ryan. Store hours are Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, noon to 3 p.m.

"We are delighted to bring Lapels' standard of high quality dry cleaning and superior customer service to our friends, neighbors and fellow South Shore residents," said Ryan.

Lapels has pioneered its eco-friendly dry cleaning experience for the past 10 years. Their environmentally friendly cleaning process has no odor and is gentler on clothes, thus lengthening the life of clothes.

In addition to the environmental benefits, Lapels Dry Cleaning offers a number of services that make a trip to the dry cleaners not only convenient but fairly close to luxurious. That includes a carhop where customers can call ahead and have their dry cleaning brought to their automobile door and an Express Valet Service. The store will also feature free home delivery to residents of Scituate and Cohasset.

"There were so many reasons why I chose to purchase a Lapels franchise. The environmental piece was certainly up there on our list, but it was an overall commitment to a high quality customer experience that truly sold me," said Ryan. "We're going to make Lapels 'the neighborhood dry cleaner on the South Shore."

Prior to opening the Lapels stores, Ryan worked as a sales and marketing executive for several Fortune 100 companies. He also serves on the Eastern Region Board of Directors for the American Red Cross Blood Services Division.

"I started researching business opportunities about 15 years ago and a lot of thought went into making the decision to buy a Lapels franchise," said Ryan. "Between Lapels products and service and this location, this was the right decision and well worth the wait."

Store hours are Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, noon to 3 p.m.

Married, Ryan and his wife Pam live on the South Shore with their two children.

Lapels offers its customers Automatic Rewards earning them credit toward free dry cleaning for every dollar they spend, Loyalty Programs, a VIP Program which eliminates the need to wait in line and the use of a 24 Hour Drop Off Service. Same day service is also available with pick-up after 5 p.m.

For more information on the Lapels Dry Cleaning stores, visit www.mylapels.com or call the Cohasset store at 781-383-1300.

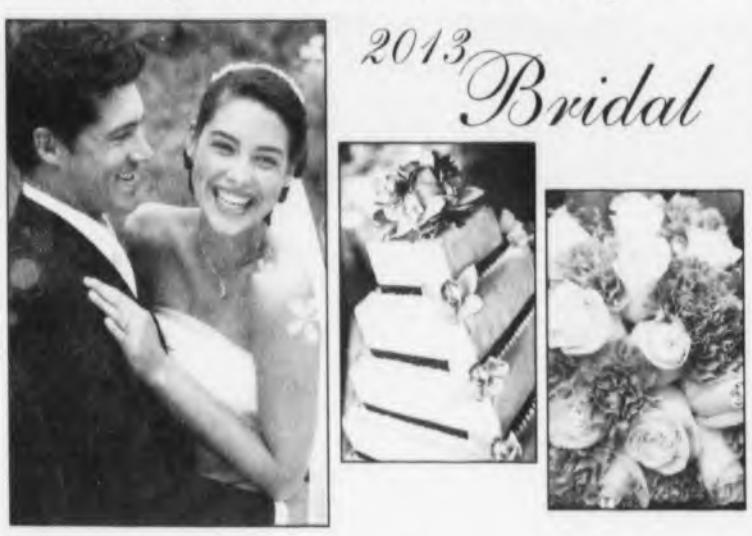
Putting in a pool? Building an addition? Reroofing? Thinking about a wood or pellet stove? Having a new boiler installed? Renting a tent for your daughter's backyard wedding? Building a new home? Remodeling a kitchen or bath? Need signs for your business?

Whether you are planning a repair or renovation to your home or planning to build a new home, the Building Department will be one of your first stops in the permitting process. Building Department staff is available to consult with you and your engineer, architect and contractor even before your project begins!



Reviewing plans to ensure compliance with Cohasset Zoning Bylaws and with the State Building Code is an important first step in any project that ultimately results in cost and time savings for you. Early interaction with the Building Department leads you and your project in the right direction from the beginning planning stages. If the Building Department identifies something that makes your project impossible from a code, design or bylaw standpoint, alternative suggestions will be offered to help you and your project team work towards a solution.

After your Building Permit application is officially submitted to the Building Department, other appropriate departments will have the opportunity for review your plans for compliance with their regulations. Depending on the nature of your project, this could include review by the Board of Health, Conservation Commission and Fire Department.

Once your project is permitted, Building Department Inspectors will be onsite to inspect your project at multiple, prescribed check points from beginning to end to confirm that work is being done to Code and, as approved in your building permit.

Our goal is to help you achieve your goal ... a repair, renovation or new construction that meets Code, zoning and, your expectations ...

Snow camp!

School vacation week was in full force, and Cohasset kids whose parents had to work all week had a fun place to play during the day. The Recreation Department hosted a day camp for kids aged five to 12 at the Deer Hill School that they liked to call "REC-CATION."

GIMME SHELTER

Paris is as pretty as her name

PAULA J FATERSIK

Paris is almost two years old, very petite and has a fluffy beige and brown coat. COURTESY PHOTO

In a forever home, Paris will have the chance to relax, cuddle, play, entertain her owners, and become a friendly and loving family member.

Even with two stormy and snowy weekends, we are still seeing loving pets moving from our shelter to forever homes! Thank you to those who are opening their homes to our deserving kittens and cats!

This week, we are featuring Paris, who survived Nemo when she was taken in and then brought to the shelter where she is waiting for a family who will love her and treat her like the precious little girl she is. This lucky kitty is now being well cared for and kept warm and cozy here at Hull Seaside, but not for long we are thinking!

Paris is almost two years old, very petite and has a fluffy beige and brown coat. Being a Maine Coon mix, she has such a pretty face, expressive green eyes and a gentle nature. Coming in from the cold has been a wonderful thing, but adjusting to a group of roommates and being the new kitty on the block is not very comfortable for Paris. Her peaceful side is finding this situation a bit of a challenge, so she is showing a shy and timid side. However, it is very clear that she loves affection and attention. When she is chosen, it will be a beautiful new life for her.

When coming out to play, Paris is very anxious to get into feline frolicking, but is keeping an eye out for others who would like to be friendly with her. This will pass, and she will be more and more comfortable as the days pass, but wouldn't it be so much better for her to have a home to call her own? It sure would be. This pretty young cat is a treasure just waiting to be found. In a forever home, she will have the chance to relax, cuddle, play, entertain her owners, and become a friendly and loving family member.

If you are thinking of adding a new face to your family photograph, come and visit with Paris. She is going to be having her spay procedure shortly, and what a wonderful thing it would be to recuperate and then move into the loving arms of a new family. Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Paris and other available feline friends. You are welcome to visit the cats at Open Hours on Mondays from 6:30-7:30 p.m. and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. at 50 L St. in Hull. Our phone number is 781-925-3121. You can visit out website, www.hsar.org, to view other available pets in our shelter who are featured on Petfinder.com.

In an effort to help control the population of homeless cats, we continue to have discounted feline spay and neuter services here at the shelter. If you or family members have a kitten or cat who is ready for these procedures, please call the shelter at 781-925-3121 for more information on dates and times.
